In Lassen County, August 12, George Long killed a grizzly bear weighing 1,000 pounds, and the following day, in El Dorado County, J. B. Taylor killed one weighing 1,100 pounds.

Napa County had a squirrel exterminating ordinance, and was paying a bounty of five cents for each scalp. In eleven days one individual captured 5,943 squirrels and drew down $297.15.

THE CHEROKEE IN GOLDEN MEMORY

(MAY STANISLAS CORCORAN.)

GOLDEN ECHOES FLOATING FRO the Cherokee Mine in the high Sier of Mariposa County have awakened interest in the name, and replying those queries I ask a place under t banner of The Grizzly Bear, for ma a mighty grizzly trod the mountains where t gleaming nuggets rolled. "The Cherokee" early reports is frequently referred to as t Lovely Rodgers Mine, because its discoverer w a Cherokee, a respected gentleman and for ma years Supervisor of Mariposa County.

The Cherokee Nation WAS a nation, and wh Georgians, quite naturally, would not agree such a designation but began pushing these pe ple westward, instead of fighting the impossi the leading men took their grievance to Pre dent Jackson. His answer, given April 18, 182 reads as follows:

"The claim of being an independent nation to be found in the fact that during the Revol tionary war the Cherokees were the allies Great Britain, a power claiming sovereignty the thirteen colonies, which sovereignty, by v tue of the Declaration of Independence and t subsequent treaty of 1783, became vested spectively in the thirteen original states, inclu ing North Carolina and Georgia. If they ha since been permitted to abide on their lands, was by permission, a circumstance giving right to deny the sovereignty of this State. T arms of the United States will not be employ to stay any State in the Union from the exerci of the legitimate powers belonging to her in h sovereign capacity."

Westward they were pushed until, in a d ference between the two factions of themselv they divided, the Ross section going to Okl homa, where today they are both prominent a wealthy, and the Ridge section to Californ The great outstanding figure among them, Jo Rollins Ridge, "Yellow Bird" of the Cherokee orator, writer, poet, newspaper editor, active the founding of the University of California, w a friend of the discoverer of the high Sier mine, Lovely Rodgers.

Ridge was, by California's late poet laureat Ina Coolbrith, pronounced "our state's greate poet,"

"And thus the proudest boast shall be
Of young ambition crowned—
The woods of Oakland shelter me,
Their leaves my brow hath bound."

His home was in Sacramento, but his t

County, on a San Francisco Bay ferryboat, seat himself beside an obese Irish woman. Inten ing to be sociable, he remarked: "Belly cold For a moment she looked at him in contemp then emphatically replied: "If ye would p your shirttail inside your pants, ye hathen blac guard, it would get warm."

"Lady Helen," advertised as the seven daughter of a seventh son and having occu powers, induced a Chico, Butte County, dan to pay her $100 for locating the lot in whi was buried gold treasure. While digging ope ations were under way the "Lady" vamoosed the caboose of a freight train. She was we tanked with gin, and when the train made sudden stop fell from the seat and broke h leg.

friends, Brant Phillips and Lovely Rodgers, came to the beautiful Mariposa, "southernmost of the rich placer counties of the Sacramento basin."

Rodgers, as many other gold seekers, traveled up the north side of the Merced River, and in 1857 located a section of particularly rich surface rock, some of the gold being coarse enough to be pounded out in a hand mortar, while that gathered from arastas yielded $100 a ton. In 1859 a steam mill was placed there.

The Lovely Rodgers is a patented claim at an elevation of 2,400 feet in a rough country with little water or timber. As with other veins in that section, its trend is east and west, dip of seventy degrees north, and width between slate walls from one and a half to two feet. Early in its existence the owner sunk a shaft that adits 400, 300 and 250. The crosscut was seventy feet, the winze eighty and the stope two hundred, which indicates that Lovely Rodgers, its Cherokee owner, was a hard worker.

The work was not of long continuance, and the mill was moved onto the neighboring Bondurant. Belief in the richness of the ore has never dimmed. The explanation is, that a Cherokee descendant of the great Sequoyah found civic duties more congenial than solitary digging. Like his friend, John Rollins Ridge, he may have felt:

"Unbroken silence save the mel-dy
That steals on silence unawares, and makes
It seem scarce more than silence still
Yet takes possession of the senses bodily."

Some other than the Cherokee may find the elevation less stilling to the slumbering spirit, and open once again its undenied treasure, as is being done with many another lonely golden memory in the high Sierra while coin is scarce upon the sea coast.

(The above, from May Stanilas Corcoran of Berkeley, came to The Grizzly Bear with this notation. "I cannot tell you how much I appreciate The Grizzly Bear. It is one of my chief treasures and delights. I am sending a brief article which I was very urgently requested to write, the requests coming not from miners but from natives."—Editor.)

poral with five soldiers was to be stationed at each mission as a guard. Four muleteers were to be provided to manage and care for the pack animals, used to distribute supplies and such goods of every sort, including presents and clothing for the Indians, as should be sent out.

It was at about this time that Father Serra received the welcome news that the Peninsula missions were about to be transferred from the Franciscans to the Dominicans. This would release all of the Franciscans in Baja California and render them available for service in Alta California, where souls were more plentiful and general conditions more propitious. This transfer was effected in 1772.

YOUTH OF '49

(BETTY L. WHITSELL.)

Ten thousand faces with despairing eyes
Are haunting me upon these red scarred hills
The crowd who sought a lovely Paradise
Found El Dorado and the gold that kills.
Gay careless youth, who went adventuring
Who closed Convention's old and dusty doors,
They found the freedom that the bar-rooms bring
And fought and lived as bloody matadors.
Ah, yes, ten thousand faces stare at me
Strong, boisterous youth who wasted life's short hour
Weird voices chant a dirge of mystery
Of rainbow dreams and restless quest for power.

DEDICATION AT SANTA MONICA.

San Francisco—The Board of Grand Officers N.S.G.W. will dedicate the million-dollar breakwater at Santa Monica, Sunday, August 5, at 2:30 p.m. Grand President Chas. A. Koenig extends an invitation to all Natives and the public generally to attend the ceremonies.

The All-American Canal, one of the features of the Boulder Canyon federal project, will soon be under construction. The largest irrigation canal in the world, it will carry Colorado River water to the half-million acres of California's rich Imperial Valley.

San Diego celebrated July 16, at the Junipero Serra Museum on Presidio Hill, the one hundred and sixty-fifth anniversary of its founding. Speakers were Albert V. Mayrhofer of San Diego Parlor No. 108 N.S.G.W. and Secretary Winifred Davidson of the San Diego Historical Society.

RE-ELECT
U. S. WEBB
ATTORNEY-GENERAL
CALIFORNIA

Strong support of legislation to restrict immigration into California, an active part in the fight for the Boulder Dam project, drafting of the Alien Land Law, court appearances to sustain the state usury law, a victory in the battle to sustain legality of the King tax bill are among the high points in the career of U. S. Webb, veteran Attorney-General of the State and candidate for re-election.

"Attorney General Webb has never lost a cause of major importance for California," it was declared by Major Frank P. Doherty, chairman of his Southern California campaign committee. "He has been vigorously progressive in his advocacy of measures for development of the resources of our State. His experience, good judgment and known integrity have earned him the right to re-election."

Grand President Greeted at Reception.

Sutter Creek—Amador County Native Sons and Daughters gathered here in force June 23 at a reception arranged by her home-Parlor, Amapola No. 80, for Grand President Gladys E. Noce. Following community singing, Miss Betty Merwin entertained with vocal solos, Miss Audrey Delucchi with piano selections, and Miss Betty Read with readings.

President Edith Murphy welcomed Mrs. Noce and expressed the delight of numerous friends occasioned by her election to the highest office in the gift of the Native Daughters. Incidentally, she introduced the Grand President's husband and son, both members of Amador No. 17 N.S.G.W. Mrs. Noce graciously responded to the tribute paid her.

Judge C. P. Vicini, on behalf of Amador N.S.G.W., presented Grand President Noce with a brief case, and on behalf of Amapola N.D.G.W., Charter President Virginia Brown presented her with a large doll made of sixty-two beautiful handkerchiefs. Other speakers of the evening were Past Grand Ella Caminetti and Supervising Deputy Emma Wright of the Native Daughters, and Past Grand Clarence E. Jarvis, Walton E. Holmes, Albert W. Katzenstein and Edward E. Reese of the Native Sons. The three last named called attention to the Admission Day celebration to be held in Sacramento, and urged the Amador County Parlors to participate therein. The gathering concluded with refreshments.

Anniversary Observed.

San Rafael—Marinita No. 198 celebrated its twenty-second institution anniversary June 25. Honored guests included Past Grand Emma G. Foley, "mother" of the Parlor, Supervising Deputy Delphine Todt, Deputy Myrtle Diviti and Charter Members Anne Spinney, Lillian Whitmore, Rita O'Connor, Cora Noonan, Myra Murphy, Anne Andrade, May Filippini and Rose Redmond. Irene Griffin, chairman of the occasion, presided.

Officers of Marinita and Mount Tamalpais No. 64 N.S.G.W. were installed July 16 by Supervising Deputy Ethel Begley and District Deputy Charles Soldavini Jr., Tillie Della Bruna and Thomas Cheatham becoming the respective presidents. Junior Past President Dora Cooley was presented with an emblematic ring, and Senior Past President D. J. Locati was presented with an emblematic watch. For bringing in the most members during a membership campaign conducted by Mount Tamalpais, Manuel Soares was given a wrist watch. Refreshments were served, and dancing concluded the happy occasion. Chairmen for the joint function were Alice Ogburn of Marinita and Nick Roselli of Mount Tamalpais.

Birthdays Party.

Hollister—Copa de Oro No. 105 staged a "patriotic party," with hall and refreshment-table decorations in commemoration of Independence Day. Appropriate awards for successfully solving contests pertaining to the American Flag were received by Myrtle Palmtag, Mary Grunnagle and Elma Chandler. Past Grand Bertha A. Briggs read James Whitcomb Riley's "Old Glory." Arrangements were in charge of Hilda A. Thompson, Hazel Bengard and Dee R. Briggs. The social festivities terminated with a watermelon feed.

July 12, birthdays of members born in April, May, June and July were fittingly observed. At attractive refreshment tables were four huge birthday cakes, each lighted with the number of candles to represent the members whose natal days occur in that particular month. The April cake, decorated entirely in white representative of Easter, had eight candles; that for May, surmounted by a gay maypole, five candles; that for June, displaying a happy bride and groom, four candles; that for July, bright with American Flags and a base of scarlet geraniums, twelve candles. Violet Naderman drew the lucky birthday number and Myrtle Palmtag won the attendance drawing. Bridge and whist were played. The Parlor adjourned for the usual summer recess, to last until September 13.

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER

THERE IS NOTHING QUITE SO GOOD for midsummer morale as a new evening gown. There is something defiant and successful about getting into a fresh costume after the heat of the day and greeting the evening breeze, if any, with a spruced-up appearance. There are numbers of novelty fabrics and designs to be found in the shops, in models that are pretty enough to step out and simple enough to be quite appropriate for a quiet evening at home.

Some are made of fine seersucker, with daring cut-out backs and trained skirts. Embroidered muslin is used for another type, in pure white, with a trained skirt and a conventional "V" necked evening bodice, or a bertha neck over a shorter skirt, or some such simple effect.

Organza, printed with a shadow brocade all-over design, striped with satin, edged with brilliant silk fringe, or detailed with flounces, tucks or rickrack braid, forms another large class of sheer, practical evening clothes that won't break the pocketbook.

Little wraps to wear with summer evening gowns are especially amusing this year. Those shaggy capelets of cellophane fringe are cool and charming, and so inexpensive. The black ones are very worldly. Try one over your white chalk crepe frock, and wear black sandals and black gloves to back it up. A few near-diamonds will help out the ensemble very much.

Silver kid slippers and a white cellophane cape are exotic accessories for the black evening frock. These capes, in chartreuse, deep plum or a medium blue, are worn over white or contrasting smoky pastel evening gowns.

For the simple dinner gown or the hostess gown, any soft model of becoming color will fill the bill. Flowered stuffs are effective.

A thin, flat crepe outfit is trimmed with much pleated tulle and has, perhaps, a garland at the shoulder, and the skirt flounce of bright field flowers.

Thin satin cut very simply with a very deep decollete, dark chiffon velvet and dotted net over a light slip are some of the new materials used. They look stunning for their own part, and are perfect foils for other women's frocks of light, airy hue.

Cotton dresses and suits look prettier and more sophisticated this summer than ever before. Perfectly good models come for the price of a theater ticket, and will tub and tub and still stay shapely. Dimity, linen (both thin and thick), gingham, printed voile, seersucker and shirting materials are all to be had in trig tailored outfits. Dotted swiss and embroidered muslin come in models that are quite festive enough to go to tea or afternoon bridge.

One should choose fabrics that will not crush shabbily, in colors that can take road dust. Knitted yarns of any material are swell. Neutral blends of clear shades, such as striped black and white, blue and white, or brown and white, are successful color schemes.

Polo shirts made of acetate silk are cool to wear with jackets and skirts, and a great many can be tucked into one's luggage at a small price and little space. As a stopover gown for the odd evening, eyelet batiste will make a hit. It packs well and it is cool and festive.

Color is the big idea in beach fashions this season. Christmas-tree colors are the thing this year, and the brighter the better. A deep golden yellow is at the head of the parade for beach clothes. It is seen in swim suits, in play clothes, in beach wraps and in accessories. One reason is that it is the perfect foundation for the mexican color scheme, which is one of the few trends that have held over from the southern resort season. Another may be that yellow is the sunshine color, and the sun is finding more worshipers than ever this year.

Tie-silk shirtwaist dresses in heavier brocades will be worn again this winter, and silk alpaca will hold its own throughout the next season for tailored frocks. Woolens with a glint of gold thread woven into the fabric will fill the bill for cocktail dresses and Sunday-night frocks. Two-piece sports frocks in wool jerseys and angora tweeds are distinctly in the fall fashion picture, often with blouse and skirt buttoning up the back.

The back-button cardigan and slip-over sweater also will be seen on many college campuses this fall. They will be worn with straight or wrap-around tweed skirts, often with kick pleats at the side.

Another standby of other days that will be seen extensively this fall is the same blue serge that used to fashion our sailor suits for school. It will be shown in tailored shirtmaker dresses, with flowered challis, another gay nineties fabric, used as trimming.

Green is predicted as the newest and most fashionable color for fall. Greens in olive and bluish shades, it is said, will predominate. If it is to be green, it is a favorable omen.

The big brim and the beret had a merger. The result is the big beret, with as regal a sweep as the cartwheels of summer, yet retaining its identity as, first, last and always, a beret. It is already being shown for current wear, and it is slated as the leader of the fall hat brigade. It comes in velvet or felt or fabric, and swoops forward to shade the eyes.

One of the most spectacular of the big bere seen recently is of black felt, with stitching su gesting a crown tilting forward over the eye It is turned up in the back, and a bright jewele pin is jabbed in casually at the front or side.

A black net beret, shading the eyes with mysterious and dashing sweep, makes the mo effective possible finishing touch for the bla net dinner dress, so popular this season. Or dresses up the afternoon print, especially matching black net gloves with a frill at th wrist are worn to complete the picture, and is also worn with the lace jacket frock for tow or resort wear.

For the informal dinner and dance, navy blu lace with a ruffled collar and jabot is most a tractive.

Escondido, San Diego County, will have it annual Grape Day Festival, September 10.

In Memoriam

ANNA COLLINS.

To Mr. C. L. Collins and Family. The following memorial resolution was adopted by Bonita Parlor No. 10 Native Daughters of the Golden West:

The Angel of Death has entered the portals of Bonita Parlor No. 10 and taken from our midst our Sister Anna Collins. She was a loyal Native Daughter and loved California with a true and tender love. Our Order has lost a loved and faithful member. Therefore, be it

Resolved, That our charter be draped in mourning; that a copy of these resolutions be sent to her bereaved family, and that they be sent to The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication.

May the California winds blow lightly,
May the California sun shine brightly,
May the California rain fall softly,
While sleeps our Sister dear.

Respectfully submitted in P.D.F.A.,

AUGUSTA SHARKEY,
IDA THOMPSON,
DORA WILSON,
Committee.

Redwood City, June 20, 1934.

GERTRUDE MALLIN LOSACCO.

There is a vacant chair in our lodgeroom which brings memories of a sweet smile and the loving personality of Gertrude Mallin Losacco, who answered the final summons June 1934.

We have suffered the loss of a loyal member whose virtues we will hold in enduring remembrance, and Gabrielle Parlor No. 139 N.D.G.W. expresses its deep sense of the severe loss it experiences in her perpetual separation from the Parlor and its activities. We extend our sincere condolence to those near and dear to her. Therefore, be it

Resolved, That a copy be spread upon the minutes, and a copy be sent to The Grizzly Bear for publication.

Respectfully submitted,

HELEN M. SPRUNG.

Resolved, That we pay a loving tribute to her of sweet remembrance and memory, sad and true; and be it further resolved, that these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family offering heartfelt sympathy on their loss, and a copy be sent to The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication, and also that a copy be spread upon the minutes of the Parlor.

Respectfully submitted in P.D.F.A.,

MAY R. BARRY.

To the General Association of Past Presidents N.D.G.W.—We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions of respect to the memory of our departed sister, Permanent Member May R. Barry, offer this message of regret and condolence:

Once again we bow to the will of Almighty God, who has wished to call His own from amongst our membership, and has taken to His heavenly home our beloved sister.

God in His wisdom has recalled
The boon His love has given,
And though the body slumbers here,
The soul is safe in Heaven

Therefore, be it Resolved, That we extend the heartfelt sympathy of the General Association of Past Presidents N.D.G.W. to her bereaved family, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, and another to The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication.

LOS ANGELES CITY AND COUNTY

BLAMING THE UNFORTUNATE SITUation which developed in San Francisco last month to extremists, General Hugh S. Johnson, National Recovery Administrator, declared in the course of an address at the Hollywood Bowl, July 20, "In my opinion, it was the most critical moment in recent history. . . . There were extremists on both sides"—those of labor who had declared the general strike, and those of an opposing group who were clamoring for martial law.

The general strike, said the General, "is minority rule. It is dictatorship. It is the end of democracy. It is tyranny, and not to be tolerated for one moment by this free people. . . . Now, to the man in the street, martial law is just a couple of words, but let me say to you that it is the very last weapon that civilization should ever tolerate. . . . It wipes government out of existence with a word and substitutes the absolute dictatorship of a single man."

"There is nothing new in this situation," continued General Johnson, "where foreign and subversive elements attempt to seize control of labor organizations and to oust regular and duly constituted authority. This is the sixth great strike situation of national or interstate threat and proportions with which I have had to deal and which have been settled or averted. In nearly all of them we have encountered precisely the same thing that we encountered here.

"I think it is about time for an 'America First' campaign on this subject. I do not know the accuracy of the statement and I have no means to check it, but it has been said to me with at least the circumstances of verity that if the jobs of aliens and non-declarants were given to citizens and the former were deported the unemployment and destitute problems in the United States would be reduced by at least one-third.

"That sounds like a pretty harsh remedy—but so is the distress of our own people harsh. I do not suggest such a move, but I do suggest that any alien who pretends to lead an economic group of our people in the direction of strife and bloodshed has no place here and should no more be tolerated than an armed enemy under a foreign flag.

"What our people have got to understand is that there is a far more effective weapon against their rights than guns or gas—and that is economic strangulation. If a foreigner walked down our streets with a machine gun to enforce some anti-social demand we should know exactly what to do with him. But if he comes enforcing influences such as you have just repudiated on the Coast, we are loath to act. Let's rid ourselves of them."

General Johnson's hint should be heeded, and California should, by lawful means, rid itself of the horde of unwanted and unassimilable aliens who infest the state. This riddling should not be longer delayed. Eliminate the aliens and the non-declarants now, and give White American citizens an opportunity to earn a livelihood.—C.M.H.

ESSAY CONTEST WINNERS.

The Southern California Competitive Festival of the Allied Arts, sponsored by the Women's Community Service Auxiliary of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, was held June 23 to July 4. The Native Daughters of the Golden West, with Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer as chairman, had charge of the California history and landmarks division. Winners of cash prizes in an essay contest conducted by that division were:

Jack E. Grubb of Annandale school, "Cabrillo the Navigator;" Earalda Marino of Thomas Starr King junior high school, "Why Thomas Starr King Was Selected to Represent California in National Statuary Hall;" Gertrude Herman of Fairfax high school, "Junipero Serra Day, August 28, 1934, Its Meaning." Room 1 of Sunland school, Andrew Rugh and Yurika Uyehara won honorable mention.

PLANS TO MARK HISTORIC ADOBE.

Officers of Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. were installed July 26 by District Deputy Burrel D. Neighbours, Michael Botello becoming president. Refreshments were served, and there were several speakers.

A social meeting is billed for August 9. The Parlor's history and landmarks committee has under way plans for marking one of Los Angeles' most historic adobe houses.

TO ENDOW HOSPITAL BED.

Officers of Californiana Parlor No. 247 N.D.G.W., with Ruth Parris as president, were installed July 10 by Deputy Mattie Labory Gara. Julie Keller added greatly to the solemnity of the occasion with a harp recital, and Marybelle Chapman sang the installation ode. Addresses were made by President Parris, Grand Trustee Nellie Cline, Supervising Deputy Gertrude Tuttle, Louise Ward Watkins and others. Gifts were presented Inez Sitton, retiring president, by the officers, the sewing circle and the folklore girls, and also to Deputy Mattie Edwards.

At a round table session preceding the installation the birthday celebrants for July and August were honored. Mrs. Leland Atherton Irish, chairman of the Hollywood Bowl concerts, gave a brief talk. Californiana's project in hand for coming regimes is the endowment of a bed by its homeless children committee in the Children's Hospital at a cost of $1,000; Mrs. Leila Tabor is chairman. The Parlor has adjourned for vacation until September 11.

BIG CROWD AT INSTALLATION.

There was an unusually large attendance, including several visitors, at the meeting of Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W., July 13, when District Deputy Daniel McSweeny, assisted by District Deputy Burrel Neighbours and Walter Baskerville installed the officers, with Superior Judge Ruben Schmidt as president. Among the many speakers were Past Grands William I. Traeger and Seth Millington, Grand Third Vice-president Eldred L. Meyer and William Dowsing. During the evening Leo V. Youngworth, for the Parlor, presented a past president emblem to Charles Straube.

The initial birthday dinner under the direction of First Vice-president Fred Staebler, July 20, was greatly enjoyed. At the meeting following, Burrel D. Neighbours, on Ramona's behalf, presented a past president emblem to Frank Adams. The Parlor has named a committee, headed by Past Grand President Herman C. Lichtenberger, to arrange for an oldtime banquet.

TRAVELER HONORED AT PARTY.

Glendale—Verdugo Parlor No. 240 N.D.G.W. had a visit July 10 from Deputy Adele Frankish, who was presented with a gift by First Vice-president Ione Gillette. Refreshments were served. President Margaret Donlan has been vacationing with her family at Monte Rio.

Prior to leaving with her husband and son for a visit to Sweden, Mrs. Vera Carlson was honored

SILVER GIFT FOR BRIDE.

Long Beach—Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. had a very interesting meeting July 5, when guests were present from Santa Ana and San Pedro. On behalf of the Parlor, President Alice Waldow presented a silver gift to Elenore Johnson-Fisher, No. 154's latest bride. The California Thimble Club entertained with card parties at the homes of Leola Temby, June 28, and Kate McFadyen, July 12. A nice sum was netted. Johanna Reed acted as chairman.

A delegation of members motored to Placentia to attend the public installation of Grace Parlor No. 242's officers at which Deputy Elenore Fisher officiated. Long Beach has well under way plans for its annual bazar, to be held in November. Daisy Hansen is the chairman.

TO INCREASE PRESTIGE AND STRENGTH.

Officers of Hollywood Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W. were installed July 16 by District Deputy Bernard Hiss, who was assisted by Deputy Al Cron and Edward J. Reilly. John M. Costello, the new president, outlined the program for his term and stated every effort would be made to increase the prestige and strength of the Parlor. Other speakers were Grand Third Vice-president Eldred L. Meyer, Leo V. Youngworth, Junior Past President Gene Murphy, Henry G. Bodkin, Thomas Cunningham, William O'Meara, Dr. Robert Eshelman and John J. Ford.

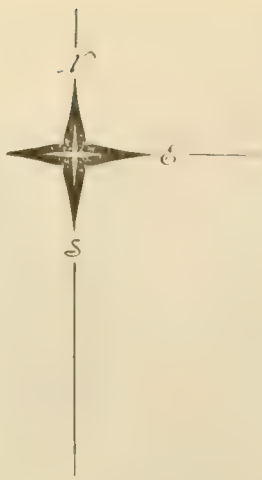
Hollywood is contacting eligibles systematically, and in honor of Gene Murphy will August 6 initiate several candidates. A dinner is on its calendar for August 20. Plans for an open meeting September 10 in recognition of Admission Day are under discussion.

DAUGHTERS SURPRISE SONS.

San Pedro—Headed by President Carrie Rogers, a delegation from Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. surprised the Native Sons of Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 at their July 6 meeting. The Daughters brought along many good things to eat, and the evening was spent in singing and dancing. To distinguish President Walter Richards and Grand Marshal William Reuter from the other Sepulvedaites they had to don paper caps. The Florencita Thimble Club meets every other Wednesday and keeps busy. July 2 the Parlor presented a lovely gift to Flora Holy, retiring deputy, as an evidence of its appreciation of her services. Several members accompanied Deputy Lillian Zirkel to Santa Ana July 23.

United States of America and California State (Bear) Flags were presented July 13 to the Sons of the Legionaires. President Walter Richards of Sepulveda and President Carrie Rogers of Rudecinda were in charge. August chairman for No. 230 is Mercy Powers, who will be assisted by Carrie Kuhlmann and Katherine Ross. Tennie Padilla has been appointed chairman for Admission Day.

UNIVERSITY PARLOR NEWS.



University Parlor No. 272 N.S.G.W. entertained many visitors from Sepulveda No. 263 and Compton No. 273 Parlors at an enthusiastic meeting July 11. District Deputy Burrel D. Neighbours, assisted by District Deputy Walter E. Richards and Grand Marshal William A. Reuter, installed the officers of University and Compton, Dr. George Logan Woods and J. Reid Young becoming the respective presidents. Inspiring talks by these officials, and District Deputies Bernard Hiss and Daniel McSweeny, were followed by refreshments and a social session.

At an officers' meeting July 18, plans were outlined to secure for University its own clubhouse. The ball team has tied for first place, due to the excellent coordination of all players and fans, and the extraordinary baserunning of "Spark Plug" De Fazio. A very enjoyable handball tournament was held at the Elks Club July 20 and some "rare" talent was discovered. Solly Smith, former Manual Arts champion athlete, won first place.—W.F.W.

OFFICERS OF CHARITY RETAINED.

The N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. Joint Homeless Children Committee re-elected July 6 the following officers: Irving Baxter, chairman; Miss Grace J. Norton, vice-chairman; Miss Flora M. Holy, treasurer; Mrs. Annie L. Adair, recording secretary; John Gower, financial secretary. A donation of $500 was forwarded to the Central Committee.

NATIVE DAUGHTER NEWS

"An Evening in the Gay '90s," was staged by the social committee. Refreshments were served.

Oakland—Aloha No. 106 and Athens No. 195 N.S.G.W. had joint installation of officers July 17. Those of Aloha were installed by Deputy Marjory Welsh, Martha Murray becoming president.

Etna—Eschscholtzia No. 112 and Troop No. 30 Boy Scouts of America sponsored a Fathers Day program. Guests included the parents of the Scouts, the husbands of the Daughters and the older fathers of this section. Mrs. B. C. Tucker, president of the Parlor, gave an address of welcome, which was followed by a program and refreshments.

Pittsburg—Stirling No. 146 has named a committee—Past Grand Amy V. McAvoy, Past Grand Estelle M. Evans and Margaret Delp—to place a suitable marker at the entrance to the old Somersville Cemetery, where many Contra Costa County Pioneers are buried.

Fresno—Officers of Fresno No. 187 were installed July 6 by Supervising Deputy Hazel Laverty, Mary Silveria becoming president. July 12 several of the Parlor's members paid a visit to Madera No. 244. Plans for a busy fall are being made by No. 187.

Antioch—Antioch No. 223's officers were installed by Deputy Lorena Krumland July 10, Wilma Lilley becoming president.

Oroville—Officers of Gold of Ophir No. 190 were installed July 2 by Deputy Laura Anderson, Dorothy Meader becoming president. A past president emblem was presented Mrs. Damon. It was decided to participate in the Admission Day celebration at Sacramento, and to discontinue meetings until September.

Saint Helena—La Junta No. 203 initiated two candidates July 17 and decided to participate, probably with a float, in the Vintage Festival parade. August 7 the Parlor will celebrate its twenty-first anniversary, and officers will be installed by Deputy Eleanor Simpkins. August 21 the losers will entertain the winners of an attendance contest; the respective captains were Mrs. Helga Werle and Miss Elise Metzner.

San Diego—Officers of San Diego No. 208 were installed July 25 by Supervising Deputy Irma A. Heilbron, assisted by Deputy Isabel Young. The officers were entertained at the home of Marie James, retiring president, at a dinner and bridge. A gift was presented Sara Miller, who is making a trip to Denver.

Santa Ana—Santa Ana No. 235's homeless children committee—Myrtle Ellis (chairman), Muriel Bray and Gladys Edwards—put on a pansy garden bridge-luncheon at the Bray home that was a complete success. A second baby has been adopted by the Parlor. July 9, Chairman Matilda Lemon of the history and landmarks committee turned in a fine sum to mark the Parlor's tree dedicated last year to the Pioneer Mothers, and the nucleus of a fund for designating the Parlor's work on the baptistry at San Juan Capistrano Mission.

San Bernardino—At public ceremonies July 11 the officers of Lugonia No. 241, with Rhoda Smith as president, were installed by Deputy Maude Van Vleet, assisted by Supervising Deputy Gertrude Tuttle and Deputy Lois Poling. Vocal selections were rendered by Lois Johnson. Following a short address by President Smith the usual presentations were made, and delicious refreshments were served by Henrietta Harris and assistants.

Placentia—Grace No. 242 celebrated its seventh institution anniversary at a family picnic in Irvine Park attended by two hundred. Tables were set under sycamore and oak trees, and dancing was enjoyed in the pavilion. June 28, Helen Anderson was hostess to members of Grace and Santa Ana No. 235 at a delightful garden party at her home honoring Grand Trustee Nellie M. Cline. A bounteous dinner was served under spreading walnut trees, and the evening was spent in a general good time.

Stockton—In the Fourth of July parade Stockton No. 256 had a float—depicting the Spirit of '76 marching steadfastly behind the Blue Eagle of '34—that won second prize. SAN FRANCISCO

"WHEN WE SEE WHAT IT MEANS and Stop It," headed this editorial in the San Francisco "Chronicle" of July 21: "Is there any danger of revolution in America? Not if San Francisco's recent experience is any guide.

"Here was a situation of unexampled tensity. Dock and marine workers were embittered by a long strike over what they regarded as serious grievances, and business and industry were chafing under the tieup of the commerce of the Pacific. Radicals seized temporary control of labor organizations away from the experienced and responsible leaders and precipitated a general strike. Troops patrolled the water front. Thousands of men, moreover, were unemployed, through no fault of their own, and justly felt that our social and economic organization, in its relation to them, had ceased to operate.

"In this atmosphere the general strike was called. Then what happened?

"Exactly the old-fashioned American thing. When John Citizen found that he had to walk and could buy no lunch, and the wife could buy no meat for dinner and no carrots or spinach for the baby, they were both individually, old-fashionedly, Americanly 'sore.'

"And when the labor men, who had mistakenly supposed that a general strike could be conducted like other strikes, discovered by experience that it has to be conducted as a revolution or not at all, they shrank from that conclusion. The city was in a state of siege for just one day. When, the next day, the siege conditions were loosened, the general strike itself promptly collapsed. Three days later it was only an instructive memory.

"Here was a situation which in a revolutionary country might have set off the explosion. Instead, in American San Francisco, it revealed us to ourselves as all Americans. A thing which we discovered could not be conducted in the American way we promptly stopped. We did not even have to 'break' it, by the victory of one side over the other. As soon as we realized what we were doing, we quit it, by common consent, and went about settling our difficulties in the American way.

"A nation in which a great strain relieves itself that way is in no danger of revolution."

LARGE CROWD AT INSTALLATION.

Officers of Dolores Parlor No. 169 N.D.G.W. were installed July 7 at public ceremonies conducted by Deputy Pearl Wedde. There was a large crowd present, and the hall was prettily decorated with greens and many baskets of beautiful flowers. Mrs. Irene F. Schonfeld, wife of Municipal Judge George W. Schonfeld (South San Francisco Parlor No. 157 N.S.G.W.), was inducted into the office of president.

Past President Alma Hall was chairman of the evening, and presented a pleasing program of vocal numbers and musical selections. John Dunne, brother of Past President Katherine Keating, rendered a surprise song, of his own wording, dedicated to President Schonfeld. On behalf of Dolores, Miss Hall, with appropriate remarks, presented to Miss Agnes McVerry, former deputy, a large boquet of lovely roses, and with becoming comments President Schonfeld gave to Miss Juanita Blanchfield, retiring junior past president, a ring, a gift of the Parlor.

Among the visitors were Past Grands Evelyn I. Carlson and May C. Boldemann, Grand Vice-president Anna Thuesen, Supervising Deputy Gertrude LaFortune, Mrs. Ann Dippel, many deputy grand presidents and Municipal Judge Schonfeld. Dancing was enjoyed following the installation and entertainment.

MORE FREEDOM SEEN IF U. S. ADOPTS NEW POLICIES.

"The United States, since its beginning, has controlled its destiny by two kinds of planning," said David Cushman Coyle, consultant, National Planning Board, recently addressing the Commonwealth Club of California. "The most important kind has been the adoption of national policies that have had far reaching effects upon our national development. . . . We shall continue to operate in the main through the adoption of general national policies, confining our detailed planning closely to those fields where detailed planning is absolutely necessary. . . .

"Above all, on the side of the new policies lie the interests of all those Americans who want to run their own business without being subject to oppression by great mergers and the lords of finance. On the opposite side lie the interests of those who live by printing and selling what they piously term 'securities.'

"Business needs stability for its prosperity, but high finance lives on instability. Finance makes its profits by operations that are contrary to the interests of business. The battle on which our destiny depends is not between labor and capital, but between business and finance.

"The little birds are twittering on all th financial pages, just as they twittered a year ag and two years ago. But the eight or ten millio unemployed are still with us and if the Goverr ment were to abandon its emergency prograr the illusion of prosperity would vanish ove night."

The drought of 1934 does not mark a perma nent change in the climate of this country, a cording to the United States Weather Bureau Present conditions are only what may naturall be expected to recur at intervals of thirty o forty years.

SACRAMENTO ATTRACTIONS

ADMISSION DAY---STATE FAIR

CALIFORNIA'S EIGHTY-FOURTH birthday will this year be celebrated with the pageantry of the California State Fair for its background. Hand in hand, the Native Sons and the Native Daughters of the Golden West and the directors of the State Fair are planning a three-day Admission Day celebration in Sacramento, on September 8, 9 and 10, which will make these days the most colorful in the history of the Order and the most brilliant in the history of the Fair.

For each of the three days there will be a round of events that should bring out the largest representation of Parlors that has ever taken part in an Admission Day celebration. Open house at Parlor headquarters and at the county exhibits at the Fair grounds will welcome visitors Saturday, September 8.

Sunday afternoon, September 9, Native Sons and Native Daughters will take over the program at the Fair grounds. Drum corps and drill teams from Parlors throughout the state will entertain the grandstands with a spectacular drill contest, which will be one of the features of the week. In addition, a parade showing the history of transportation in California from the primitive oxcart to the newest stream-line automobile will present a colorful panorama.

The climax of the great celebration will be the annual Admission Day parade Monday morning, September 10. With dozens of floats, and thousands of uniformed marchers, the parade will move through the business section of Sacramento to give the Capital City its greatest thrill since the famous Days of '49 celebration in 1922.

Committees of the Sacramento County Parlors of Native Sons and Native Daughters have been working industriously for weeks to insure that visiting members will be royally entertained during their stay. City, county and state officials are co-operating to the fullest to see that this Admission Day sets a new record for variety of festivities and entertainment.

To aid in completing early arrangements, the Sacramento committees have already sent questionnaires to all Parlors to learn their plans for the three days. Each Parlor is urged to send information as soon as possible to A. W. Katzenstein, general secretary, 411 N.S.G.W. Building, Sacramento.

Parlors planning to participate in the September 9 contests at the Fair grounds are asked to report by August 7 to the Admission Day Contest Committee, 411 N.S.G.W. Building, Sacramento, to permit the State Fair Board to allot the time required for these contests. This competition will consist of a N.S.G.W. drum corps contest, N.D.G.W. drum corps contest, N.D.G.W. drill team contest, and N.S.G.W. baseball game.

Officers of the N.S.G.W. General Committee are Walton E. Holmes (Sunset No. 26), chairman; June Longshore (Sacramento No. 3), vice-chairman; Albert W. Katzenstein (Sutter Fort No. 241), secretary, and George Burns (Sacramento No. 3), treasurer. The N.D.G.W. committee is headed by Grand Marshal Edna B. Briggs (La Bandera No. 110), chairman, and Vivian Hall (Califia No. 22), secretary.

Numerous subcommittees to handle all details are functioning, and others will be named. Chairmen of committees appointed up to press time of The Grizzly Bear include:

Executive, June Longshore; budget, Edward E. Reese; contact, Joe Berry, Bay City section, A. M. Hynes, Alameda County, Roy Cothrin, Sacramento division; reception, John J. Monteverde; transportation, Joe Berry; headquarters, J. L. Knowles; parade, Frank A. Lafferty; decorations, L. P. Ferron; floats, Roy C. Cothrin; uniforms, Ed Kuchler; literary, Irving D. AS ASSOCIATE JUSTICE SUPREME COURT
(OFFICE No. 1)

"All voters, who believe in rewarding honest, conscientious and able service on the bench will see to it that their ballots, at the August primary, are marked for Associate Justice Emmet Seawell of the State Supreme Court. Moreover, Justice Seawell is a staunch Progressive and men of his beliefs and character will be needed more than ever on the supreme bench during the next few years as a result of the enactment of the Johnson Act, relating to judicial appeals on the part of utilities. . . . In Justice Seawell, the people now have in the court one who does not believe any special favors should be granted to any private interest, large or small, in deciding constitutional questions."—Editorial Sacramento Bee.

RESPONSES MOST ENCOURAGING.

San Pedro—William A. Reuter, Grand Marshal N.S.G.W. who will direct the Admission Day parade in Sacramento September 10, has named as his chief assistant June Longshore of Sacramento Parlor No. 3. Questionnaires have been sent all Subordinate Parlors of Native Sons and Native Daughters seeking definite information as to the part, if any, they will have in the showing, and the responses received assure a big, colorful procession. Parlors which have not replied to the inquiry are urged to do so without further delay.

Kenig results. He divided the Parlors' representatives into four districts, and urged that regular meetings be held and that the wishes of the Grand President be carried out by all Parlors. June J. There was a large outpouring of members of the Order, Arrowhead Parlor No. 170 of San Bernardino being represented by a large delegation headed by Grand Trustee Donald E. VanLuven. OFFICERS PUBLICLY INSTALLED.

The breakfast of Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.S.G.W. at Griffith Park July 1 was a very delightful affair. July 14 the sewing club met at the home of May Sherwood. A very delectable luncheon was served in the garden, after which sewing was done for the homeless children. A bridal shower was given July 18 for Georgia Manany-Hart. Many members attended the laying of the cornerstone of the Griffith Park Observatory. Gertrude Allen, Grace Norton and Hazel Kennedy constitute No. 124's Admission Day committee.

Officers of the Parlor were publicly installed July 25 by Deputy Kathryn Burke, assisted by members of Verdugo Parlor No. 240, Olinda Parlor becoming the president. The officers-elect were in formal white evening attire and carried bouquets of pastel colored flowers. After the colorful ceremonies, which were largely attended, delicious refreshments were served and dancing was in order.

his service, is not entitled to Federal pay. Only the veteran injured or disabled in the service of his country is eligible to compensation." Chiselers should be eliminated from everything. They are equally as detrimental to the welfare of the nation as are the political racketeers.

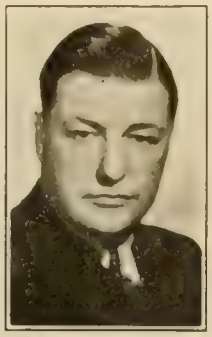
More power to the Catholic Church, which started and is forcefully carrying on a movement to knock indecency out of motion pictures. The producers have expressed a willingness to clean up screens. The Church should not be satisfied with that, however; it should demand that the motion-picture industry rid itself of the morally unfit—so-called artists, directors and officials—within its fold.

Otherwise, when the protest-storm subsides, the movies will again, for the sake of the box-office, feature sex appeal, crime, etc., rather than talent. They will, as Rev. Russell M. Sullivan remarked in Boston: "Use . . . to teach the little ones the 'ennobling romance' of kept women, and . . . to show them the 'uplifting ways' of fallen women, and . . . to teach the 'alluring attractiveness of partial nakedness." They "will use . . . to glorify the 'admirable courage' of murderous gangsters, and . . . to teach the 'gentlemanly ways' of the rake, and hold . . . up as an example of the worldly wise, sophisticated vulgarian who climbed the ladder of success 'wrong by wrong'."

The total debt of government agencies in this nation—national, state and local—has now reached approximately $45,000,000,000. How and when will it be liquidated?

John W. Davis, in a Virginia defense of the "old order," warned against the death of representative democracy "by the slow strangulation of an engirdling bureaucracy." The right of private property and the sanctity of contracts, he said, "are the twin pillars of the capitalistic system; they stand or fall together. American life, as Americans have known it hitherto, has proceeded upon these principles." The "old order" was weighed in the balance and found wanting, hence the "new order."

Hats off to General Hugh Johnson, administrator of the Federal N.R.A.! To him, and his forceful ways, belongs THE credit for clearing up a bad situation in San Francisco. A condition existed there that, but for his timely arrival, could easily have developed into a national calamity.



The Order of Native Sons of the Golden West should, for the good of California and in the interest of its citizens, wage a vigorous and unceasing campaign to have aliens removed from the public payrolls. The state law will back up such a movement, and it will have the hearty approval and support of the general public. Too, public officials responsible for the employment of aliens should be prosecuted for malfeasance in office.

In a public address, Dr. John Buckley of Los Angeles intimated that "public officials receive contributions from gangsters, racketeers and the underworld," and that "even certain of our superior court judges, seventeen out of fifty, are under the direct control of this lawless element." He should, for the community's good, be compelled to name the individuals to whom he referred, or to reveal the source of his information.

The "Los Angeles Review" well remarks: "Laying low one of these big bosses who conducts nefarious business against the law and at public expense will do more to 'clean up the town' than a hundred indictments of small offenders."

"Queer," headed this editorial in the "Sonoma Index-Tribune": "We Americans are queer people, said one of our humorists and he had plenty to prove it, though that was said five years ago. Today he might add that we are damned queer people. We claim thousands are starving and in the next breath try to decide what to do with all the food which we over produce. We save ranches for those about to lose them because they couldn't make a living on them and tell 'em to go on living on them. We talk about frozen assets and keep money in cold storage under a program which makes it impossible for business to thaw out. We drive soap box orators from their humble props but pay professors and put up huge buildings for them to preach un-American doctrines. We talk about unemployment and do everything under the sun to create jobs, and then thousands walk right out and leave perfectly good jobs. . . . If conditions continue to be as topsy turvy as they have of late and the American concept of everything so devil-may-care, tragedy will follow if we do not cut out the comedy and cut it out quick." Really is queer, isn't it?

A REAL Californian For a REAL Governor

George Southard's first cousin, Henry Huntly Haight, came to California in 1850, settled in San Francisco, practised law, and in 1867 was elected Governor of California.

HEADING the fourth generation of a fine American and Californian strain is Raymond L. Haight, candidate for the Governorship.

In 1849 George Southard Haight toiled into Little Shasta Valley in an ox-drawn covered wagon. He built a log cabin there. It still stands. He was first Postmaster of Shasta.

Fulton Haight, son of the pioneer, was the first school teacher of the region, went to San Francisco, became a distinguished attorney. Helped organize the Vigilantes.

Fulton's son is George W. Haight, Native Son, an attorney, and for forty years a worker for clean government.

George W. Haight's son is Raymond L. Haight, who at 38 already has a distinguished record in public service. As City Attorney of Venice, he reorganized that community. In 1931, as Commissioner of Corporations, he cleaned up a notorious State department.

Raymond L. Haight has a complete program for Unemployment Relief, Economic Rehabilitation, Tax Reductions, Elimination of Crime. He has the ability and courage to put it into effect.

THE MISSIONS OF CALIFORNIA

Wilbur Sherman

ON THE NIGHT OF NOVEMBER 4, THE little mission of San Diego was wrapped in peaceful slumber. No sentinel was on duty to hear the soft, sullen tread of the savages approaching the settlement. Silently, eagerly, they poured into the church, plundered it of the ornaments so painstakingly brought by the Franciscans to California, then sought the sacristy where they dressed with delight the priestly cassocks and stoles. This successfully accomplished, they announced their presence with wild yells which momentarily grew louder and fiercer, as they set fire to the church, the barracks, and all the other buildings.

In the ruddy light cast by the conflagration, the savages danced grotesquely, brandishing their weapons, and shrieking demoniacally. It was a rude awakening for peacefully slumbering padres and their small guard. Padre Fuster rushed the two boys, the son and nephew of Lieutenant Ortega, the commander of the Presidio, across the court to the barracks. The carpenter, Jose Urselino, who was valiantly assisting in the defense, was now mortally wounded, pierced by arrows. Falling, he exclaimed: "Ah! Indio que me has muerto! Dios te lo perdone." ("Ah! Indian who have killed me, may God forgive you.")

The sick blacksmith, roused from his fitful slumbers, seized a sword and rushed to the door. He was instantly greeted with a flight of arrows. He staggered back into the room. "Compañero," he gasped, "they have killed me," and fell dead. His companion sprang behind the bellows in the smithy and from this barricade charged into the midst of the savages, instantly killing one. In the ensuing confusion, he escaped and succeeded in joining Padre Fuster and the soldiers. The little band of Spaniards were now all together; only Padre Jayme was missing.

The friars slept in separate apartments. When Fray Luis Jayme saw in the red glow of the burning buildings the menacing forms of the savages, he went bravely toward them. "Amada de Dios, hijos,"—(Love God, children.")—he exhuted them. The gentle words were scarcely spoken before the howling horde fell upon him. They dragged him to the banks of an arroyo, and with clubs and stones dealt brutal blows to his face and body. Then, bruised, torn, and pierced with arrows, his bleeding corpse was thrown into the arroyo. So died the brave and gentle Majorcan friar, Luis Jayme, without a cry, without a moan, calling upon God to receive his soul.

While this ghastly tragedy was being enacted on the banks of the arroyo, the little band of refugees in the barracks were compelled by the fire, now raging furiously, to seek shelter elsewhere. Taking the wounded carpenter with them, they fled to the padres' house which, though also in flames, was as yet only partially destroyed. Here they made another desperate stand, while Padre Fuster made an ineffectual attempt to find his companion. But the flames soon forced them to flee again. A small adobe structure, which had been used as a kitchen, had strangely enough escaped the general conflagration, although it was roofed with boughs and dried leaves. The Spaniards succeeded in reaching this building. The fight raged with fury on both sides.

Through a wide aperture in the adobe wall, the well-aimed arrows of the savages were shot with terrible effect. Before the Spaniards succeeded in barricading this opening, every man among them was wounded, some mortally. While those who were able sustained steady fire against savages, the wounded strained their feeble strength to the utmost in efforts to extinguish the flames caused by burning arrows, shot into the roof of the building. A sack containing fifty pounds of gun-powder lay on the floor beside them. In this desperate situation, Padre Fuster found a hazardous expedient. He threw himself, full length, on the sack and protected it with his body from the burning brands falling thickly about, unaware of a wound received from a piece of adobe.

In this manner, the priests, boys, soldiers and artisans, all wounded, some fatally, passed the long hours before dawn. Whether the Indians grew weary with encountering such firm resistance, or whether the neophytes, who now appeared for the first time, really fought them, as they afterward claimed, is not certain. But when the sun rose over the ruined mission the next morning the savages were gone.

Under the date of December 15 the Father Presidente reported the sad occurrence to the Father Guardian and to the Viceroy. To the latter he wrote that the missionaries were by no means disheartened at what had happened; but that they rather envied their fortunate companion, Father Luis, the happy death which he had merited. All the missionaries regarded martyrdom as the most desirable of deaths. They only feared that severe punishment might be meted out to the Indians who had taken part in the uprising, and that in consequence the restoration of the mission and the founding of San Juan might be delayed. He suggested that similar calamities might be prevented by increasing the number of the guards.

The merciful wishes of Father Serra were respected by Viceroy Bucareli; and when on January 11 the two commanders arrived, the situation was examined by Rivera, who then informed Colonel Anza that he would ask the Viceroy for twenty-five soldiers, as protection for the mission.

Father Serra meanwhile diligently continued his labors. Volumes would be insufficient adequately to describe the trials, disappointments, sickness, and unselfish privations of these earnest apostles of Saint Francis during the early years of the missions. They put aside all that mankind holds dear—home, country, family, and friends—to bury themselves in an unknown country, that they might help the lowest type of savage to live a better, more useful life, and might add to the honor and glory of God by saving souls for His celestial kingdom.

III

The first chapels and shelters, made of boughs, were followed by buildings thatched with moss and tules; yet ultimately there arose magnificent buildings, beautiful as the blue cloud-flecked sky, the rolling hills, the sun-drenched luxuriant plains, and the glistening green ocean which formed their settings.

As they were trained, the Indians became proficient workers. As the converts increased in number, they performed notable architectural feats. Big timbers were hewed square in the foothill forests adjacent to the missions and hauled out from twenty to one hundred miles by man power to be placed in position in the towers and the churches. They manufactured tiles for roofing—heavy, rough, half-cylindrical plates of half-burned clay—which were needed to protect the roofs from arrows tipped with blazing moss.

During this formative period the friars certainly did not live off the fat of the land. They planted and tilled gardens, it is true, but the seeds were so valuable that the first crops could not be used for food. The supplies sent them from San Blas consisted chiefly of badly cured salt or dried meats, flour or meal, often damaged in transit, beans, peas, brown sugar and chocolate. Ships came at irregular, uncertain intervals, and at one time, because of the failure of the supply ship to appear, the fathers at some of the missions lived for nearly eight months on milk and what green stuff they could gather in the woods. Through it all, the padres sustained constant diligence with unabated cheerfulness and zeal.

At this period Juan Bautista de Anza was easily the most forceful figure. He was a man of splendid ability and courage, and was the explorer with Azala of the San Francisco Bay district, the founder of the city of San Francisco, and the successful leader of the first party of settlers to the coast. He arrived at Monterey on the 10th of March, 1776, with a caravan of two hundred and forty people, all in good health, including women and children.

Meanwhile Father Serra had been using all his influence to effect the establishment of the next three missions. He had set his heart on officiating at San Francisco, San Buenaventura and Santa Clara. The sites had long been selected, the church furniture ready, and the priests available to take charge. But the comandante insisted that he had insufficient soldiers for a guard. And so the founding was delayed and Father Serra destined not to take part, for when the expedition set out to found these missions, Father Serra was just departing for San Diego to rebuild the mission that had been burned by the Indians. Though bitterly disappointed, he felt that it was his duty to make the journey to San Diego. Father Palou took the place of Father Serra, and on October 29, 1776, dedicated the Mission San Francisco de Asis where now stands the City of San Francisco.

Thus it was that in the same year two groups of noble, earnest men, one on each side of the continent, were striving against great odds for similar goals the one for the freedom of humanity from the bondage of heathenism and barbarism, the other for the freedom of humanity from the bondage of tyranny and oppression. Separated by thousands of miles of wilderness, neither group was to know what the other was doing or had accomplished until more than a year had passed.

During the uprising of the Indians in San Diego, work on the Mission San Juan Capistrano had been stopped. Now, when Father Serra arrived at San Diego, he found an order from the Viceroy to proceed at once on the restoration of San Diego and the building of San Juan Capistrano. Father Serra joyfully celebrated the reception of the news with the ringing of the mission bells and a special mass, and proceeded to act at once. In fifteen days he had made seven thousand adobe bricks and collected much stone. San Diego was rebuilt, and in December 1776 San Juan Capistrano was dedicated. Father Serra started home, traveling leisurely and visiting the other missions as he went along. Everywhere, the weary old man was received with joy and kindness that warmed his heart.

The next year, on January 12, 1777, Santa Clara, the eighth mission, was added to the chain. The Viceroy then suggested to Father Serra the establishment of three additional missions in the Santa Barbara Channel country, where there was a large Indian population.

Immersed in work, Padre Serra had not yet found time to visit the mission of Saint Francis, the illustrious founder of his order. Now that affairs were in better order, he took advantage of his opportunity and made the journey. At Dolores Mission he was received with much joy, and on October 1 sang a high mass and preached to the settlers. He remained at the mission for a month willingly lending his able assistance in solving problems of administration, and organizing services, schools, and workshops for the neophytes.

Everywhere Father Serra was easily the dominating spirit—the worker, the advisor, and the leader. By nature he was kind and compassionate, ever eager to minister to the ill in mind or body; in business matters he was firm, yet diplomatic; in all things he was ever ready to fight for the right, being a relentless enemy of sin in any form, and an earnest exponent of the Grace of God as the remedy for all ills. He was devoid of false pride, and indifferent to the plaudits of the multitude. In short, he was a plain man, obsessed with one burning desire—to save his fellow men, the Indians, from their heathen life. In the early history of California, wherein there is no derth of either greatness or pettishness, the pure unselfish life of Father Serra stands in clear relief as the greatest and the most admirable.

Up to the year 1783 nine missions had been established by Junipero Serra in northern California. Not all of them personally, but at least under his supervision while he held the office of presidente. Under the bull of Pope Clement XIV he was granted permission to act as bishop and to confirm all the converts during a period of ten years. But the strenuous life he had lived for twenty-five years during his northern California activities had considerably undermined his health. In addition to his suffering from his ulcerated leg, he had contracted an affliction of the chest. Besides the chain which he had been accustomed to using to scourge himself, he had recently provided a huge stone, which he carried with him into the pulpit, and at the end of the sermon, in the attitude of contrition, he would hold the crucifix in his left hand, and holding the stone in his right strike his breast violently and repeatedly. Often the spectators were afraid that he would inflict a fatal blow and fall before their eyes. On some occasions he would light a four-wick taper and hold it to his breast until he had seared and burned the flesh. There was hardly anything Father Serra would not do to obtain the complete interest and sympathy of the apathetic Indians.

But now the punishment was beginning to tell. His body was much weaker generally and both his leg and chest were constantly in pain. The ten years of his bishopric would end in July 1784, and this added to his anxiety. He feared

"TO THE OFFICERS AND MEMBERS of All Subordinate Parlors of the Native Sons of the Golden West—Dear Sirs and Brothers: At the last Grand Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West a resolution was adopted naming Sacramento as the city in which the annual celebration of Admission Day will be held. This celebration of Admission Day will be held in conjunction with the California State Fair, which will make this one of the outstanding events of the year and thereby cause members from all over our native State to attend and participate therein.

"Admission Day is a legal holiday and it is our duty as Native Sons to assist in its proper annual observance. There is no better way for us to honor the hardy pioneers who blazed the trails to this western shore; no surer method of instilling in the minds of the youth of today the traditions of the days of '49.

"As Grand President may I express the hope that each and every Parlor will be properly represented at Sacramento on Admission Day. In communities so remote that attendance at Sacramento is impossible, it is desirable that fitting services be conducted to commemorate this auspicious occasion. We should strive to fulfill the debt which we owe to the memory of our Pioneers by an observance of this day; that we should also, in a fitting manner, endeavor to impart to the adopted sons and daughters of California the spirit of loyalty and love of our State, the heritage of which we are so proud.

"Let us once more pay homage to our State on this Admission Day and again with parade, speech and music emphasize our ever increasing love and devotion to California. Sincerely and fraternally yours,

"CHAS. A. KOENIG.

First Contra Costa Parlor Celebrates.

Antioch—General Winn No. 32, the first Parlor instituted in Contra Costa County, observed its fiftieth anniversary at a July 25 dinner, served by Mrs. Antone Pera. Gladioli and sweetpeas adorned the tables, and at each place was a silken California State (Bear) Flag inscribed: "50th Anniversary, General Winn Parlor No. 32. 1884—July 26—1934." During the dinner a program was presented by Miss Nikki La Montague, Lorraine and June Johnson, Mrs. Estelle Evans and Miss Marguerite Flannery.

Supervisor Richard J. Trembath was the toastmaster, and speakers included Sheriff Richard R. Veale, Joseph Mulhare and Richard U'Ren, charter members; Secretary Joel H. Ford, who read the minutes of the Parlor's first meeting; District Attorney James F. Hoey and County Treasurer Charles L. Dodge, Past Grand Presidents, and F. J. Biglow, chairman of the celebration arrangements. Hoey, the main speaker of the evening, dwelt on the ideals of the Orders of Native Sons and Native Daughters, and flayed Communism, saying: "It is up to all of us to work toward overcoming Communistic activities and break the division between various factions in our nation today. Graduates from many universities are Communists, and the people should step in immediately and take a hand to put down this evil."

Among the honored guests were Mrs. Amy McAvoy and Mrs. Estelle Evans, Past Grand Presidents N.D.G.W. The latter, on behalf of Antioch No. 223 N.D.G.W., presented a gift to General Winn's charter members. ANNIVERSARY HISTORIC CROSSING SIERRA NEVADA CELEBRATED

THE NINETIETH ANNIVERSARY OF the arrival of John C. Fremont and Kit Carson in California and their historic crossing of the Sierra Nevada Mountains by way of the Kit Carson Pass was celebrated by the people of Amador County and the surrounding mountain region Saturday and Sunday, August 4 and 5. That was one of the expeditions which led up to California becoming an American commonwealth, and was, doubtless, the first time the Sierra Nevada had been crossed in midwinter.

The opening festivities of the celebration were held at Jackson, the county seat, Saturday evening, with a street festival, band concert and dances. Literary exercises were held Sunday at Plasse Meadow, on the shores of Silver Lake about ten miles from the Pass, with an attendance of some 3,000 people from the surrounding country and Nevada State. Senator A. L. Pierovich was chairman of the day, and addresses were delivered by Mrs. Gladys Noce, Grand President N.D.G.W., and Lewis F. Byington, Past Grand President N.S.G.W. The latter was one of the speakers at Kit Carson Pass, August 7, 1921, when the Historic Landmarks Committee of the Native Sons placed there a commemorative bronze tablet.

Byington, in his address, described in vivid language the perilous journey of these Pioneers who came to California in the days preceding the discovery of gold by James W. Marshall, January 24, 1848. He told how Fremont, as an officer in the service of the U. S. Government, had been sent out to survey the country lying between the Missouri River and Oregon. His work was completed in the fall of 1843, and with Carson and the surveying party started back across the great basin of Nevada and Utah, but his horses' hoofs were torn by the sharp rocks of the desert. They concluded to cross the Sierra Nevada from the Carson River in January 1844, with the snows on the mountains between fifteen and twenty feet deep. Even the Indians of that region, appalled by the danger, refused to act as guides, and by signs conveyed the information that the snows were as deep as the trees were tall, and the rocky bluffs were a thousand feet high. Nothing, however, could stop the dauntless Pioneers. There were no roads, but foot by foot they fought their way up rugged gorges, through drifting snow and frozen streams, for some thirty days. Thirty-three of their sixty-seven horses perished, or were killed for food. They slept at night on the frozen snow. At last they reached the summit, at the place now known as Kit Carson Pass, at an elevation of about 9,000 feet. Here Carson blazed a large pine tree and carved his name and the date, 1844, thereon. The section containing the name and date was later cut out and sent to the museum of the Society of California Pioneers at San Francisco and is now at Sutter's Fort, Sacramento. The Landmarks Committee of the Native Sons in 1921 placed a bronze tablet where the tree stood. It took the Fremont party another month to reach Fort Sutter from Carson Pass. Carson Pass marked the future trail of the '49ers.

The present Alpine highway, by way of this Pass, is one of the most picturesque roads over the Sierra Nevada, and to the Lake Tahoe region. From a peak near the Pass one can see the Sacramento Valley and San Francisco Bay. From the Pass the exploring party followed down an ice-covered creek to the American River, on which river gold was discovered in 1848, leading to the marvelous growth of California. Fremont was one of the first United States Senators from California, and Kit Carson was one of the greatest of American explorers.

Past Grand President Byington also paid a tribute to the patriotic spirit of the Pioneers who settled Amador County, referring to the great gold production of the region and recalling the fact that the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West was organized in the county by Miss Lilly O. Reichling, September 11, 1886, and had in Mrs. Gladys Noce, present Grand President, a talented, patriotic and zealous successor to the grand officers who preceded her in that position. He further stated that Amador County had given to the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West four of its most outstanding Grand Presidents, Judge Richard C. Rust, Senator Charles M. Belshaw, Judge John F. Davis and Clarence E. Jarvis, and that the present mayor of San Francisco, Angelo J. Rossi, was a native of Volcano, Amador County.

The addresses at Silver Lake were followed by a pageant depicting the arrival of Carson and Fremont with their scouts; a band concert by fifty musicians from the Preston State School, and an outdoor barbecue beneath the mountain pines. In this celebration history's pages were turned back nearly a century, the dauntless spirit of the trapper and the frontiersmen who blazed their way to the Golden West was depicted.

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER

BY THEIR FABRICS SHALL YE KNOW them. Even the old standbys, such as velvets, satins and woolens, have somehow succeeded in changing their character to conform to the newer styles. The fabric story for autumn and winter is a fascinating one, which we will deal with at greater length in the near-future. Meanwhile, whatever clothes types you are about to assemble, and for whatever occasion they are intended, bear this in mind: a galaxy of stripes, checks and plaids is in evidence, and dull black is considered the acme of elegance; sheer velvets, velveteens and corduroys all have their place in the mode.

Silks are, if possible, more beautiful than ever. Satins gleam by day and by night, and woolens are scoring a decisive fabric victory. It really looks, this season, as if there is going to be more of the idea of daytime simplicity.

Shoulders are natural, waists are normal, skirts are slim, sleeves are blown out at the elbows and have darts or shirrings. Others are cut in one, with yokes. Necklines are a compromise; some are high and some low, with the evidence still in favor for high. The newer neck treatments are a joy and delight, with their soft flattering draperies, bows and jabots. As for the cowl, it seems to have found diverse new ways to be irresistible, and there is a feeling in favor of both fabric and color contrast.

Buttons are with us stronger than ever. Many overgrown ones are being used for accent. They vary their type to suit the costume, running all the way from wood, metal and leather to crystal, fabric-covered and rhinestone-set. They are both decorative and useful, and are often used the full length of the frock on either back or front, as well as on the sleeves and bodices.

There is a perfect epidemic of short jackets. They match or they contrast with the rest of the costume. Coats are very much in evidence. They obligingly vary their length to suit the needs of the individual or the occasion. Jackets are supposed to do double duty and be ensembled at will. Many are collarless, the collar on the individual dress or blouse supplying this deficiency. Simple lines characterize fur coats.

This is the time of year when women begin to figure about that fur coat for winter—for a practical all-around-wear fur coat—one which looks rich and elegant enough for dressy wear, but not too dressy for informal wear. Most women will choose hudson seal, alaska seal, caracul or lapin. Mink and persian lamb are dressier, of course, but whatever fur you choose, you will find it becoming. The new fur coats are cut on simpler lines, with less exaggerated fullness, and most of them have an essentially straight silhouette which fits easily at the waistline.

Of course, the sports coats are still loose and swagger-like. Notice their collars, when you make your tour of inspection, and see how many of them have soft rippled lines, standing out in a ruff-like frame or falling down in front in revers. Of course, you will still find the favorite shawl collar, because it looks too well on too many women to discard. Even though they are not so new, they are always flattering.

Some women will lose their minds over the new full-length capes. Mink, of course, is lovely enough to break a heart. When buying furs, remember that definite styles are dated, and that a fur coat is an investment that should pay dividends for a long time. A new shaped collar or sleeve is a more conventional gesture toward brand new fur fashions. Neck pieces and coat trimmings are to be swamped with fur of every description.

For something really new, the knitted evening gowns, believe it or not, are going to be shown this fall. The busy knitting needles that are clickety-clacking the length and breadth of the land are turning to formal attire. The days when a sweater was considered a rough-and-ready garment for sportswear only, are back in the dim dead past. We have already seen the invasion of evening sweaters, those slinky, form-fitting pullovers of velvety chenille yarn with a lastex stretch. Now, the knitters are getting more ambitious and they are turning their attention to evening gowns.

A smart shop that is always a couple of steps ahead has shown a knitted evening gown and has proven its sensational value. The new yarns for knitted evening-wear may be made of anything from rayon to cellophane, and many are metal flecked. When these are fashioned into an evening gown, they fit like a mermaid's sheath. The brilliancy of the yarn itself effects the sole trimming.

The new knits carry out the new feeling for greater simplicity of design. One-piece and two-piece types both score. Two-piece corduroy knits and three-piece waffle-weave suits are good. Boucles are to be found in a variety of distinctive designs. Lovely in color, the chenille knits rise to new hights of smartness.

The new coat dresses smiled upon this fall by the fashion gods are, of course, of the wrap-around type, and all of them fasten with buttons as big and striking as possible. Often they are tied with a graceful bow.

Woolen fabrics are all over the place for fall, and are as prominent in formal as in sports wear. The tunic dress is back again, shown in both daytime and dinner dresses. These are smart, with the russian neckline, combining the beautiful with the practical.

To my mind, there is no material that compares with lace for dress occasions.

For early autumn wear, the black satin street frock is short sleeved and simply made, for wear with either white or black accessories.

One of the big berets of white doeskin has matching gloves and handbag. These, with black satin oxfords, make one of the most effective between-season costumes seen in the shops.

A white satin evening gown is lovelier than ever this year, with more intriguing clips, buckles, bows and flares than have been in evidence for many years.

Women should be well dressed this autumn and winter. The clothes offered are certainly fool-proof, and no one need look dowdy.

Slits in skirts are getting higher and higher, and fancy petticoats are having a chance to show themselves after all these years. Other designers are creating fancy panties in knicker style, to be worn with the slit skirts, which promise to occupy a place of growing importance in the fall fashion picture.

Gauntlets and slipons seem to be the coming persuasion in gloves. They are feminine, sleekly fitted affairs, and quite a bit of detailing of the dressmaker sort has gone into them. Pipings as well as embroidered stitchings, have been used effectively.

Anarchy reigns among the hats, which flaunt big brims around their crowns with feathers, or they may fit closely, with saucerlike contraptions. Sugar cones with ornate decorations, tyrolean hats and many cossack models, covered with fur bands, add to the variety. Also beret like pancakes or hats with deep crushed crown are shown.

The San Francisco Bay Exposition has been incorporated to stage in San Francisco, probably in 1938, another world fair.

Merced City will have its annual roundup September 15 and 16.

THE EMIGRANTS

(BETTY L. WHITSELL.)

Thru miles of choking dust,
With broiling sun above,
The slow ox-train
Does dumbly stagger thru the heat,
In Hell's wide plain.
A feeble tragic group,
A dying mass of flesh,
In deep despair.
A weary galling trail leads on
And Death stalks there.

With desperate steps they move
These starving emigrants,
And one by one
They fall exhausted in the sand,
Life's journey done.
A cruel and twisted trail,
With jaded, dying teams,
And winds that blow.
They humbly kneel by loved one's graves
In deepest woe.

Mirage and fever bring
Fantastic forms that fool
The strongest men.
And blanched and haggard, yet with hope,
March on again.
Mere shadows on the earth
With awful grievous thirst,
Do little know
The world will pause to honor them,
And fame bestow.

With weak and empty arms
And scourged with suffering,
These truly great
Find magic California
And make a state.

Lodi, San Joaquin County, will have its first annual Grape Festival, September 7-9.

Best Wishes!

Native Daughters of the Golden West

"TO THE OFFICERS AND MEMBERS of the Subordinate Parlors, Native Daughters of the Golden West—Dear Sisters: One by one the years drop away, and recede into that mystic land of shadow that we call the Past. Like leaves that fall gently from the sturdy tree of Time, they soon are mingled with the fertile soil into which the strong roots of that mighty tree are thrust; and so they become the ferment that brings flower and fruition in the attainments of today and tomorrow.

"Four score and four years have passed into that silent realm since the eventful day when our beloved California stood forth among the Sisterhood of States,—coming without probation to that proud estate, full armed and panoplied in the dignity and the majesty of Statehood. Beyond the span of normal life she has endured,—as she shall endure through all the long years to come,—loyal, and royal, and every inch a Queen!

"Kingdoms and empires have risen and died away in those long years; republics have flourished and been forgotten. Scarce a nation today, save our own beloved Union, has stood unscarred by revolution in that cycle; scarce a throne, scarce a dynasty, but has met shipwreck and disaster, oft repeated, in the fleet and changing years. Yet California reigns today, as through all those shifting decades, our pattern and our pride,—the peerless Queen of the vast Empire of the West!

"And what a wondrous pageant of Progress those years have shown! From squalid hamlet to mighty city; from desolate wilderness to broad cultured dominions o'erflowing with Nature's bounteous harvest; from rutted lanes to broad arteries that bear the traffic of a continent; from vast reaches of unpeopled desolation to the majestic grandeur of an Empire peopled by its millions!

"It is indeed a picture to stir the soul of every loving and loyal son and daughter of California. This is our heritage; this is our birthright. Onward lies our Destiny! But in the pomp and pride of achievement, the arrogance of attainment, it is fitting that we pause a moment in deep humility, to pay silent tribute to those strong souls who laid the firm foundation of our greatness.

"It seems a long cry indeed from the crudities of '50 to the sophistication of '34; but as the years roll back on Memory's screen, it is but a little, little way that we have come, and the virtues that crown the manhood and womanhood of today.

"Those days are ever near and dear to us; those old heroes live on in the lives of those who carry the burden that they have laid aside. May they ever live! And pray God that we may learn to live as they lived,—ever strong, but gentle; purposeful, and valiant, and true. Sincerely and fraternally in P.D.F.A.,

"GLADYS E. NOCE,
"Grand President N.D.G.W.

"Sutter Creek, August 9, 1934."

CALIFORNIA FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

ADMISSION DAY OF 1884 WAS CELEbrated in grand style at Sacramento, September 9, a joint committee from Sacramento Parlor No. 3 and Sunset Parlor No. 26 N.S.G.W. making the arrangements. The city was profusely decorated with flags, banners and green branches, and a triumphal arch was erected across the main street. A big crowd, of standing-room-only proportions, joined in the festivities.

Among the number was John W. Geary Jr. of Pennsylvania, who claimed to be the first child born to American-born parents in San Francisco; his father, John W. Geary, was the first postmaster and also the first mayor of San Francisco, and Geary street in that city was named for him. General Geary subsequently returned to Pennsylvania and became a governor of that state. M. C. Hoppe, born May 18, 1848, and residing in Vacaville, Solano County, claimed to be the oldest Native Son in attendance.

The Admission Day parade, headed by Grand Marshal J. E. LaRue, consisted of four divisions. In line were the California National Guard, Governor George Stoneman and staff, various public officials and fraternal organizations, some 300 members of the Sacramento Society of California Pioneers, and approximately 1,000 Native Sons, all in regalia, representing the thirty-eight Parlors of the Order then in existence. James W. Marshall, discoverer of gold at Coloma, El Dorado County, rode in a carriage ahead of an allegorical float depicting Sutter Fort in the '50s.

Literary exercises, following the parade, were held in the State Capitol. Grand President John A. Steinbach presided, Governor Stoneman delivered an address, H. J. W. Dam read an original poem, and Grand Orator Robert T. Devlin delivered the Admission Day oration. In the State Capitol, also, a grand ball was held in the evening, both the senate and the assembly chambers being utilized.

The Sacramento Pioneers, after taking part in the Admission Day parade, had a banquet in their hall, which was filled to overflowing. Newton Booth and N. THE MISSIONS hat strength would fail him before he could isit all the missions established and confirm all he converts. The more his health seemed to ail, the more determined he became to complete his task. So, having embarked on the rst ship to sail from Monterey, he arrived in an Diego in September 1783. From that point e traveled northward for the last time, passing om mission to mission, stopping only long nough to inspect its administration and confirm ll the neophytes prepared to receive the sacament.

At San Gabriel he had another serious attack f his chest trouble, but he recuperated and tarted for San Buenaventura, the last mission e had founded. At this point he learned that here was such a large number of conversions hat he would have to work early and late to onfirm all. His delight was great and his work o diverted his attention from his physical conition that he improved in health. When he nished his labor there, he was so much trengthened that he could continue his journey ithout fear of sinking down on the way.

By January 1784, after he had visited all of he missions south of Monterey, and since the revious September traveled a distance of 420 iles on foot, he arrived at San Carlos. To the stonishment of all, he appeared stronger than hen he had left, four months before. However, e was still very weak, and it was hoped that e would rest. But his zeal was stronger than is poor, weak body. Instead of resting, he aplied himself to missionary labors and through ain and shine kept continually at work.

In April 1784, he finished his rounds of the orthern missions. Arriving on May 4 at San rancisco, he joyfully met his old friend and omrade, Father Francisco Palou.

Notwithstanding his activity, the aged Padre ealized that his days were numbered, and, beore parting from Father Palou, he made his ast dispositions and sent a new priest to take harge of Santa Clara. He then retired to San arlos, his favorite mission and his home, where e set to work to confirm all the neophytes. n the day his commission expired, he had the atisfaction of knowing that there was not one nconfirmed convert in his diocese.

In August 1784, the seventy-first year of his life and the thirty-fourth year of his ministry as a missionary, the good Padre, feeling that every day might be his last, wrote to each of his fellow-laborers, inviting all who could do so to visit him, and all who were too far away to write to him. But the only one who could reach him in time was Father Palou, who hurried down from San Francisco, and arrived at Carmel on August 18.

Father Palou found his beloved presidente very weak and failing rapidly, although he contrived to conduct religious services in the church every afternoon. The suppuration and inflammation of his chest were almost unbearable. The surgeon from a ship which had just arrived in Monterey visited him, and suggested cauterizing the wounds. Father Serra consented, but the only effect was to consume the flesh and cause excruciating pain, all of which the good father bore without a murmur.

On August 26, having passed a very bad night, he spent the day in prayer, and in the evening with many tears confessed himself to Father Palou. The next day he insisted on attending mass to receive holy communion. He was accompanied thither by the comandante and a large company of soldiers from the neighboring presidio, who had come over to pay their last respects. He remained on his knees during the ceremony, being too feeble to stand. All present were affected to tears. That evening he asked Father Palou to administer extreme unction, and it was done. Unable to sleep, he spent the night either on his knees or in the arms of his neophytes, who crowded around him in great numbers. Captain Jose Canizares and Chaplain Cristobal Diaz, of the vessel just arrived in port, visited the Father next morning. He received them with an embrace, ordered a peal of mission bells in their honor, and thanked them for coming to his funeral. They were greatly shocked, and expressed the earnest hope that the good Father would be spared to continue his work. But he assured them that there was no hope, and with calmness begged them as a favor to him to scatter a little earth on his remains. Then turning to Father Palou he voiced his desire to be buried by the side of Father Crespi at Carmel, to remain there until the construction of the new church. Padre Palou, as soon as his tears would permit, assured the dying father that his wishes would be respected.

Early in the afternoon, having expressed a desire to rest, he lay down on his bed. All supposed he desired to sleep, as he had not slept the night before, and they left his apartment so that he would not be disturbed. But soon afterwards Father Palou found him in exactly the same position in which they had left him, and very still. He seemed to be slumbering peacefully, but he had ceased to breathe. Requiescat in pace!

IV

After Fray Junipero Serra's death, the presidente's mantel fell on the shoulders of his bosom friend and confrere, Father Palou. Father Palou continued in the office for two years, during which period he wrote a book, a tribute to the life of his friend and the first book written in California. At the close of this period, he was transferred to a prominent position as the Father Guardian of the College of San Fernando in Mexico. Here he died in 1794.

Father Palou was succeeded by Father Fermin Francisco de Lausen, who founded, under the guidance of Father Serra, the mission at San Juan Capistrano. The two padres had chosen the site for the mission of Santa Barbara in 1782, but for various reasons the mission had never been founded. Now, however, all difficulties had been removed; the site had been surveyed by the fathers and the governor and confirmed. So nothing remained but to proceed with the work, and on December 4, 1786, the mission of Santa Barbara was founded.

The mission developed very rapidly and in 1790 a handsome and elaborate structure was completed. One year later 549 converts were enrolled. This was raised to 1756 in 1805, the largest number of all the missions at that time. Santa Barbara, "Queen of the Missions," was one of the most beautiful of the chain. The beauty of the building, in itself a gem, was enhanced by the setting—in the background, the San Marcos Hills; in the foreground, the silvery sands and the widespreading blue ocean.

The next year the eleventh mission, La Purissima Concepcion, was founded, December 8, 1787. The buildings of this mission were almost entirely destroyed by the earthquake of 1812 and the site was changed to a spot on the main highway, a few miles to the northeast.

WEALTH OF ROMANCE IN CONTRA COSTA COUNTY HILLS.

The Native Daughters are engaged in a commendable task, the financing of a monument in memory of the pioneer miners now buried in the old Somersville cemetery. It is an undertaking that should be supported by all of eastern Contra Costa County to which the great coal mining operations of the last century meant so much. But laudable as the project is, it falls short of what should be done. The old Somersville cemetery is in a deplorable state of neglect. . . . Pittsburg and Antioch and other cities which derived a large part of their growth from the old "ghost" towns of that colorful era should join in erecting the monument, in fencing the graves and in making it the place of beauty it was in the days when the mines were operating.

There is a wealth of romance in those hills south of Pittsburg and Antioch. They will be, in fact are today, a lure for many thousands of persons to whom the history of the colorful California that was, is a living thing to be treasured.

The miners came to Contra Costa County in 1858 and built up the towns of Nortonville and Somersville to a point of dominance in the county's affairs. Thousands of men, women and children once walked the now-deserted streets of those old settlements. Presently oil was found in large quantities and the demand for the low-grade coal vanished. Within a few years, at the turn of the century, the old towns were but shells of their former greatness. The many descendants of the old miners now living in this county and in the bay region should be glad to co-operate in a campaign for funds to restore that old cemetery.—Pittsburg Post Dispatch.

California's fifty-eight counties received August 1 for road building $2,571,684.40, and the State Highways Division got a like amount. The total, $5,143,368.80 represents net receipts from registration of 1,963,886 motor vehicles during the first six months of 1934.

Bees like their nectar straight. The mystery surrounding the sudden, seemingly capricious, shifting of bees from one kind of plant to another has been lifted, in part at least, by recent entomological studies in California by the Federal Agricultural Department. The concentration of nectar seems to be the deciding factor in drawing bees to blossoms.

THE "JACKASS MAIL" CAME BEFORE THE PONY EXPRESS.

Placerville [El Dorado County] was the scene of great excitement on the third of May 1851 when the "Jackass Mail" first started across mountains for Salt Lake City. This is the first known departure of mail overland for the East, and it was a great novelty for the miners of old Hangtown, says the "Pony Express Courier," Two young men, Geo. Chorpenning Jr. and Ab Woodward made a contract to carry the mail from Sacramento City to Salt Lake City, each way, every thirty days, for an annual salary of $14,000. And out of this they paid all expenses.

The departure of this first overland mail was considered a great joke by some of the miners, and bets were plentiful that the mules would never get through. They did, however, and the mail was carried regularly until June of 1854. Woodward was killed by the Indians in eastern Nevada in the winter of 1851 and his body was not found until the following spring. The first news of his death was reported in the "Sacramento Union" on June 4, 1852.

About seventy-five pounds of mail left Placerville on this first trip of the "Jackass Mail," and after the last mule had rounded the turn headed east the miners all retired to the bars to celebrate, and proceeded to make merry to late into the night.

This undertaking to get the mail through by mule met with much more difficulty than the Pony Express riders experienced. The country was less populated, the Indians were on the warpath along the entire route, and there were no settlements for the drivers to make headquarters. Chorpenning established a settlement on this first trip east, in the Carson Valley.

Chorpenning's second contract with the government routed the mail from Salt Lake City down through Utah into San Bernardino and to San Pedro. This cut the Carson Valley out of mail service and a messenger on snowshoes carried the mail over the Sierra to Placerville in the winter. At this time "Snowshoe" Thompson became famous for his exploits.

Overland mail over the Sierra from Placerville received a setback after Chorpenning started his new route to San Pedro, and the next mail over the mountains on a regular schedule was not started until 1858, when weekly stages began leaving Placerville for Salt Lake City, agreeing to carry the mail through in twelve days. Little did those drivers dream that in just a few more years the Pony Express couriers would take the mail through to St. Joseph, Missouri, in less time than they did to Salt Lake City.

GRIZZLY GROWLS

NOTE.—Expressions of opinion in these "Growls" are, unless indicated otherwise, those of the Managing Editor.

CLARENCE M. HUNT.

THE STORY OF THE DEPRESSION of our time follows that of all the others down to March 4, 1933," says Professor Neil Carothers of Lehigh University in a highly interesting, and at the same time humorous, widely-published article. "At that point new story begins. . . . No one in the world knows exactly what causes depressions, not even Senators or army officers. . . . Just as they [economists] hesitate to assign a specific cause for depression, so do the economists refrain from proposing a patent cure. They know that the only cure is that one remedy for all human ills — time. Not so with statesmen. So far they have prescribed for us the following remedies: the NRA, the AAA, the CWA, the PWA, forced credit inflation, devaluation of the dollar, and government loans to practically everybody who cannot get a loan from a bank. . . . Economists have no faith in such cures. . . .

"We have been asked whether we are better off than we were a year and a half ago. The answer is an overwhelming yes. We are better off for the simple reason that we are a year and a half farther along the road to recovery, a year and a half farther away from 1929. The same answer would be given if we had never had a new deal. The same answer can be given by a Canadian, a Jap, a Swede, an Indian or a Brazilian. The time required for the recovery process is an uncertain variable. It is not predictable. . . . A modern Rip Van Winkle could have gone to sleep in January 1933 and slept through all the noise in perfect confidence that he would awaken in July 1934 in a more prosperous country. He could go to sleep now and set his alarm for July 1935 with the same assurance. If we had been asked whether we are better off than we would be if there had never been a recovery program, that would be quite a different question. We should probably say, 'ask another.' There is no certain answer. The alleviating and psychological elements in the program have been so powerful and the specific recovery efforts so harmful that a balance is difficult to strike. In other words if Washington had been sealed up, so to speak, like a condemned building, with the country quarantined against the AAA, the NRA, the PWA, the CWA, the Bankhead Act, the Frazier Lemke Act, the Banking Act, the whole monetary program and all the rest the country would be in somewhat better economic state, with real wages a little higher production a little greater, investment a little more active. This is not a reckless statement.

"The statistical indices point to recovery all over the world. . . . The popular notion that there are three kinds of lies—ordinary lies, damned lies and statistics—is not quite correct. Statistics never lie. But they can be misunderstood, distorted or deliberately misused. . . . Consider unemployment, for example. . . . Let us estimate that in the last year and a half the unemployed have dropped from about 13,000,000 to about 9,000,000. It happened that during this reduction of distress the NRA was installed. It also happens that over the same period the figures show an increase in Japanese beetles, nudist colonies, the birth rate among families on the Government charity rolls and sales of tennis racquets. To ascribe the increase in employment to the NRA without further proof is as unsound as to ascribe it to the increase in the beetles. . . . The only safe conclusion from the evidence is that when recovery once starts nothing can stop it.

"Here, as everywhere else, recovery is on the way, not because of the New Deal, but because of the Old Economics. You can see the returning prosperity, without bothering with curves and graphs. . . . Trying to force recovery by statute is like standing up in a sailboat and blowing on the sails. The speed of the boat is determined by forces outside it. Fortunately, the recovery process is resistless, like the tides, and the arbitrary interference of auto-intoxicated legislators cannot stop it.

"The profound fears of thoughtful men as to the future of the nation are hardly justified. They are making the same error the Government has been making, the one thinking that by a third lot of manipulations it can force recovery, the other thinking that a series of legislative lucheries can stop recovery. There is widespread fear that the failure of artificial recovery making will lead, in the rather hard winter ahead, to further outpouring of money, followed by violent inflation and financial chaos. This is most unlikely. In the race between recovery and further experiments, this writer puts his bet on recovery. His entry is guided by all history and all the known facts of economics. The other entry has only unsupported experiment to pilot it. Recovery will be under the wire before experimentation can untangle its legs from the starness."

White farmers of the Salt River Valley of Arizona are justly incensed because Japs and other objectionable aliens are gradually, but certainly, weeding them out through "peaceful invasion." The Arizona Whites are demanding that they be protected in their holdings, by the ousting of the objectionables, and they are entitled to complete, and immediate, protection. This situation in Arizona is similar to that in California.

Both states have alien land laws, which are instantly evaded by the not-wanted aliens, with the assistance of dollar-worshiping yellow-White landowners and shyster attorneys, and law-enforcement (?) officials who, in California at least, have failed miserably in their duty. The White citizens of both states should force, by lawful means, compliance with the alien land law, and the limit punishment of all guilty of its evasion or attempted evasion. Really, the most despicable offenders are the backboneless public officials and the yellow-White landowners and shysters.

At election time, many seekers after public office become mightily concerned about governmental conditions, and promise reforms which, if elected, they would not even attempt to bring about. Pre-election promises are, generally speaking, but concoctions to attract and entrap the voter-sucker. Base your vote-judgment on yesterday's and today's public records of each candidate, not on his tomorrow's promises. Do that, and officials with the determination and the guts to bring about needed reforms will be chosen.

The San Francisco Board of Supervisors unanimously voted a reduction of salaries of public officials ranging from three to fourteen percent, to replenish the relief fund.

Contrast the situation in Los Angeles County, whence comes much whining about depleted relief funds. Has that Board of Supervisors voted, or even suggested, salary reductions? Instead, the proposed salary-fund of the 1934-35 tax-budget provides for salary increases amounting to $2,043,440! One "super" says a million-dollar salary reduction will not balance the budget. So, no reduction; brainy business!

In Los Angeles City, a proposal to submit to the voters a reduced salary schedule for public employes was turned down by the City Council. Of course, the councilmen are so concerned (?) about the sad plight of thousands of taxpayers, they could not possibly take a chance on having the pay of themselves and other "servants of the people" reduced! Incidentally, the Councilmen have provided plenty of funds to operate the taxpayers-owned autos in which they carry on, politically.

This is certain: there is no hope for reduction in the cost of government in Los Angeles City and County unless, and until, the taxpaying-voters force a reduction, either by a needed change in the heads of the two governmental bodies or via the initiative. Why delay?

"Evidence is accumulating in current events," says the "St. Helena Star," "that if the United States Government does not awaken to the danger of the reds and communists who are now infesting this country and drive every last one of them out, they will, within a comparatively few years, drive the remainder of us out. If this land is to continue to be the home of the brave and the land of the free, real bravery must be shown in coping with a situation that is more alarming than the majority of the people will admit."

For the fiscal year ended June 30, the Federal Government's ordinary expenditures totaled $3,101,000,000, and the emergency expenditures totaled $4,004,000,000, a grand total of $7,105,000,000. The receipts totaled $3,116,000,000, leaving a deficit of $3,989,000,000. For the fiscal year, the public debt increased $4,514,000,000, totaling at the year's close $27,053,000,000.

Also, the number of Federal Government employes is mounting upward! For the fiscal year, 95,662 persons were added to the payrolls, bringing the total to 661,094. March 4, 1933, there were 110,000 Federal Government employes not under civil service; July 6, 1934, the number had increased to 199,000.

According to the "Sebastopol Times," that Sonoma County district is now free of Filipino laborers, and several Whites have found employment. The good work was accomplished by an anti-Filipino committee in which Native Sons were very active. Other similarly infested districts of California should, for the good of California and in the interest of its thousands of unemployed White citizens, follow the lead of "old" Sonoma. There's plenty of constructive work, along this line, for Native Sons in nearly every county of the state.

The State Education Board at a Del Mar, San Diego County, special session, made it mandatory for all students, teachers, instructors and employes of state teachers colleges and special state schools to make this oath of allegiance: "I pledge myself, without reservation, to obey, support and respect the Constitution and laws of the United States. I pledge myself to refrain from negatively or positively advocating the use of methods not sanctioned by the Constitution and the laws of the United States to effect the modification or replacement of the form of government of the United States." The oath is fine! But, why restrict it to those identified with teachers colleges and special schools? It should be extended to include every school supported in whole or in part by public funds, not excepting the universities.

Publicity to bolster up appeals for public funds to induce more people to come to California features reported payment of $731,610 in gasoline taxes by out-of-state tourists. Of course, there is no mention of the huge sum tourists have drawn from public-relief funds. Probably also, considerable of the played-up gas taxes came from those funds. And too, no mention was made of the fact that an average of 1,000 out-of-staters a month have been arriving in California for the taxpayers of this state to support.

Any and all available funds that promoters would use to induce "tourists" to come to California should, at least in these times, be diverted to relieving want among thousands of needy permanent residents.

At a recent meeting of the California Presbyterian Synodical Conference, a Jap speaker said there are 115,000 of his people in the state and he asked support of a plan to christianize them. He would have been nearer correct had he stated that there are 300,000 and more Japs here. Any way, why support a plan impossible of fulfillment!

The American Legion of California has a five-point legislative program. The proposals therein pertaining to aliens should have the unanimous backing of citizens. The Legion has evidence aplenty that aliens are being given first consideration, and that citizens are offered what is left. If the value of citizenship is to be maintained, that condition must be effectually and speedily remedied.

In resigning as superintendent of the Los Angeles County charity department, Earl E. Jensen said: "I . . . vehemently deplore the actions of politicians who have continuously hampered the honest and efficient administration of the charities department."

It is quite evident there should be a cleanup of the "Angel" County charity department, but it is a near-certainty that ruling politicians will not permit that. Publication of the names of all those subsisting off the taxpayers' charity-millions—not only the bread-and-butter beneficiaries but, also, the employes of the "welfare" department—is suggested. The political racketeers would probably term that scandalous and oppose it with all their force. There's been too much scandal dribbling out of government-hill, anyway!

In an address at the American Legion of California convention in San Francisco, National Commander Edward A. Hayes truthfully declared: "It is not an insurrection of the ignorant that we need fear. It is the laziness of the intellectual."

The White wife of a Filipino attempted suicide at Gilroy, Santa Clara County, because, as she said, she had been scorned by close friends following her marriage. Hurrah for the scorners! Any White whose self-respect has become so lowered that he or she will wed a Filipino, or any Oriental, is deserving of no sympathy and should be scorned generally.

Several initiative measures have qualified for the November ballot, among them a proposed gross-income tax, which should be carefully studied. Californians are tax-burdened to the verge of bankruptcy; a well-planned gross-income tax, with no exemptions whatever, would lift the burden.

That politicians and "brain trusters" cannot successfully cope with Nature, is plentifully evidenced by crop conditions in this country. Crops were deliberately destroyed, while millions were in want, and now the consumers must pay the fiddling bill.

August 4, one hundred and forty-four years ago, the United States Coast Guard came into being. Created by the First Congress, in 1790, it was originally known as the "Revenue Marine."

California has under irrigation some 3,400,000 acres of land, according to the State Public Works Department. Twenty-four major reservoirs are in use.

The Lake Merritt regatta, an annual Oakland, Alameda County, event, is to be held September 8.

ADMISSION DAY AT SACRAMENTO

CALIFORNIA'S EIGHTY-FOURTH birthday anniversary—Admission Day—drew an immense crowd—among the number some 20,000 members of the Orders of Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West—to Sacramento City, September 8, 9 and 10, to enjoy and participate in the Admission Day festival arranged by the Native Sons and the Native Daughters of Sacramento County. The program was carried out as detailed in The Grizzly Bear for September, and each featured event was well received.

At the Native Sons group initiation outofdoors at historic Sutter Fort, Saturday night, twenty candidates were presented, ten of them by Sunset Parlor No. 26 (Sacramento) and two each by Sacramento No. 3, Stockton No. 7, Elk Grove No. 41, Silver Star No. 63 (Lincoln) and Santa Monica Bay No. 267 (Santa Monica) Parlors. Joe G. Fitzhenry called the gathering to order. The ritual was exemplified by:

Sunday morning, in the Memorial Grove of State Capitol Park, a native redwood tree was planted, and dedicated to the memory of the late Governor James Rolph (Hesperian Parlor No. 137 N.S.G.W.). A bronze plaque at the base of the tree is inscribed: "In memory of our late Governor James Rolph Jr. Presented by N.D.G.W. and N.S.G.W. of Sacramento, Sept. 9, 1934."

Mrs. Genevieve Didion presided at the ceremonies, and an invocation was given by Dr. Eva R. Rasmussen, Past Grand President N.D.G.W. The tree was presented to the state by Mrs. Edna Briggs, Grand Marshal N.D.G.W., and was accepted by Lieutenant-Governor Frank F. Merriam, acting Governor. Addresses were delivered by Angelo J. Rossi, San Francisco Mayor; Mrs. Gladys E. Noce, Grand President N.D.G.W., and Chas. A. Koenig, Grand President N.S.G.W.

During the ceremonies instrumental selectio were played by the municipal band of San Fra cisco, and vocal selections were rendered by Mi Dorothy Williams and Walter Leitch.

The big feature of the celebration was t Admission Day parade, Monday morning. Ma up of thirteen divisions and requiring two hou to pass a given point, it was among the very be parades ever staged by the Native Sons and t Native Daughters to honor the birthday of the native state—California. Thousands lined t route of march, and generously applauded t marchers. The parade was headed by Willia A. Reuter and Mrs. Edna B. Briggs, Grand Ma shals, respectively, of the Native Sons and t Native Daughters. All of the participating Pa lors of both Orders made splendid showings, a the members of many were attired in most a tractive new uniforms.

"Sacramento has had many parades," co mented an onlooker, "but only a few in t long history of the Capital rank with the o that passed in review today. Stretching f miles along the streets, the parade formed magnificent and mighty panorama of color—a an outline of California history."

GRIZZLY GROWLS

NOTE Expressions of opinion in these "Growls" are, unless indicated otherwise, those of the Managing Editor.
CLARENCE M. HUNT.

SPEAKING AT GREEN BAY, WISCONSIN, President Franklin D. Roosevelt said, "I received two letters from important men, both of them pleading that I say something to restore confidence. To both of them I wrote identical answers: 'What would you like to have me say?'" In the "United States News," David H. Lawrence answered the query with, "Here is about what businessmen would have the President say":

"First, that the politicians and grafters will be driven out of the national capital forthwith and that political patronage and the spoils system will be exterminated and honest and efficient personnel brought into all departments of government. Second, that the budget and finances of the Government will be so handled as to permit a real and not a theoretical limitation on spending—a balanced budget by June 30, 1936. Third, that 'small-minded' men be carefully extracted from responsible positions at Washington and in their place people placed whose concept of government is one of fairness and honesty, with an equitable attitude toward all interests, large and small.

"Fourth, that the NRA will be reorganized at once and that injustices toward smaller enterprises will be removed and that monopolies will be tabooed for all businesses. Fifth, that the Government will not engage in competition with private business. Sixth, that Government will not confiscate private property. Seventh, that Government will institute a system of taxation that will not kill all incentive or stifle the operations of business and capital. Eighth, that besides promising that honest business has nothing to fear, a statement pledging the acts of Government to be even-handed as between capital and labor will be made. Ninth, that costs of production will not be increased by Government acts that cater to political demagoguery or the desire to favor one class as against another.

"Tenth, that the plain misrepresentations of the collective bargaining clause in the law will be publicly and conspicuously repudiated by the President himself so that labor troubles may be diminished and economic losses reduced. Eleventh, that greenbackism and the issuance of fiat money will not be undertaken by the Federal Government. Twelfth, that the Government has no intention of setting up a regulatory system that puts all business on a public utility basis of supposedly 'fair return.' Thirteenth, that the President does not intend to take over for public ownership and operation the railroads or the public utilities and saddle the American people with increased public debt and increasing bureaucracy. Fourteenth, that the capital markets will be encouraged. . . .

"Fifteenth, that doles and subsidies will be confined to persons in need and not to projects or individuals who are merely leaning on a paternalistic government. Sixteenth, that a definite program for the encouragement of private spending to replace public spending or the 'priming of the pump' will be formulated. Seventeenth, that a comprehensive tax system based on a spread of collections rather than a narrow base will be recommended and pushed for passage at the next session of Congress without trying to make taxation a football of politics."

Wesley M. Miller Jr., in "Boyland," a Congregational Church publication, says: "We hear much about a possible war between Japan and the United States. When we analyze the causes which might precipitate such a conflict, we find . . . the real difficulty between the two countries . . . over section 13C of the United States Immigration Act of 1924, which is known as the 'Japanese Exclusion Act.' . . . In my opinion this act should be repealed. Such blunt racial discrimination is unwise. It is just as prudent for one individual to trod on the ego of another, for the same consequences result."

The Congregational Church is affiliated with the Federation of Churches of Christ in America. Japan's propaganda dispenser in this country. The Exclusion Law is not discriminatory. What the Federation and Miller really want is removal of all restrictions so that Japs may come in, lawfully, by the thousands. Regardless of the Exclusion Law, numbers of them continue to get in, unlawfully. Miller and the Federation would, no doubt, gladly surrender the United States to Japan to assure peace.

In a Constitution Day, September 17, address at the Chicago World's Fair, James A. Reed, former United States Senator from Missouri,—and who, incidentally, materially aided in keeping the United States out of the League of Nations, for which a vast majority of the people are very grateful—declared:

"If the paralyzing hand of government can only be arrested and lifted from the backs and souls of the people, the infinite energies of our race will prevail, and through the night of this depression will shine again the sun of prosperity. I still believe in the wisdom of the founders. . . . The Constitution of the United States is the keynote of the arch of human liberty. Destroy it, and liberty is dead. Paternalism is the keystone of the arch of despotism. Reestablish it, and tyranny again will mock the rights of man."

California's able and fearless United States Senator, Hiram W. Johnson, a Native Son, received unprecedented, and fully deserved, endorsement from his constituents at the August primary. In a San Francisco Labor Day address lauding the "New Deal," Senator Johnson said:

"Many of those now constituting themselves the self-appointed guardians of the Constitution are lugubriously crying against what they are pleased to term assaults upon and violations of that instrument. So long as they deemed the Constitution the shield and the buckler of the sacrosanct right of exploiting the few, the voices of those loudest in tender solicitude were unheard in this land. Now they are heard in cacophonous shrieks. . . .

"The men who laughed at statute and justice for all, the lawyers who taught them to skate on thin legal ice, the very ones who in defiance of every ordinance of God and man actually brought on the depression . . . are now in full cry against the measures designed to cure the disease with which they have inoculated the body politic."

The one and only certain "road to Utopia," said a speaker at the Native Sons Luncheon Club of Los Angeles, is the Constitution of the United States of America, mapped and plainly signed by the Founders of the Republic. Detours, to the right and to the left, lead to nowhere, but result in confusion and depression. The safe and sane course is the middle of the Constitution-road, and until we return thereto there can be no real progress.

State division bobbed up again, in the special session of the State Legislature. A resolution authorizing appointment of a committee to investigate the question failed of passage. Commenting thereon, the "Livermore Herald" said editorially:

"State division talk is in and should meet with general disfavor. Whatever arguments there are for it are based largely on jealousies and more or less petty difficulties which are not beyond the power of reasonable men to solve without resorting to dismemberment of the commonwealth. California is a big state and its resources are widely diversified. Its very size brings some problems which are at the same time among its most valuable assets. A proper utilization of all its varied assets should be the goal of every Californian and then division would die forever and a day."

Egoist, "I, ————",

Cure all for economic ills.

Contrary to common belief, the exodus of Mexis from the United States is not increasing, according to Dr. Paul S. Taylor of the University of California's economics department. The net total of Mexis leaving this country for their homeland since 1930 is 270,000, which represents, he says, but 19 percent of the Mexi population of the United States in 1930. The exodus reached its peak in 1931, with a net movement of 115,344, two years later it dropped to 31,484.

An official of the American Legion recently declared one thousand Mexis went out via San Diego one day, and two thousand came in via Mexicali the same day. Any way, these undesirable and very expensive aliens should be permanently forced out and no substitutes should be permitted to enter. Thousands of American citizens are in need of employment; why tolerate or import alien Mexis?

Speaking in Boise, Idaho, September 13, at ceremonies commemorating the centennial of the founding of Fort Boise, United States Senator William E. Borah said:

"As a result of the war, the world is now afflicted with every form of ism which the ingenuity of the human brain could conceive. The danger of such a situation arises out of the fact that economic distress fertilizes the soil for the snares which audacious men scatter with ruthless hand. We can afford to take a leaf from the book of the pioneer.

"Into the wilderness, into these mountain fastnesses, amid great privations and many a long season of deep adversity, the pioneer brought the sound principles of American civilization, always fighting the lawlessness which naturally characterized the frontier life for the establishment of sound democratic principles and the maintenance of a government of order and law. Nothing is finer than the fidelity of the pioneer to the great underlying principles of constitutional government. We can do no better than emulate his example."

White citizens of Arizona are continuing their efforts to rid that state of ineligible-to-citizenship Japs and Hindus who are attempting to grab fertile agricultural land. May success crown their efforts within the law.

California citizens should also get busy, and rid, by lawful process, this state of the horde of Oriental aliens holding, illegally, thousands of acres of land. Unless that be done the Japs will, in time, be the masters and the rulers here. Never forget: the destiny of California, or any country, rests with the possessors of the soil!

Dr. Olive Stott Gabriel, president National Association Women Lawyers, charged, in Chicago, that "discrimination against women in business and the professions has increased as a result of economic conditions." Good news, if the reference be to married women with able-bodied husbands. May the discrimination continue on the increase.

Revelations from the Federal Senate's investigation of the activities of munition makers further strengthens the oft-repeated growl that dishonesty, in and out of government, brought on the depression. What this country needs, if a return of a stable prosperity be desired, is the banishment of political racketeers and a reenthronement, in and out of government, of Honesty.

Addressing the international relations section of the Commonwealth Club of California at San Francisco, Julean Arnold, for many years United States commercial attache in China, stated that we place too much importance, consideration and stress on the fear of hurting the feelings of Japan or increasing that nation's suspicion.

He said that there is no end to Japanese suspicion and that our policy should not be dictated by the necessity of allaying Japan's suspicions. He pointed out that it is time we should be offended instead of motivating our conduct by fear of giving offense to Japan. At the same time, we should look out for our own interests and feelings as well as those of Japan.

Quoting from a Constitution Day statement prepared by Henry Lester Smith, president National Education Association:

"The Constitution is of course a document that was drawn up to meet a particular situation existing decades ago; consequently it may not contain all the provisions that the present demands. Change is essential in any living organization. Let us remember, however, that there is a constituted procedure through which any needed changes can be made in our fundamental law. Let us all be on the alert, therefore, to strengthen our Constitution, to work for desirable modifications of it, to insure its proper protection, and to see to it that it is not violated through our indifference, our lack of courage, or our willful breaking of its provisions.

THE MISSIONS OF CALIFORNIA

IN 1791, ON SEPTEMBER 25, SANTA CRUZ Mission, the first in the establishment of which Father Serra did not have a part, was founded. On October 9 of the same year the Mission de Santissima de la Soledad came into being. This mission progressed slowly at first but in 1811 it had 611 neophytes. For a period of several years after this, matters progressed peacefully and well, without particular event.

When Diego de Borica became governor of California, he saw the need of more missions to fill the gaps between those already founded, that there might be a complete chain that would cover the state and make conquest easier and more thorough, and he suggested five new missions.

San Jose, the first of the five, was founded about twelve miles north of the pueblo of San Jose on June 11, 1797. At the end of the first year there were thirty-one neophytes. The mission prospered and in 1805 the neophytes numbered 821. In 1808 a substantial adobe church and sacristy, both roofed with tiles, were completed. Simultaneously with the establishing of San Jose, preparations were under way to found San Juan Bautista to fill the gap between Santa Clara and San Carlos. The ceremonies of founding were performed on June 24, 1797, before a large group of Gentiles. By the end of 1805 the converts at this mission numbered 1219.

As soon as Father Lausen had rested himself, he proceeded to the next site that had been selected, between San Antonio and San Luis Obispo, about thirty-three miles distant from each. Father Lausen pronounced the site beautiful and in every respect satisfactory. The dedication, to Gloriosismo Principe Arcangel San Miguel, was held on July 25, 1797. On the afternoon of the day of the founding, the Indians, impressed by what they had seen, presented fifteen of their children for baptism.

The first missionaries to take charge here were Fathers Buenaventura Sitjar and Antonio de la Concepcion. They had not proceeded far with the erection of the church and other buildings, before it was perceived that Father Concepcion was insane. Instead of attending to his duties and keeping the Indians at work, he conceived the idea of having a grand military display and compelled the soldiers to fire rounds of blank cartridges and the Indians to discharge flights of arrows. The sound of firearms and the sight of mimic warfare aggravated the disordered condition of his imagination, and, fancying himself a great ruler, he assumed despotic authority, and in a short time by his extravagances and violence threw everything into chaos. Father Sitjar, thoroughly alarmed, hastened to Santa Barbara to consult with Father Lausen; the soldiers were confused; the Indians of San Antonio and San Luis Obispo, who had been sent to assist in the work of construction, ran back to their respective missions, and the Gentiles of the place looked on in superstitious terror. Father Lausen adopted swift measures of relief: he dispatched Father Miguel of Santa Barbara with instructions to remove the unfortunate Father Concepcion and take him to Monterey. This was done, and thence the insane missionary was sent to the College of San Fernando, there to be cared for.

On September 8, 1797, on a spot about forty-eight miles east of San Buenaventura and thirty miles north of San Gabriel, Father Lausen, in company with Father Francisco Dumets, founded the mission of San Fernando Rey de Espana. This mission was first under the care of Fathers Dumets and Juan Cortez, and prospered. The missionaries here broke the usual rule by taking up their abode in the house of Francisco Reyes, who had previously occupied the place as a rancho. At the end of the year a chapel and other structures were built, and at the end of 1799 there were two hundred converts. In 1805 there were 1100.

On June 17, 1798, the fifth and last of the missions suggested by Governor Borica, San Luis Rey de Francia, was founded on a location five miles from the ocean, thirty-five miles north of San Diego and thirty miles south of San Juan Capistrano. The Indians in the vicinity were numerous and evinced a desire to be taken into the church. On the first day fifty-four children were presented for baptism, and three of the principal chiefs offered themselves. In 1805 the converts numbered 900, in 1811, 1500, and in 1830, 2780, nearly twice as many as in any other mission of Alta California.

Thus by the end of 1798 the hard-working friars had succeeded in establishing eighteen missions at vantage points throughout Upper California.

The year 1797 seems to have been the year of hardest work in establishing the missions. Within the year Father Lausen, at the age of seventy-seven, practically established four missions within a few months. The burden of supervision and administration of all eighteen missions rested heavily on the weary shoulders of the aged presidente. Yet the old man gladly devoted himself to work without pay, his salary as a missionary having ceased when he became presidente. He lived, as he said, on the alms of his Franciscan brethren and was chiefly anxious for the welfare of a poor sister named Clara, whom he feared to leave unprovided for.

In 1800, Borica retired as governor and died the following year. This greatly affected Father Lausen, whose own health had now begun to fail. In 1803 he took to his bed and twelve days afterward, on June 26, he died at San Carlos at the age of eighty-three, worn out by his labors.

Father Lausen was a man of refinement, scholarly attainments, broad views, and kindly feelings. La Perouse, a Frenchman, who visited him in 1786, pronounced Father Lausen one of the finest gentlemen he had ever met, and testified that his mildness, charity and affection for the Indians were beyond expression.

Father Lausen was succeeded as presidente of the missions by Father Esteven Tapis. Father Tapis took up his residence at Carmel, and as soon as his duties would permit proceeded to the founding of a mission at Lajalupe. September 17, 1804, was the date of the founding and the name given to the mission was Santa Ines.

Soon after the founding of this mission, it was threatened with a massacre as dreadful as that at San Diego; but was saved by the bravery and faithfulness of a little Indian girl, Pasquala, who in return for the kindness of the missionaries braved pain and death in order to warn the padres in time to avert an attack on them by her people.

In 1806 a long-tiled building was completed. This was badly shattered by the earthquake of 1812. The founding of this mission, the nineteenth in northern California, closed all the gaps from San Francisco to San Diego.

These nineteen missions seemed to be all that were necessary, judging the situation from a purely religious standpoint. But in 1812 the Russians again began to encroach. Under the pretext of hunting seal they had established a post at Fort Ross, and their farm land reached to within fifty miles of San Francisco. The government and the missionaries became alarmed. The result was the establishment of two more missions to the north of San Francisco to act as barriers to the Russian menace; one at San Rafael was founded in 1817, the other at Sonoma in 1823.

This completed the chain of twenty-one missions of California. A peaceful conquest, unparalleled in history—an heroic work, without intrinsic compensation, but of great honor to the Franciscan Order.

All the missions thrived and continued to grow and progress. Some more than others, as was to be expected. Locations were different, some being nearer to and some farther away from the base of supplies. The soil of the farm land differed. Though they could grow all kinds of fruit at one mission, at another they had to be content with grazing and grain crops. However, everything seemed to fulfill the promises and expectations of the founder. The Indians were gradually brought into the fold, taught farming, tanning, shoemaking, weaving and milling at some of the missions; at others they were trained to be expert vaqueros, taking charge of the growing herds of sheep, cattle and horses. Thus for fifty years California and her missions presented an exceedingly prosperous and peaceful picture.

The buildings of the missions were not completed at the time of the founding. It took from ten to fifteen years to build the beautiful towers with their chimes of silvery bells and the church and work shops. These picturesque looking structures were a welcome sight for many weary travelers going from Monterey to San Diego. Travelers were always welcome, as the padres liked to discuss the latest news and exchange ideas. We learn from the narratives of that day that one might have free board and lodging every night at one or another of the missions, if traveling the romantic Camino Real.

The revolution in Mexico upset conditions in northern California. Such interference, jealousy, petty annoyances, and curtailment of their liberty were indulged in by some of the Mexican officials that many of the padres refused to sign approval of the new republic. This led to secularization of the missions and the loss of administrative power by the padres, resulting in the disruption and decadence of the missions, the reckless slaughter of their flocks, and the undoing of all the good they had accomplished in teaching the Indians. The poor savages were thrown on their own resources and wandered again in broken bands, prey to diseases. Some of the Spanish settlers felt no compunction in accepting grants of the former mission lands and treating the Indians as serfs.

The saddest part of the whole story is that after more than a century of the hardest and most faithful and unselfish missionary labor—after the Indians had been taught to a marked degree self-confidence and self-esteem and a semblance of self-reliance—had been transformed from ignorant barbarians into successful farmers and stockmen—the law of secularization should be brought into force and so throw the Indians back on their own resources and compel them to live a life of independence from mission control—a life they were not ready to live. They could not discern the difference between liberty and license and so they did not survive. To realize how rapidly and completely this pitiable race has been blotted out, one need but consult the records: at the time of the gold rush to California, in the district that is now Glenn, Colusa and Tehama Counties, there were about 12,000 Indians; in 1926 there were only twenty-two.

Under American regulations, the mission buildings with an adequate amount of land were restored to the church. The surplus land reverted to the government. So, in the end, the Indians possessed nothing. Retreating before the inrush of white settlers, they went back to their wild life, far less able to cope with its conditions after some fifty years of civilization and discipline. A few of the friars remained till they died to take care of the spiritual welfare of their scattered and diminished flocks. The majority departed for other mission fields or returned to their monasteries in Mexico and Europe.

PLANTING THE CROSS

Having finished the history of the missions we can now turn to the system by which the patient friars endeavored to win the Indian from their lives of barbarism and heathenism. It is true that flaws may be discovered in the mission system of dealing with the Indian; it is difficult to discover any other system which has done, or which would have done, better. The problem of civilizing a wild people has baffled others than the padres. On the whole the mission system is truly remarkable for the degree of humanity and practical ingenuity which it reveals; it is the more remarkable when one considers the conditions under which and the time in which it operated.

The missionaries entered upon their duties well equipped for their almost superhuman task. They had made the classical, philosophical and theological studies prescribed for priests the world over; and at the missionary College of San Fernando they were told what to expect and what was expected of them among the savages. Many of the friars excelled in the philosophical and sacred sciences, and, more important, they were thoroughly religious. Others were less brilliant, but every one of the friars devoted himself to his missionary work absolutely devoid of selfish, pecuniary or other worldly interest. The friars had relinquished by vow every the right to possess or accumulate property or worldly goods.

When about to start a mission the padres searched for a locality where the Indian population was numerous, where good land and water abounded, and where a sufficient supply of timber was within reach. So unerring was the judgment that the sites on which the missions are located are without exception the best localities in California. On a spot protected against high winds and inundations a cross was solemnly raised and blessed in order to mark the site of the church; for the house of worship was invariably the first building erected. Rude huts for the two missionaries, male servants and guards followed. Later these temporary structures were replaced with adobe or stone buildings, which generally formed a square with a nner court or patio. They varied in material nd size at the different establishments.

The fathers then endeavored to obtain con-erts. Curiosity frequently attracted a number of savages to witness the ceremonies of planting he cross and the work of constructing build-ngs. Gifts of food, clothing and trinkets, and above all the gentle manner of the missionaries, would move them to lend a hand in clearing he land, preparing the timbers, and erecting the emporary huts. Good meals and rewards of some kind or other gained their good will and nduced others to join them. As every little as-istance on their part was appreciated and re-warded, the Indian concluded that after all it was better to live with the kind missionaries, and have plenty to eat, than to have to be ever-astingly on the lookout for something eatable n the mountains and valleys. They were now disposed to listen to what the strange white men would try to convey through interpreters or by neans of signs. This usually caused a few to make their permanent abode under the shadow of the cross.

The catechumens at first raised their cabins after their own fashion on a plot a few hundred feet from the chapel or church. The huts erect-ed generally consisted merely of poles covered with dry grass or tules. This was the work of a day. When such a structure decayed or be-came uncomfortable by reason of the multitude of fleas, it was burnt down to make room for another. In this and similar customs that were not sinful or subversive of order, the fathers humored their converts, in some cases for years, lest they offend them. Later, however, adobe dwellings, one for each family, were built in regular order and roofed with tiles. The walls were whitewashed and thus produced a pleasing effect upon the traveler. Here the married por-tion of the neophytes lived subject to certain regulations imposed by the missionaries.

The girls from about eleven years upwards, the single women, and the wives whose husbands were absent, passed the night together in a sep-arate building. The doors were locked on the outside, and the officer or majordomo would deliver the keys to the missionaries. In the morning the same person would receive the keys, unlock the doors, and allow the inmates to join the others in exercises of the day. When not occupied the girls could visit their relatives in the mission village close by, but they were not permitted to go beyond the limits alone.

The girls remained under this gentle tutelage until they married. To be married was the height of bliss in their estimation. Marriage came about in this way: when a young man wanted a wife he would make his wishes known to the missionary. The father would tell him to make his selection, and he would then intro-duce the young man to the girl. If she was willing, the espousal took place in regular form and was recorded before witnesses, and then the day was set for the nuptials. The marriage was invariably blessed in church before the altar, after the bans, according to ecclesiastical law, had been published on three successive Sundays or feast days. The couple were next assigned one of the adobe dwellings furnished by the father. After that they formed part of the vil-lage community. If the girl was not willing to accept her suitor for husband, she was permitted to decline.

After reaching the heart of the Indian through the stomach, it was necessary to find a way to his mind and heart for the truths of religion. The road passed through the eye chiefly, as wise missionaries have experienced at all times. For this reason the fathers celebrated the divine mysteries with all the pomp available, and then insisted on the utmost reverence within the sa-cred walls. The ceremonies were explained in the course of the year in accordance with the ever-recurring calendar. The instructions, nec-essarily simple, usually began with the outward devotional practices, such as the sign of the cross, the pronouncing of the name of God, re-spectful inclinations and genuflections and the like. These preliminaries were later imparted by one of the advanced neophytes, or by the interpreter.

The catechumen was led on step by step, and the practice of daily repeating and reciting in common everything that was learned at last impressed the "Doctrina" upon the dullest mind. It then became necessary for the missionary to explain the meaning of all that had been learned by heart and of all that was observed at divine service. The greatest obstacle with which the friars had to contend was the multiplicity of languages. The neophytes were recruited from different rancherias, in which frequently differ-ent dialects and often entirely different lan-guages were spoken. Frequently the natives of these different villages when they met at the mission could not understand one another. It was impossible for the missionary to learn all of these languages. Apart from the royal man-date which required that Spanish should be taught and spoken among the neophytes, it was therefore necessary to introduce a medium of communication in order that the Indians coming from different bands might be able to converse with one another. Thus it was that Castilian became the universal tongue of the California Indians. This made it possible to instruct all the catechumens of a mission at the same time. Meanwhile the fathers made use of interpreters who rendered the instructions unto the Indians, or frequently taught the converts themselves. Several of the friars learned the dialect spoken by the majority of a mission, and then taught the neophytes in their own native idiom. How-ever, interpreters continued a standing necessity, because new candidates for baptism applied for admission who knew nothing but their own jar-gon. Changes also took place among the mis-sionaries through death, or illness, or at the ex-piration of the statutory term in years of serv-ice. Interpreters were therefore indispensable.

In order to help the dull minds of the Indians to grasp the significance of the doctrinal points, and to excite the neophytes to practice virtue or avoid evil habits, the missionaries lined and dec-orated the walls of the chapels and corridors with statues and pictures of Christ, the Blessed Virgin, angels and saints, especially of the mis-sion's patron saint. There were also pictures representing heaven, hell, death, judgment, pur-gatory, etc.; and the fourteen stations of the cross were to be found in every mission. Pro-cessions were frequent, and the Indians fondly participated. The procession of Corpus Christi Day especially affected the neophytes as nothing else could.

The daily order at all the missions was as fol-lows: at sunrise the bell called to church all those over nine years of age. Holy mass was celebrated by one of the fathers, whilst the other recited aloud the prayers and the "Doc-trina" with the Indians. At the conclusion the "Alabado" was sung after a melody which was the same at all the missions. During certain seasons of the year, an instruction in Spanish followed the celebration of holy mass. All would then take breakfast. This consisted of atole, a kind of gruel made of corn or grain which had been roasted before it was ground. It was prepared in large iron kettles. Every family sent for its share, which was ample, in bark or earthen vessels. The girls and young men took their meals in their respective quar-ters. After breakfast, which lasted about forty-five minutes, the men and larger boys went to the work assigned in the field, among the live-stock, or in the shops. The girls and single women found occupation under the care of the matron. At noon the angelus bell announced the time for dinner. This was served in the same manner as the breakfast, but consisted of pozole, a gruel to which meat, beans, peas, len-tils or garbanzos were added according to the

MARKER FOR ADOBE BUILT BY ONLY PRESIDENT OF CALIFORNIA REPUBLIC

(LENA E. RHOADES.)

RED BLUFF (TEHAMA COUNTY) ON the bank of a picturesque bluff overlooking the Sacramento River, stands an adobe house, 90 years old, built by General William Brown Ide, the first and only President of the California Republic. The house, situated about a mile north of Red Bluff, was built of adobe and is yet in an excellent state of preservation.

August 25 a highway marker, indicating the location of the historic landmark, was dedicated under the auspices of Berendos Parlor No 23 N.D.G.W. Mrs. Elizabeth Godholt acted as chairman, and Past Grand President Olive Bedford Matlock gave a pleasing talk on the origin of the Native Daughter organization and the part it has had in preserving the pioneer history and landmarks of California. John D. Sweeney, chairman Tehama County Historical Society, read several letters from members of the Ide family as evidence that the adobe house was without question the home for a time of Ide and his family. Following is a synopsis of his address:

"William Brown Ide was born in Rutland, Worcester County, Massachusetts, March 28, 1796. He worked with his father as a carpenter and joiner until he became of age. His education was limited to the common schools of the time, about two months in winter and the same in summer. April 17, 1820, he married Sarah G. Haskell, and to them were born nine children.

"In 1833, William B. Ide started west, going to Kentucky and later to Illinois. About 1844 he started for Oregon with his wife and five children, and was driving quite a herd of cattle. After about four weeks' travel they reached Independence, Missouri, where they joined a fleet of wagons numbering 100. Ide became captain of the cattle guard. At Fort Hall, the party voted to come to California. The trip was successful, and they reached Sutter's Fort, where Ide met Peter Lassen, who engaged him to come to Deer Creek to build a sawmill. After settling at Deer Creek, Peter Lassen wanted the Ide cabin, so they started on again, crossed the river at the old town of Tehama, and spent the winter at the headquarters of R. L. Thomas. It was about this time that Ide built the adobe house.

"June 11, 1846, a number of Americans, armed, crossed the Sacramento near the mouth of the Feather River and started for Sonoma. The leader was Merritt; among the number were Ide, Semple and Ford, and others joined until there were thirty-two in the party. These were stirring times in this province. Fremont had been ordered from this territory, and had been brought back from Oregon by Lieutenant Gillespie of the United States Army. Castro, leader of the Mexicans, had issued his famous proclamation, and the Americans had little love for him. So, when the little band headed by Merritt reached Sonoma they wanted to capture the location and free it from Mexican control.

"In the early morning of June 14, they surrounded the home of General Vallejo. Merritt, Semple and Knight entered, to notify Vallejo he was their prisoner. After a short while the old general brought forth rich wines and select brandies. Things went on happily inside for hours, but when the sun began to rise those outside became alarmed. One, Grigsby, was sent in—another long wait. Those outside sat on restless horses. 'Go inside, Ide, and come out and let us know what is going on.' No sooner said than done. There sat the leaders, some lying with heads on the table, Doe Semple trying, half seas over, to draw up articles of capitulation, and the rest as bad. Ide reported his findings. A call for hasty action was made. They had no orders from Fremont. Grigsby came out and said he had been deceived. The party was about to break up. Ide stood firm, declaring he would leave his bones rather than depart. 'We must be robbers or conquerors.' The men rallied. Ide was made commander. He at once secured all arms and munitions and the town was fortified for fear of attack. Ide then drew up his famous proclamation. They dared not raise the American flag, as they did not know that there was war between Mexico and our Nation. So they declared the country a republic, and Ide its President. And they proceeded to make the Bear Flag. Later the Stars and Stripes was raised, thus ending the California Republic.

"Tehama County was formed out of Colusi (Colusa), Butte and Shasta Counties. Before that the town of Tehama was in Colusi County. Ide was made one of the first peace officers. Later he was chosen as judge of the county court of Colusi County at Monroeville. There he found permanent settlers to be few. Floating voters controlled elections, and there were many of such, as this was in the days of the gold rush. Officers elected would not serve, others fleeced the public every possible way. Others resigned to go to the mines. He took over the county money. He made with his own hands the county jail.

"In a letter to his brother he wrote: 'I am at present by virtue of the elective franchise judge of the county court, civil and criminal, president of the commissioners court or court of sessions, judge of probate; and by appointment, duly recorded, I am county clerk, clerk of the district court (9th district), clerk of the court of sessions, clerk of the probate court, county recorder and county auditor. These at present limit my official duties.' In the winter of 1852, Ide was taken sick and died at Monroeville, where he is buried. He had been absent from his family for a long time. The absolute spot of his burial is not known at this time."

CALIFORNIA FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

ALL CALIFORNIA WAS ABLAZE EVERY evening during October 1884 with bonfires, torchlight processions and candle illuminations, preceding the saving of the country by the advice of spellbinders in each political party. Marching clubs of "Plumed Knights" and other titles made excursions to neighboring towns and filled the circumambient air with enthusiasm. Brass bands blared, and cheering crowds welcomed all stump-speakers.

Devoted partisans of each party adopted a distinguishing headgear. What was called the "Blaine hat" was of a light gray color and stovepipe hight, while the "Cleveland hat" was of a brown color and the same altitude. One of the grandest rallies of the campaign was held in Sacramento City, October 20. One of its several divisions was composed of the "Joe McKenna Guards." Numbering nearly 200, they were excellently mounted and looked like a handsome bunch of cavalrymen.

A political party styled "Taxpayers" was formed in San Francisco and put a municipal ticket in the field.

The first Chinaman to register in San Francisco as a voter did so October 7; he was a native Californian. Peter Joseph, aged 104, believed to be the state's oldest voter, also registered in San Francisco.

October had four rainy days. The rainfall for the month was 2.01 inches, making the total for the season 2.61 inches. In southern California but .40 of an inch of rain fell.

The cornerstone of a San Bernardino City public school building was laid with appropriate ceremonies October 1.

A man named Wilson, arrested for abducting a Chinawoman from the stage enroute to Bodie, Mono County, in September, was being examined in the justice court at Lundy October 20. A shooting session developed in which Deputy Sheriff Kirk Steves and Charles Jardine shot each other, and Deputy Sheriff Callahan was seriously wounded by George Lee. Citizens organized a vigilance committee to drive objectionable denizens out of the place, and both sides were arming.

October was a bad month for quail hunters the following being killed by the accidental discharge of shotguns: David Ennis of San Rafael Marin County, the 16th; John Foscalna of Greenwood, El Dorado County, the 14th; William M. Bailey of Redding, Shasta County, the 12th; 13-year-old Thomas Brenson of Gilroy Santa Clara County, the 24th.

Homeless Children

A WORTHWHILE NON-SECTARIAN ENDEAVOR SPONSORED AND SUPPORTED BY THE ORDERS OF NATIVE SONS AND NATIVE DAUGHTERS OF THE GOLDEN WEST

WHEN THE DAYS GROW SHORTER and the leaves begin to fall and rain is in the air, Californians know that October is at hand and that winter is approaching. To hosts of Native Sons and Native Daughters who, from the inception of the Homeless Children work have been interested in that worthwhile endeavor, October is a reminder that it is time to decide what shall be done this year by their Parlors to help raise funds for the Homeless Children.

From April first, the beginning of the fiscal year, until October first the Parlors are willing to do whatever there is to be done in the way of visiting, reporting on families, providing milk for one, two and sometimes three children, sewing and sending children's clothes. But, during that time, from April first to October first, the Parlors do not contribute money; consequently, when a financial statement shows that there has been expended $8,000 during the period and that the income has been $2,600 from other sources, the reason will be understood.

The expenses during the first six months of this year have been less than in previous years, due to fewer children to board, reduced rent and salaries. Sixty-eight children have been placed for adoption, two replaced, and seventy homes have been secured.

The applications continue to pour in, regardless of the uncertain economic conditions. Upon investigation, to be sure, many of the applicants do not prove to be financially secure, and the workers get many a heartache, and wish that money did not need to play so necessary a part in considering the happiness of would-be parents. These disappointed applicants talk over the situation in a quiet, sane way and usually decide, without rebellion, that it probably would be unwise at this time to take upon themselves new responsibilities. The child hunger remains —they only pause in their quest, and promise themselves and us that the minute the future appears a bit more secure they will be back for "Jimmie." Others on the long list of waiting applicants are sound in every way and well able to care for and educate one or more children; busy doctors, for instance, who while having difficulties in collecting their fees have been able to accumulate; lawyers, equally unsuccessful in their collections, and businessmen with whom things are slow, have been able to save and wisely invest, and never have forgotten at any time that the "Greatest of these is charity.' Since April 1, 1934, 270 applications have been received.

The finding of acceptable California homes for acceptable needy children is a charity which has been, and which will without doubt continue to be, a cherished project of both Orders. To maintain a project of this character calls for continued enthusiasm and sincere efforts on the part of all members. The Native Sons and the Native Daughters who have personally observed how near Heaven the advent of a "chosen" child has brought the childless home, need no greater inspiration to spur them on to do their full part So much is taken for granted, however, in this busy world of ours, that sometimes one forgets the hundreds of members who have not personally known the happiness of foster parents and their adopted children, and then it is that one marvels that something in the abstract could so persistently appeal to these members, and create among them an enthusiasm so effective.

California citizens everywhere have recognized this spirit among the members of the two Orders, have commended them for it, and often remark that one of the finest things that the Native Sons and the Native Daughters do is their work for the Homeless Children. While those most interested in the work realize that economic conditions are not propitious thus far for large returns from any benefits given for any charity, there is no doubt that much can be accomplished if there but exists the same years old determination to work, and the well-founded conviction that the Homeless Children activities reflect unquestionable credit upon the Orders of Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West.

The following Native Daughters Parlors have completed payment for six weeks care of one or more children since April 1, 1934:

ALAMEDA COUNTY—Aloha No. 106, assuming second child; Brooklyn No. 157, completed payment. LAMENT

(RUTH PARLE.)

A lone, drab, and muscle-twisted cypress on the cliff . . .
Incessant struggle with the wild wind . . .
Agonized by the suffering night . . .

Masses of rugged rocks echoing the death of ships . . .
Boulders broken cruelly by the sea . . .
Torn, tortured crags, ancient ruins of night . . .

Waves crashing, beating out the hymn of eternity . . .
Merciless pounding on the long shore . . .
Endless thunder through the lonely night . . .

Sad and shrouded fog sighing through the tall, weeping pines . . .
A lost breath rustling heavy needles . . .
A call, alone in the soul-filled night . . .

Smooth and sombre sand dunes, blue-grey with dull, dark shadows . . .
Softened moonlight, faint in the cold mist . . .
Silent in deep sorrow for the night . . .

Native Daughters of the Golden West

CHICO (BUTTE COUNTY)—ANNIE K. Bidwell Parlor No. 168 N.D.G.W. now boasts its own home,—Native Daughters Hall at the corner of Salem and Second streets—which was formally dedicated September 15 in the presence of a large assemblage. Mrs. Margaret Hudspeth, chairman of the building committee, presided, and stated the old Lusk building was purchased in January 1933 but, due to the closing of two local banks, remodeling operations did not get under way until December of that year. An impressive invocation was offered by Rev. Harris Pillsbury.

Mrs. Hudspeth then handed the deed to the property to Mrs. Mary Wesbrook, president of the Parlor who, with appropriate remarks, passed it on to Mrs. Nora Arnold, chairman of the board of trustees. Mayor O. A. Kilpatric congratulated the Native Daughters on their achievement, and commented on the value of fraternal organizations to a community.

Past Grand President Esther R. Sullivan paid tribute to the Pioneer Women of the Mother Lode country, and declared that, "by their courage, self-sacrifice and loyalty they created the possibilities that are realities enjoyed by Californians of today." Miss Sullivan stressed the ideals and objectives of the Order of Native Daughters, foremost among which are the preservation of pioneer history and the marking of landmarks. "The accomplishments of the patriotic American Pioneers who came West and realized their dream, after many vicissitudes, will be recorded on the memory of every native Californian," she said.

Grand President Chas. A. Koenig, representing the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, said: "It is indeed an extreme pleasure, and a privilege deeply appreciated by the Native Sons, to assist in dedicating the home of Annie K. Bidwell Parlor.

"At this very time and day, unfortunately, we hear and see too much of those misguided forces and individuals who would demolish and tear down, even through the agency of violence and bloodshed, our organized government. So, when we have the opportunity to publicly gather around a project erected by the Native Daughters of the Golden West, a patriotic organization, it is indeed good to be here. And, speaking of our state may I tell you the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West is distinctively a California organization. Its life, its aims, its purposes center around and find their objective in the history and the progress of our state. So, whenever and wherever, within the boundaries of our state, the hands of men erect buildings such as this we are pleased to lend our presence to the occasion." During the ceremonies W. G. King, accompanied by Carmelita Doyle, sang appropriate selections.

Throughout the afternoon and evening hundreds of local people and visitors inspected the building which, for the occasion, was decorated with large baskets of flowers sent, with congratulatory messages, by friends. The directors of the Chico Native Daughters Hall Association, a corporation formed by Annie K. Bidwell Parlor to acquire and maintain the property, are: Margaret Hudspeth (president), Ethel Estes (vice-president), Cora Hintz (secretary-treasurer), Edna Boyd, Frances Snyder, Irene Henry and Annie M. Skelly.

THE BUILDING.

From the exterior, Native Daughters Hall presents an appearance of dignity and stability. The brick walls are painted white, and there are green shutters on the high, deep-set windows. The entrance is beautiful, with a simplicity of design characteristic of the building. Over the entrance the California Flag is suggested by the bear and star in bas relief. Over the door, which is back several feet from the outer archway, is a fanlight with the colors of the Order, blue, gold and white, at the base of the radiating panes of glass.

Entering the building, one steps into a long hall with a thick carpet of taupe having a small conventional design in deep blue. The walls are of bone white, with two small tile medallions of blue. Lighting fixtures are suggestive of antique brass lanterns, and throughout the building are brass doorknobs of exquisite design. To the right is the checkroom and to the left, through two archways, is the relicroom, with bone white walls and woodwork and a touch of blue in the indirect lighting fixtures. There are venetian blinds at the windows. The men's room adjoins the relicroom.

In the entrance hall and approaching the stairway which leads to the rooms above, one faces the memorial window on the first landing. Of beautiful stained glass with a floodlight behind it, the central figures will be portraits of General and Mrs. John Bidwell in glass. Beyond the window, at the turn of the stairway, one views a wall plaque in bas relief dedicated to the memory of John and Annie K. Bidwell. On the plaque a covered-wagon train moves forward through the sagebrush, while in the background rises a mountain range. At the top of the stairs is a large mirror.

The lodgeroom, which is on the second floor, extends along the front of the building. It is 50 by 31 feet, and has a carpet of blue and taupe. Along the walls are comfortable benches of simple dignity, stained a grayish tan shade. The officers' stations, of the same wood, are built in also, and the pedestals and altar are of bone white. Here the lighting arrangement is especially fine. Draperies are of a rich shade of blue ribbed silk, and there are squares of a much lighter blue in the ceiling between the beams. On one side of the hall is a balcony for an orchestra, and on the other side are niches.

At one end of the upstairs hall is the women's room, decorated in blue, and at the other end is the committeeroom or lounge. The central feature is a stately fireplace, over which is another huge mirror. Tile of blue green and the red firebrick form the color note of this room. Chairs, sofas and rugs repeat these shades effectively. Leaving the committeeroom and turning to the right, one enters the diningroom, one of the most interesting in the building. Here the walls and woodwork are of a light golden brown in antique finish, with a most artistic built-in buffet above which is the third beautiful large mirror. The floor is covered with linoleoum in a solid blue color, with a border of bone white and a brighter blue. Tables are in bone white, and the curtains are of a delightful crossbar material which lets in the light. The paneled ceiling is attractive, and the whole room has a pleasant, cheerful atmosphere. In the kitchen is a large gas range with several warming ovens and a roasting oven of great size. There is a dumb waiter large enough for a big ice cream freezer. The serving entrance to the diningroom is well designed. There is a great deal of cupboard space in the kitchen, and the large sink for dish-washing activities is strategically placed for those entering with dishes from the diningroom.

There is a lockerroom on the second floor, also. Storerooms are in the basement. There is a three-room apartment on the first floor, where the caretaker and his wife will reside. Also, there are two large officerooms on the first floor.

Anniversaries Luncheon.

Santa Ana—Members of Santa Ana No. 23 gathered at the Balboa home of Stella Stiffler Gates, August 24, for an all-day social gathering; the Parlor presented to the hostess a lovely painting of Capistrano Mission. Muriel Bray, Mae West, Eunice Fox, Marguerite Mize, Marie Crum, Lillian Gant, Gertrude Etzold, Stella Fegley and Matilda Lemon were royally entertained by Mattie and Gladys Edwards at their Arrowhead Lake home August 29 and 30. Hiking, swimming and card playing were diversions, and refreshments were served under lovely pine trees.

Several members of Santa Ana and Ontario No. 251 surprised Gladys Edwards at her Placentia home, September 8, with a luncheon in honor of her birthday and commemorative of Admission Day. A large birthday cake, baked by Muriel Bray, centered the table, and amid a profusion of fernery crouched an emblematic native son, a grizzly bear made of redwood. United States of America and California State (Bear) Flags were also used in the decoration. Miss Edwards received numerous lovely presents. Cards were played following the luncheon, Lillian Gant and Maude Van Fleet receiving the awards. September 13, Mrs. H. F. Witt entertained several members of Santa Ana's sewing club and Los Angeles guests at a waffle breakfast in her Newport Beach summer home. Sewing was done on articles for a bazar to be held in the near-future. The committee in charge

Thirteen Candidates Initiated.

Alameda—In honor of Grand President Gladys E. Noce, who made her first official visit to Encinal No. 156 August 23, a reception was held following the business meeting. During the regular session a class of thirteen candidates were initiated. Honored guests were several past presidents, Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler, Grand Trustees Alice Lane and Orinda Giannini, Grand Outside Sentinel Claire Lindsey, Supervising Deputies Gertrude La Fortune and Dora Brayton, Deputy Martha Watson, and members of Alameda No. 47 N.S.G.W. Geo. H. Hagy of the latter Parlor was the escort to the Grand President, and in behalf of the Native Sons of Alameda County presented Mrs. Noce with a huge boquet of yellow roses.

A yellow-and-gold color scheme was carried out in the adornment of the banquethall. A large table was arranged to represent the state, a miners' camp being the centerpiece. The south was represented by a replica of San Diego Mission, and little mission bells marked the route of El Camino Real. The north was represented by a replica of the mining industry, an operating stamp mill built to scale. The placecards were tiny miners bearing pans filled with nuggets. Irene Rose, who headed the general committee, was assisted by Mary Orchison, Gertrude Conners, Charlotte Heritage, Soila Harmola, Agnes Schuppert, Laura Fisher, Martha Dunleavy and Edith Hutchinson.

Co-operation's Importance Stressed.

San Diego—During September, San Diego No. 208 was very active with social affairs. The first gathering of importance was an open meeting with San Diego No. 108 N.S.G.W. Albert Mayrhofer was chairman, and introduced the presidents of both Parlors and the chairmen of the homeless children and the historic landmarks committees. About three hundred Natives and their friends were present. The meeting was called to stress the importance of cooperation between the two Parlors.

In the Grape Day Festival parade at Escondido Admission Day, September 9, No. 208 had two cars decorated with United States of America and California State (Bear) Flags, and poppies. The fine showing was due to the untiring efforts of Edyth Barngrover, Marie James, Doris Hoffner, Sarah Miller and others. Besides these two important events, there were suppers at the cottage of Anne Wood at Imperial Beach and at the picnic grounds at Mission Beach. The sewing club of the Parlor also had an afternoon of enjoyment, aboard the ferryboat.

NATIVE DAUGHTERS NEWS BRIEFS.

San Jose—Vendome No. 100 entertained the Santa Clara County Pioneers, September 12, with a notable program of songs, stories and speeches. The subject of District Attorney Fred L. Thomas, the principal speaker, was "The Spirit of the Pioneer." The refreshment hour was under the chairmanship of Frances Riley and a large committee. Tillie Brohaska and Grand Trustee Clara Gairaud were in charge of the program. Afternoon fortnightly card parties have been resumed by the Parlor; September 26 was the initial date. A class of candidates will be received into No. 100 in October. Grand Trustee Gairaud and Ella Graham motored to Santa Cruz September 9, and heard the Admission Day program of Santa Cruz No. 26 at the beach; hundreds of people applauded the program.

Salinas—Amidst the crumbling ruins of Nuestra Senora de la Soledad Mission, where Father Lasuen erected a cross 143 years ago at the time of the mission's founding, a new cross was raised at this year's anniversary celebration. Speakers were Father T. Wand, Past Grand Bertha A. Briggs and Paul Parker. In attendance were representatives of Aleli No. 102 (Salinas), Copa de Oro No. 105 (Hollister), Junipero No. 141 (Monterey) and San Juan Bautista No. 179.

Hollister—September 13, Copa de Oro No. 105 resumed activities following the usual summer recess. Dinner was served, honoring Deputy Mildred Peers. Decorations featured Salina's "big week." Cowboy numbers were rendered by Genevieve and Eugene Wilson, members of the Good Will Club, in costume. Installation ceremonies were conducted by Deputy Peers, and visiting officials were presented with flowers. In a clever cowboy stunt arranged by Elma Chandler, Erma Pivetti and Lila Melendy,

In Memoriam

AMY HOWARD.

To the Officers and Members of El Pescadero Parlor No. 82 N.D.G.W.—We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions of respect to the memory of our beloved sister, Amy Howard, respectfully submit the following:

Again our Golden Chain has been broken and we are called upon to offer our tribute of respect and affection to our esteemed sister whose kindly smile and cheerful words will ever be bright in the minds of our entire sisterhood. She has answered her Heavenly Father's call and passed through the door that opened and has entered into the great beyond.

Resolved, That in testimony of our sincere love and esteem for our dear departed sister, these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Parlor, and as evidence of our sympathy to the family, a copy be sent to them and a copy be sent to The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication.

"We will miss her from our Parlor
With her ever cheering smile
That made the world seem brighter
And a place more worth while.

"But in that brighter, happier land
Where she has gone before
We feel and know her happiness
Is held in golden store

"And the blessings of His love
Have fallen to her share
And in serene contentment
She is happy there."

To the Officers and Members of Alta Parlor No. 3 N.D.G.W., San Francisco, California—Your committee appointed to submit resolutions of sympathy and condolence, in memory of our departed Financial Secretary, Sister Agnes Hayes, submit the following:

Who hath not lost a friend?
There is no union here of hearts
That finds not here an end."

Active Membership Committee Gets Results.

Stockton—August 27 some 150 members assembled in the hall of Stockton No. 7 to honor Grand Inside Sentinel Walter P. Rothenbush. A class of twenty-three candidates, known as the Rothenbush class, were initiated by the officers of the Parlor: senior past president, George Witherow; junior past president, A. D. Prato; president, Wm. Johnson; first vice-president, Benj. S. Waller; second vice-president, A. L. Buckel; third vice-president, Frank Marino; inside sentinel, M. O. Woods; marshal, Fred G. Krumb.

It was a pleasure to have in attendance Grand President Chas. A. Koenig, who welcomed the candidates and impressed on all present the wonderful advantages gained by membership in the Order. Grand Inside Sentinel Rothenbush also thanked the Parlor for the honor accorded him, and urged the members to solicit all available material for membership in No. 7. The meeting was sponsored by Stockton's membership committee: R. D. Dorcey (chairman), Fred E. Potter, Alfred L. Buckle and Frank Marino. Entertainment and refreshments concluded the evening under the able management of George Owings and committee.

The membership committee sponsored another class initiation, September 24, in honor of Past Grand Hubert R. McNoble, and among the initiates was his son. Visitors and speakers on this occasion were Grand President Chas. A. Koenig and Grand Secretary John T. Regan. Chairman Dorcey says it is the intention of his committee to promote similar classes each month during the remainder of the year.

Memorial at "Ghost Towns" Cemetery.

Pittsburg—Sunday, October 7, will witness the fulfillment of a long-cherished idea of Mrs. Amy V. McAvoy, Past Grand President N.D.G.W., when a monument marking the last restingplace of numerous Pioneers of Contra Costa County, in the old cemetery between the now "ghost towns" of Nortonville and Somersville, will be dedicated by Diamond No. 246 and Stirling No. 146 N.D.G.W.

The once-thriving communities of Nortonville and Somersville have passed on, but the cemetery remains—mute testimonial to the towns that were. To the indefatigable efforts of Mrs. McAvoy, with the able co-operation of Wm. Cohn, is due the credit for the beautiful monument now awaiting dedication at the cemetery, a lasting memorial to those interred therein. Invitations to the dedication have been extended to various county and city officials, civic and fraternal organizations and the general public. Present indications are that a record-breaking crowd will be present for the dedication, and the affair promises to be one that will be long remembered in the annals of Contra Costa County. —F.A.I.

NOT FAIR.

"Editor Grizzly Bear: Read with interest your article in September issue objecting to "tourists" being supported from state and county appropriations in preference to our own citizens.

"Yes, we know from actual facts that any one can come to California from any other state and procure either jobs at even higher pay or relief, in preference to our own taxpayers. THIS IS NOT FAIR.

"I personally know of cases where higher wages were paid to these and relief given also, when ours could not get any, or at less pay by C.W.A. or now from S.E.R.A.

SERRA'S CONTRIBUTION TO SAN DIEGO.

San Diego City—In observance of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the death of Fra Junipero Serra, early mission trail blazer of California, Albert V. Mayrhofer, Deputy Grand President N.S.G.W., spoke over the radio August 26, concluding his address with:

"Serra's contribution to San Diego is indeed a sacred heritage, and San Diego, the splendid daughter of Mission San Diego de Alcala, will strive to ever be a monument to Father Junipero Serra."

Rainbow-colored streaks in the sky are not always rainbows. Opalescent patches of various sizes and shapes, tinted with all the rainbow's hues but bearing no physical relation to the true rainbow, are occasionally seen, usually late in the fall, high up in the sky near the sun, according to the Federal Weather Bureau.

Grass Valley, Nevada County, will have its annual gold quartz discovery day celebration October 27 and 28.

SOME 250 BALLADS, PRINTED IN THE '50s, '60s and '70s, were formally presented to the Los Angeles Public Library by Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W., September 18. So far as known, there are but two similar collections of these ballads—most of which depict the gold-rush days in song—in existence, one in the Library of Congress at Washington, D. C., and the other in the California State Library at Sacramento. Dinner was served in the library diningroom, following which the assemblage, including about seventy members of the Parlor and guests, adjourned to the lectureroom for the presentation.

Mrs. Jennie Raymond acted as chairman of the evening. Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer, for the Parlor, presented the ballads, which were accepted, for the library, by Mrs. Otto Zahn. Ora Monnette extended greetings on behalf of Mayor Shaw, and representatives of various organizations were introduced.

Dr. Owen C. Coy, director California State Historical Association, was the main speaker. He quoted from some of the ballads to show their association with historic events, and referred to the early-day theaters of San Francisco, where the ballads were sung and proved most popular. Dr. Coy took occasion to urge on the citizenry of Los Angeles County generally an understanding of California history, particularly that of American California, saying that such an understanding is necessary for a correct solution of the problems of today. The Parlor committee in charge of the evening's arrangements included Jennie Raymond (chairman), Juanita Porter, Irene Eden, Flora Holy, Ella Steinbeck, Ruth Ruiz and Thelma Stengel.

ADMISSION DAY AT SAN GABRIEL.

The Admission Day celebration—honoring California's eighty-fourth birthday and Serra Year—of the Los Angeles County Native Sons and Native Daughters at San Gabriel, September 10, was muchly enjoyed by the many in attendance. A fine program, with George M. Breslin giving the feature address, was followed by a supper and dancing. Clyde Harry Davis was the general chairman, and Mrs. Gertrude Allen had charge of the program.

OCTOBER N.S.G.W. GROUP INITIATION.

With Hollywood Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W. as the host, the October group initiation of the southern district Parlors will be held Monday, the 29th, at 1089 North Oxford avenue. The officers of Hollywood, headed by President John M. Costello, will exemplify the ritual.

EVENING OF FUN, OCTOBER 25.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. and Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. are sponsoring a joint Hallowe'en carnival dance, to be held at Knights Columbus Hall, Eighth and Bonnie Brae streets, at 8:30 p.m. of October 25. The dance will be costume or informal, and marvelous music will be provided. All Natives and their friends are cordially invited, and an evening of real fun is assured.

The joint arrangements committee includes Louise McNary and Walter Fisher in charge, assisted by Juanita Porter, Evelyn Trautwein, Edna Trombatore, Emma Lazzarevich, Harry Davis, James W. VanOsten, Sidney Witkowski and Walter Smith, with Presidents Olinda Kerby and Michael Botello as ex-officio members.

CIVIC LEADER HONORED.

Opening happily and auspiciously after a six weeks' vacation, Californiana Parlor No. 247 N.D.G.W. swung into the fall season with zest September 11. Because the Parlor takes great pride in members prominent in civic and welfare circles, the honor-guest at luncheon was Mrs. Leland Atherton-Irish, head of activities for "Symphonies Under the Stars," which had a most successful season. Many distinguished guests were in attendance. The September birthday members were honored at a table decorated with a replica of the General Vallejo house. Program Chairman Ora Evans presented Homer Gaynes and Richard Tetley Kardez, soloist and accompanist, in a delightful song group, and Frances Hickson in a rendition of "The Life of Junipero Serra."

Social affairs of the Parlor for September included: a dessert bridge at the home of Mrs. John P. Burrows, sponsored by the general philanthropy and the veteran welfare committees; sewing circle party at the home of Misses Nellie and Lizzie Weston, and a spanish supper at the home of Dr. and Mrs. C. W. Decker under the auspices of the folklore committee. All were successful, both socially and financially.

PUT NATIVE SONISM ON THE MAP.

Compton—Compton Parlor No. 273 N.S.G.W. had a dance September 7. The arrangements committee included Walter Hopcraft, Dr. J. S. Reynolds, Secretary William Don Castillo and Roy Adams. The Parlor now meets the second and fourth Mondays at 6172 North Long Beach boulevard, North Long Beach.

Urging all the membership to activity, President J. Reid Young said to them in a letter: "Let's keep up the stride we have started and put Native Sonism in Compton on the map."

CHARTER MEMBERS NIGHT.

San Pedro — Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. will honor its charter members at a reception. A program will be presented and re-

BENEFIT BARBECUE.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. initiated six candidates September 5. Several members attended the benefit at Mission Santa Ines September 16. Members of Californiana Parlor No. 247 were guests of Los Angeles September 19. Kathryn Ronan spoke on Death Valley, and delicious refreshments were served. Among the number in attendance were President Ruth Parris and Deputies Gertrude Tuttle and Mary Noerenberg of No. 247, Past Grand Grace S. Stoermer, and Secretary Annie L. Adair of the local homeless children committee. The practice of entertaining some neighboring Parlor each month was inaugurated by Olinda Kerby when she became president of No. 124, and it has been highly commended.

The card party September 26, the first of the fall tournament, was a wonderful success, due to the diligent work of the committees in charge. Beautiful awards, including a hand-made afghan, were made. Flora Holy was the general chairman. The proceeds will be used for Los Angeles' philanthropies. The sewing club of the Parlor spent a delightful afternoon September 22. Grace Norton, the hostess, was assisted by her sister, Mildred Ripling, who is president of the club.

Los Angeles Parlor's October calendar includes: 6th, sewing club at home of Mattie Gara, who will be assisted by Edith Schallmo. 10th, tournament card party; Ella Steinbeck chairman. 17th, Verdugo Parlor No. 240 will be entertained; Sarah Bixby-Smith speaker. 21st, Ruth Ruiz will give a barbecue for the benefit of the Parlor's philanthropies at Plummer Park, 7377 Santa Monica boulevard; charge, 75 cents; dancing, music and entertainment.

SANTA MONICA BAY DISTRICT

SMOKER PRODUCES FUN.

Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. entertained the southern district Parlors for the group initiation August 31. Following a dinner, eighteen candidates were initiated, eight from Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 267, four from University Parlor No. 272 (Los Angeles), three from Ramona Parlor No. 109 (Los Angeles), two from Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 (San Pedro), one from Arrowhead Parlor No. 110 (San Bernardino). Ramona's officers, headed by Superior Judge Ruben Schmidt, exemplified the ritual. There was a large attendance, and among the evening's speakers were Grand Third Vice-president Eldred L. Meyer, Grand Trustee Donald E. VanLuven, Grand Marshal William A. Reuter and District Deputy F. L. McGarvey.

The September 21 smoker of Ramona, directed by First Vice-president Fred Staebler, drew a large crowd, and there was plenty of fun. A kangaroo court had Walter Odemar as judge, Julius Krause as crier, Clarence S. Hunt as prosecuting attorney and Spencer Thorpe as defendant's attorney. A horse race, directed by Fred Zeigler, was quite spirited and was won by Past Grand Herman C. Lichtenberger. Good entertainment features were presented, and refreshments were served. Ramona will have initiation October 12, and the monthly birthday dinner is listed for October 19.

NATIVE SONS LUNCHEON CLUB.

At the Native Sons Luncheon Club during September, Ernest Orfila, Spencer Thorpe and Neal Ames presided as chairmen, and among the speakers were F. T. Hawtry and Ralph Keithley. The club meets every Friday at 12:15 (noon) at the Rosslyn Hotel.

SEVEN INITIATED.

Santa Monica—Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 245 N.D.G.W. initiated seven candidates, September 12, among them Dorothy Barnes and Evelyn Jones, daughters, respectively, of Charter Members Marie Barnes and Rhea Jones. Deputy Betty Saunders gave an address. The social hour, in charge of Myrtle Barden and Katherine Worsham, featured a bon voyage party for Secretary Ethel Mickelson, who is to make an indefinite sojourn in Nebraska. Miniature airplanes decorated the tables.

Vera Carlson entertained the Parlor September 26 with an account of her recent trip to Sweden. Dorothy Barnes was the social hostess. The banquetroom was decorated with flags of Sweden, and swedish dainties were served. The Parlor is organizing a drill team.

THE GOLDEN WEST

(P. M. McGUSHIN)

There was a land where the gold ran free
Where the home of the Indian and the Grizzly Bear
And where nature smiled in a wealth untold—
Ere civilization was in its mould—
And brave men came their fortunes to seek,
Encouraged by discovery at Sutter Creek
Today we all unite in hearty cheer
For those brave men—the Pioneers

Though gold will date its progress for all time,
'Tis not the only product of this glorious clime
Its luscious fruit is native wine,
But fair to rival the ancient Rhine
Its productive soil, its great wheat fields,
To mankind's wants the world o'er yields,
And ships well laden with precious freight
Take their daily exit through the Golden Gate

And of the future—why have any fears,
So much accomplished within eighty years!
See this great metropolis of this Land of Gold,
Surpassing cities that are centuries old.
This should enkindle ambitious fire
In those native sons of worthy sires,
And with honest pride their souls entrance—
First claimants to this inheritance.

And fragrant flowers the senses cheer,
Each month throughout the year,
For Californians do seldom know
The biting chills of frost and snow.
This genial clime, so calm and rare,
The home of maidens bright and fair
In whose sweet companionship are doubly blest
THE NATIVE SONS OF THE GOLDEN WEST.

(This came to The Grizzly Bear from Mrs. Anna Thuesen of San Francisco, Grand Vice-president N.D.G.W., with the statement: "This was published in the Richmond district paper and written by a San Francisco man for the 9th of September. Am passing it on hoping you derive the pleasure from it that I did." Editor.)

TAPS SOUNDED AT MISSION SAN JOSE FOR NOTED CALIFORNIA PIONEER.

In recognition of the Junipero Serra Sesquicentennial, a program was presented September 2 at Mission San Jose de Guadalupe, founded June 11, 1797, in Alameda County. Augustin S. MacDonald, president Alameda County Historical Society, presided. The principal speakers were Monsignor Joseph M. Gleeson and Joseph R. Knowland, Past Grand President N.S.G.W. The latter praised the landmarks work of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, through whose efforts Mission San Jose was restored in 1915.

At the program's conclusion R. J. Livermore, great-grandson of Robert Livermore, the first White settler of Livermore Valley, Alameda County, the man from whom the valley received its name, sounded taps over the last resting-place of the Pioneer. Robert Livermore, an English adventurer, died in February 1858, and his remains were interred beneath the floor of the mission.

In Memoriam

FRED H. GREELY, PAST GRAND PRESIDENT N.S.G.W.

Adopted by Marysville Parlor No. 6 N.S.G.W. and Fred H. Greely Assembly No. 6 Past Presidents Association N.S.G.W.

Whereas, It has pleased our Eternal Father to call to the Grand Parlor on High an honored, loyal and sincere member of the Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West, and an honored and respected Past Grand President, in the passing of our beloved Fred H. Greely; and whereas, all members of our Order deeply feel the loss we have sustained in losing such an enthusiastic, tireless worker, and such an honored member of our organization; yet, whereas we bow to the will of Almighty God in His omnipotent wisdom in the taking of our brother and leader to the land of the beautiful vision, where he still may be of greater service than to us; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That Marysville Parlor No. 6 and the members of Fred H. Greely Assembly No. 6 hereby extend to the family of our late brother, Frederick Henry Greely, our deepest sincere sympathy in the loss of a devoted husband and worthy father; and be it further resolved, that a copy of this resolution be spread upon the minutes of our Parlor and upon the minutes of the Fred H. Greely Assembly, and that a copy be sent to the family of our late departed brother, and that a copy also be sent to The Grizzly Bear Publishing Company to be printed in The Grizzly Bear Magazine.

Adopted by Marysville Parlor No. 6 N.S.G.W., and by Fred H. Greely Assembly No. 6 P.P.A., N.S.G.W., at the September meetings.

Whereas, Again the Angel of Death has entered our Parlor and taken from our midst our dearly beloved sister, her family a devoted and loving mother, her husband a loving wife, a citizen who always was willing to help and do for others; whereas, in the passing of Sister Margaret E. Fitzgerald, we have lost an earnest and faithful member.

Resolved, That we extend the sympathy of the Parlor to her bereaved family, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes, that one copy be sent to her family, and one copy each to The Grizzly Bear Magazine and one of the local papers for publication.

SAN FRANCISCO

"THE PROBLEMS OF OUR PRESENT-day world are created in part by our emotional and non-rational manner of thinking, a heritage from the stone age. Tribal deities and human fetishes still play a greater role in the subconscious mind of the masses than the Golden Rule of Christianity or the desire for national economic preservation."

Such is the statement of Dr. Edwin M. Loeb, who has just returned from a two years' sojourn in Europe. Author of many scientific works on the religions of primitive people, he contends that primitive ideas of the supernatural have penetrated not only the philosophies, cults and national aspirations of classical times, but our own as well.

"The origin of religion is a matter of dispute," says Dr. Loeb, "but its importance in modern civilization is beyond question. From the contemplations and visions of religious leaders have originated all of our philosophies, ethics, arts and sciences, and likewise the baneful illusions which return to plague us at periods of world crisis. There is no time more appropriate than the present one for investigating the origin and history of our concept of the supernatural. Self-knowledge, here as elsewhere, yields self-control."

PAGEANT AT N.D. DISTRICT MEETING.

The district meeting of the San Francisco Native Daughters will be held in Native Sons Auditorium, Friday evening, October 19. A large class of candidates will be initiated, the deputy grand presidents of San Francisco County exemplifying the ritual.

Supervising Deputy Gertrude LaFortune is in charge of the meeting. Complying with the wishes of Grand President Gladys E. Noce, a pageant depicting the projects of the Order will be staged by the deputies and members of the San Francisco Parlors.

N.D.G.W.—NEWS BRIEFS—N.S.G.W.

The "baby" drum corps of Pacific Parlor No. 10 N.S.G.W. and Portola Parlor No. 172 N.D.G.W. made an excellent showing at Sacramento. Organized in June, the members practice twice a week and are very enthusiastic. Organization of the corps has instilled a more friendly feeling between the two Parlors.

Orinda Parlor No. 56 N.D.G.W. celebrated its forty-fourth anniversary at a banquet. The tables were beautifully decorated with flags and the colors of the Order. The charter members were presented with merchandise orders, and pretty handkerchiefs were given all others in attendance. Orinda made a beautiful picture in the Admission Day parade at Sacramento and received much applause. September 14 a party was held for all members born in August and September; Trustee Dorothy Alleman, a recent bride, was presented with a lamp.

Stanford Parlor No. 76 N.S.G.W. had a past presidents night September 18; Fred E. Wissing was the chairman. September 25, with President Chris. Weske doing the honors, a bridge party was featured.

Members of the drum corps of Genevieve Parlor No. 132 N.D.G.W. are the proud possessors of two beautiful silver trophies representing the first drum corps prize at the California State Fair and the second prize awarded in the Admission Day parade at Sacramento. Members of the corps are: Rena Taube (captain), Evelyn Kilkenny, Evelyn McColgan, Camille Jacobsen, Virginia Hannon, Vera Dunleavy, Ann Haugen, Alice Drolla, Eileen Taube, Gladys McQueen, Frances Feudner, Veronica Cassidy and Mary Ward. Charles Herman is the instructor. Twenty-five members representing the Parlor rode in decorated automobiles in the parade.

The drill team of Twin Peaks Parlor No. 185 N.D.G.W., by winning the competitive drill at the California State Fair at Sacramento in connection with the Admission Day celebration, lays claim to the title of state champion among Native Daughter drill teams. Being declared the winner has long ceased to be a novelty for this well-trained team, as this marks its third consecutive victory and fourth in its last five attempts. Captain Viola Paone, in her first try at the head of this organization, is to be congratulated on her keeping up the high standard of her predecessor. Twin Peaks has for its drillmaster, Walter Bammann of Pacific Parlor No. 10 N.S.G.W.

Constitution Day, September 17, Castro Parlor No. 232 N.S.G.W. presented to the Douglas school United States of America and California State (Bear) Flags. Public Defender Gerald Kenny made the presentation address, and the flags were accepted by Leland Gorevin and Marion Thorpe, students.

Officers of Bret Harte Parlor No. 232 N.D.G.W. were publicly installed, Muriel Pabst becoming president. A past president ring was presented Ollie Pabst. A whist party was held September 26. The Bret Harte girls were highly complimented on their appearance at Sacramento, Admission Day, their pretty hats and colorful jackets adding to the general festive appearance of the parade. Fifty percent of the membership attended.

BENEFIT PAGEANT AT MISSION ENDANGERED BY TERMITE ARMY.

Santa Barbara City—Crowning a hilltop in Santa Barbara County's largest interior valley stands a venerable mission—Santa Ines—so ridden with termites as to be in grave danger of destruction. September 16, the one hundred and thirtieth anniversary of the founding of the mission, was the date set for the general public to participate in a movement to preserve the landmark. Several thousand motored to Solvang to witness the initial offering of the historical pageant, "La Verbena de Santa Ines," written by Miss Marion Parks and acted by some 300 enthusiastic, expertly costumed men, women and children.

Santa Barbara's particular contribution to the pageant was a folklore dance by a group sent by Reina del Mar Parlor No. 126 N.D.G.W., which included Florence Holtzbauer, Jessie Fawcett, Charlotte Hall, Wilma Kiesner, Rose Fortuny, Lillian Tinsley, Mamie Miller, Christena McCrea, Olive Huestis, Elizabeth Voen, Vivian Covett, Ida Vizzolini, Ida Dardi, Gertrude Campbell, Amelia Acres and Renata Maccianti. Aiding them were a group from Californiana Parlor No. 247 of Los Angeles, including Virginia Buchan, Ruth Bolster, Hope Chamberlin, Mary Clarke, Margaret Harris, Isabel Fages, Gertrude Tuttle, Inez Sitton, Hortense Steinike, Uvenia Wents, Marcella Wolfskill and Bernice Young.

The executive who stood behind the whole pageant is Miss Anna E. McCaughey of Reina del Mar Parlor. Already she is making plans to repeat the pageant early next year, for it surely costs to restore missions, and the war-chest against the termite enemy will need more than the substantial sum raised by the September pageant and barbecue.

Mare Island Navy Yard, California, celebrated September 17 its eightieth birthday. It was formally commissioned September 17, 1854.

The California Real Estate Association will have its thirtieth annual convention at Santa Barbara City, October 3-6.

STORY OF SPANIARD WHO AIDED UNITED STATES BROUGHT TO LIG

Recognition of service to the United Sta may be slow in arriving, but it comes eventua This is indicated by a new book, titled "B nardo de Galvez in Louisiana," by Dr. John W. ton Caughey, published by the University California Press.

A century and a half ago Galvez, as a h Spanish official in the New World, rendered vi aid to the revolting colonists, first as a frien neutral and later as an active belligerent agai England on the Lower Mississippi. Anxi aroused by his attacks is believed to have b an important reason for the territorial conc sions granted to the colonists by England at end of the Revolutionary War. Despite t service to the infant nation, Galvez has recei little more than passing notice from histori and has been entirely forgotten by the gene public.

To correct this situation, Dr. Caughey, assi ant professor of history at the University California at Los Angeles, went through archives of Spain and the principal depositor of documents in this country and prepared biographical account of Galvez' official life the New World. He was enabled to do t work through the financial assistance of t Order of Native Sons of the Golden West.

The California State Grange will meet in c vention October 16-19 at Salinas, Monte County.

ELECT A CALIFORNIAN GOVERNOR

A vote For Merriam Is a Vote For Chaos

THE interests sponsoring the election of Mr. Merriam would have you understand that California is facing a grave crisis. It is. The election of Mr. Merriam would create that crisis. A long-suffering electorate refuses to face four years more of what we have just experienced. Mr. Merriam's election, which happily is impossible, would deliver the state to the vested interests for another four years of plunder at a time when the people are in no mood for plunders.

I am a Californian. My forebears came over the plains and helped settle this state. They fought with the Vigilantes. They loved California as I do. Our people are in great need. An aggressive, honest, constructive government in step with the times is needed. There should be no hungry mouths in California. The Creator gave us in this great state every blessing the human heart could ask for. Californians do not want charity, they don't want a dole, but the opportunity to work, free from interference, and the right to enjoy the fruits of their labors.

what was bought at so great a sacrifice and has been protected down to our time with such tenacity and integrity of purpose. Let us pay the price of insuring that the Constitution of the United States of America shall remain inviolate, except as studied changes are carefully made in it by the friends of the fundamental principles for which it was brought into existence and for which it still stands. Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

TWEEDS HAVE BROUGHT A NEW word into fashion. This year the rugged fabrics are the smart ones. We see tweeds of every variety and quantity. We have soft spongy ones, flat ones with nubs and twisted threads, and crisp hairy ones. They usually mix their colors. Blue with brown, or wine with navy, or green with pink are particularly chic.

Tweed coats and suits are carefully manipulated with inverted pleats, seamings and such. Badger and nutria are the smartest possible trimmings. A yellow green is an important new shade worn especially with brown accessories. Important, too, is the hairy wool swagger coat, belted in front and flared in back. It is worn over a bubbly wool dress and with a brown hat.

Another ensemble has the same slim line accented by a black guliak cape that swings toward the back and has a black wool dress. A black velvet hat is a version of the tricorne with an upstanding feather in black.

The silhouette of the new dresses is slim and straight, but the details are many and varied. Great attention is paid to necklines, and little to sleeves. Most of them are simple and narrow. There are many scarf necklines, and many wide rippling collars. Buttons are used in long rows down the front, the back, or the side, and in unusual crossed and criss-crossed closings. Bows are tied at every available point. Wool competes with silk and wool, and silk that looks like wool.

Your flair for color may find an outlet in the new tweeds. Dramatic contrast is the order of the day, and even in the tailored clothes of daytime you may be daring. There is a black tweed with white and red flecks that is stunning in an adaptation of the butcher-boy silhouette. This has a half-length coat which is loose in back and belted in front, and is worn with a flaming scarlet blouse of duvetyn, double-breasted and buttoned like that of a tin soldier. The lining of the flaring jacket is also red, and with it you wear a red hat, gloves and bag.

The same idea may be worked out in brown and green. A bright green jersey polo shirt being worn with a brown tweed suit, further brightened by a green felt hat and green capeskin gloves of the slip-on, rolled-cuff variety. With two or three sets of tailored accessories you may vary your fall tailored clothes. You may have, for instance, a hat, blouse and scarf of carioca, which is a new warm rust tone to wear with your brown or gray suit. The next day you may wear accessories of canary yellow or demure beige. Either green or scarlet is effective with the dark gray ensemble.

The new coat dresses are meeting with the young set's approval and are finding their way into a goodly number of school wardrobes and college trunks. Gay plaids, checks and stripes characterize the new woolens destined for sports and campus wear. They are at their best when combined with dark, rich monotones, although in many cases they do pursue an independent course that is fashionable.

There is a special private philosophy for college clothes. On the campus you may dress informally, it is true, but with an informality that is the essence of smartness. Your coat may be a big bulky tweed or a classic camels hair. The school dresses should be neat, with as few trimmings or fussy details as possible.

A resourceful girl can scramble her clothes units with such success as to mislead even her roommate. A smart long-coated suit and a flock of blouses and sweaters will enable her to turn any number of fashion-tricks, and an extra skirt or two will contribute still further to wardrobe magic. American college girls are acquiring the reputation of being the best dressed co-eds.

Good old shirtwaists—what would we do without them? It seems that they appear everywhere, only in rather a glorified form. Sometimes they are almost completely disguised. One of the latter classification seen in a shop was perfectly stunning. To begin with, there was a formal, very decollete black crepe evening gown. Over it went a shirtwaist of flame-colored satin, striped lame, shot with gold, that buttoned with jeweled buttons down the front. It had a little high tailored collar and long sleeves.

Hand-stitched trimming on suede gloves makes them terribly smart. A pair was seen in navy blue slip-ons with only a slight flare to the cuff and with light stitchings. These also come in brown and black.

The smartest street, school and office dresses this season are schoolgirlish affairs with tailored collars and cuff-link cuffs; sometimes they come in pretty, marvelous materials. You will see severe shirtwaist frocks in metal-shot woolens, but they are shirtwaist frocks just the same. There are two-piece affairs of jersey and knit, soft angora checks and plaids and velveteens, in deep rich fall colors. The lines must be simple, and the gadgets few.

In the evening you may let yourself go and do a modern imitation of Cleopatra, or Helen of Troy, even to the jewels in your hair, but for daytime you will have to be tailored. Colors to be found and fancied include rich greens, browns, coppers and smoke tones.

The peg-top hobble-skirt age is upon us again, they do say. At least, the designers are making determined efforts in that direction. It will probably be a couple of seasons before women give up their hip-reducing exercises, but a change is bound to come. A few dinner gowns, here and there, show the trend, with draperies about the hips and a slim straight line from knee to hem. So slim are many of the new skirts that the slit skirt of current fashion is a necessity.

For those who do not care for hip drapery yet, there is the avalanche of tunics. The tunic may be worn from dawn to dawn this season. You see it in sports costumes, in afternoon dresses and in evening gowns. The peplum-flared tunic is one of the pets of fashion just now, worn anywhere between the hip-line and the knees, with a straight and narrow skirt below.

The tunic suit is prominent. The belted, fitted jacket extends almost to the knees and the skirt is straight and slit. The gorgeous metallic tunic tops are for wear over a black satin or velvet skirt at dinner. The tunic is enormously popular.

Formal suits have new importance and are not such a luxury this year, because there is a feeling for using elegant fabrics in a casual way. These suits do not look overdressed. Velvet is tailored in simple ways, and lame blouses have simple little collars.

Milady can certainly trip the light fantastic this year, if shoes have anything to do with More imagination and breaking away from s old ideas has gone into the designing of fo wear than in many a moon. One pair in p ticular shows black patent leather and su combined in the most original and flatter way, with open shanks. They have a thin st down the middle of the instep, and the rea new feature is the stitching in swirl-desi These same little "kicks" can be had in bro kid and suede. For dressy street and afterno wear they are perfect.

Go on, and choose whatever hat you m There are endless variations of the tricorne s the beret, and combinations of both, with das of turban and toque thrown in. Perhaps y prefer berets, or a top-hat that is the berr There are feathered turbans and tyrolean fe with quills and turned-up brims.

GENERAL NEWS OF INTEREST CONCERNING ALL CALIFORNIA, and ORDERS NATIVE SONS and NATIVE DAUGHTERS

THE YEAR, $1.50 SINGLE COPY, 15c

In the coming election for Governor of the State of California a question is involved of far more vital importance than the mere party designation of the candidates. It is the question of Americanism against Communism. When such a question arises the good citizen, whether Republican or Democrat, takes his stand on the side of Americanism.

The undersigned are natives of California. They love its history and traditions. They are loyal to its constitution and laws.

Upton Sinclair is, in thought and utterance, a follower of Communism. He is not and never has been a Democrat. He admittedly assumed the name Democrat believing that through the popularity of President Roosevelt his trading on that name might secure him the nomination.

William Foster, the last Communist candidate for President, said in testifying before a Committee of Congress that the Communist party was opposed to our Republican form of government, desired a revolution to overthrow it; that they owed no allegiance to the American Flag and had only one flag and that was the red flag of Soviet Russia. In line with this Sinclair has stated, "But now Social Revolution is coming; coming upon swift wings, and we may soon see in America that wonderful sight we saw in Russia." He thus advocates revolution in the United States and turns to glorify the red flag of Russia. In the past he has run for office on the Socialist ticket and has stated that--"the goals of Socialism and Communism are the same," and further proclaims, "We, who are trained in revolutionary thought, can see the main outline of the future."

He has long been enlisted in revolutionary, Unamerican movements. He was a member of the National Communistic Committee for International Workers Aid; a committee engaged in spreading Communism and ministering to Red strikers. He is a permanent contributor to the magazine "New Masses", the most notorious of all Communistic publications. One of Sinclair's books makes heroes of Sacco and Vanzette, the Anarchist murderers who were finally executed in spite of world-wide protests engineered by Bolsheviks. He has violently assailed the American Legion, calling its members a band of rioters; he has attacked the boy scouts, and decries the building of memorials to patriotism. The American flag has no inspiration for him and our free institutions awaken in his heart neither love nor respect. His ideal of a government is Soviet Russia.

In consonance with this, Sinclair blindly attacks all religion, declaring that "Christianity is the chief enemy of social progress and that the ministers of religion are occupied in cleaning up their disreputable Founder--and have turned him from a proletarian rebel into a stained-glass window divinity." "Christianity has been the chief of the enemies of social progress."

Such declarations shock every good citizen who respects the religious beliefs of another. Upton Sinclair admits that he never has been a success in business and the American writer, Irvin Cobb, who knows him, said that as an author Sinclair never disappoints him as, "he, Sinclair, is now and always has been wrong."

Sinclair at least has confidence in his ability to draw certain classes to California, because he has lately proclaimed: "If I am elected I expect one-half the unemployed in the East will jump the first train for California."

In place of ending poverty in California, he would make it the poorest state in the Union. With his offer of pensions and vacant lands, provided by means of unlimited taxation, he would attract the aged, the poor and incompetent from every other state.

His appeal is to the socialistic and communistic elements abroad in the nation. He is Unamerican in every thought and utterance. No man who really loves his native, or adopted, state can support such a candidate.

In this emergency we must turn to the candidate who can defeat Sinclair. It is apparent to any voter who notes the trend of public affairs that the drift is to Governor Frank F. Merriam, and that he will be elected. He has served the state in legislative and executive capacities and is able, tried and safe, and has proven himself to be thoroughly American. As Democrats and Republicans, and looking to the welfare and good name of California, we will support his candidacy.

RED CROSS RELIEF AND SERVICES DEPEND UPON MEMBERSHIP SUPPORT---JOIN

THE EARTHQUAKE THAT ROCKED A portion of southern California March 10, 1933, was a new and tragic experience for people of that favored clime. Not since 1857, when Los Angeles was a Mexican pueblo with no industry ther than trading in cow hides, had a shock of ke intensity been recorded locally, although a inor temblor created excitement in Inglewood 1920. Because of a sense of security developed through the years, many people were ught unprepared.

Californians, with characteristic fortitude and domitable spirit, quickly recovered from the low and built for the future. There would be o point to recalling the tragedy at this time ere it not for the approach of the annual embership roll call of the American Red Cross. s always in time of disaster, the Red Cross was e official relief agency. It was the Red Cross hat handled the repairing or rebuilding of omes and that replaced household goods of eople temporarily impoverished by their losses.

Red Cross Chapters sprang into action immediately after the first shock. To them came olunteers, wanting to help. They were busy ot only in Los Angeles, Long Beach and Comp-n, but in Santa Monica, San Diego, San Bernardino, Anaheim, Santa Barbara and Riverside. he efficiency with which Red Cross units moved their tasks constituted an excellent example f Red Cross disaster preparedness.

With more than 1,200 volunteer doctors, sanitary workers, nurses and other volunteers giving fifty hours or more of service each, the Red ross expended $411,000 in emergency relief nd rehabilitation. Buildings were replaced or epaired for 1,232 families; 415 families were iven food; nursing or medical services were iven to nearly 200 families. In other cases, ed was furnished for animals, lost livestock nd poultry were replaced, and farm implements ere supplied. Clothing was furnished to some, ousehold goods to others.

Every year—every section of the United tates—sees a variety of disasters in which the ed Cross tenders relief. In the last year the ed Cross gave assistance to 119,000 sufferers 163 counties where tornadoes, floods, hurrianes, fires, hailstorms and other forms of catasophe had struck with vengeance. Altogether, here were seventy-eight such disasters in connental United States—a quite average year in is regard, but one that sent the national disster experts scurrying from one point of deruction to another, directing relief groups in e field.

Always the Red Cross is prepared for work disaster—a primary function of the organiation under its congressional charter. The ational organization introduced something new disaster preparedness this last year by conucting twenty-eight disaster institutes at strageic points. The instructors were experienced isaster workers. They brought together for ne-day sessions various chapter leaders, includg disaster committee chairmen, as well as ommunity leaders, city and state officials, and epresentatives of police, fire and health departents. Plans were perfected for use in disaster mergencies.

In safety, health, service to veterans, and ther directions the Red Cross conducts a year-ound program. In the last year more than 0,000 foremen, time clerks and other key emloyes of the Civil Works Administration were iven instruction in first aid, of whom more an 48,000 received Standard Red Cross certificates, as part of the National CWA safety rogram. At least one man on every project mploying fifty men or more was given fifteen ours' intensive training. Within the year more an 130,000 first-aid certificates were awarded -making a total of more than three-quarters f a million such certificates awarded by the ed Cross since establishment of the service enty-five years ago. Many lives have been ved, the serious effects of accidents reduced, California, as elsewhere, because of the Red ross first-aid instruction.

Another program—the training in first aid of embers of the Civilian Conservation Corps—now going forward with the likelihood that least 300,000 corps members will be given ed Cross instruction before its completion.

At beaches and in pools the Red Cross was so very much in evidence the last twelve onths. More than 72,000 life-saving certifiates were issued by the Red Cross in 1933-34. That brings the total within the two decades in which the Red Cross has maintained its life saving service, to nearly 560,000.

One of the charter obligations of the Society is service to the military and naval men and their families, and to war veterans and their families; the Coast Guard also comes within the scope of this service. With economic pressure making itself felt and numerous changes in veterans regulations put into effect, the Red Cross has had a tremendous demand for help. In 1933-34 its chapter home service workers dealt with the problems of more than 329,000 ex-service men or their families. In hospitals and regional offices of the Veterans Administration and in other government hospitals, representatives of the national organization dealt with more than 67,000 disabled ex-service men or their families.

This service goes under the appropriate designation, war-service—an immediate heritage from the World War, a device for meeting continuing responsibility, a provision to assure expert and experienced help to those left blind, shell-shocked, broken in spirit or in physique, as well as a means for rendering a variety of Red Cross services so personal, so human, so flexible that they cannot readily be performed by government.

A number of times each year there are emergency demands for Red Cross nurses. Those of us who think of Red Cross nurses usually in terms of the World War will be surprised that there are more than 36,000 nurses on the active list of the Red Cross nurses' reserve ready for instant service in the army, the navy or the Red Cross. These nurses meet the highest professional standards, and are available in every part of the Nation. They constitute a powerful line of health defense.

The press occasionally carries stories of spectacular Red Cross nursing achievements, but it may be that their largest contribution is the work of the public health nurses in their daily bedside nursing, their detection of unsanitary conditions, their co-operation with local health authorities in the improvement of health situations, their health inspections of children and adults, their zeal in promoting immunization against contagious diseases, their teaching of simple home nursing.

This last year Red Cross Chapters employed 770 public health nurses in year round programs of bedside nursing. They made more than a million nursing visits. They went into the schools and inspected 629,000 children—detected defects before they developed serious complications, sent many a child to doctor or dentist or oculist for corrections that made school work easier and safeguarded future development.

It is humanly impossible for even a large group of professional nurses to respond to all demands for service. To meet this pressing need, the Red Cross trains many of its nurses to teach mothers, fathers and even younger members of the family to take care of chronic invalids, the aged, sick brothers and sisters and others in the home. Last year 2,391 nurses were authorized to conduct courses in Red Cross home hygiene and care of the sick. More than 62,000 students attended classes, of whom 49,000 were awarded certificates for satisfactory completion of the course. That makes nearly three-quarters of a million certificates issued since the Red Cross first undertook the teaching of home hygiene classes.

A new feature within the last year has been the organization of classes by 654 Red Cross instructors, in co-operation with the Federal Emergency Relief Administration. Eleven Red Cross nurses were provided, on an itinerant basis, to twenty-one isolated communities that would otherwise have been without this most useful type of service.

Another busy year in family relief has been added to depression years preceding. Assistance to 284,669 civilian families is reported by Red Cross chapters. Transient veterans have been helped at the request of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration. Chapters have also co-operated with this government agency in an adult education program for the unemployed, through the use of unemployed teachers; Red Cross classes were organized in home hygiene, food selection, first aid and life saving.

Volunteers serve not only in time of disaster or special stress but work on organized lines throughout the year. In the last twelve months tabulated, they produced in chapter workrooms 4,734,240 garments; 342,366 pages of braille for the blind by hand and 314,788 by duplicating process. More than 16,000 Christmas bags were prepared for enlisted men at distant or isolated points. More than 64,000 calls were made by members of motor corps. More than 67,000 home service visits were made; more than 3,600,000 surgical dressings and 18,000 layettes were prepared. Canteen workers fed more than 149,000 persons. The number of volunteers, aside from those engaged in disaster relief, totaled 322,253.

Teachers and pupils are appreciative of the educational and humanitarian values of the Junior Red Cross, and more than a quarter of a million increase in enrollment in this branch was rung up in the school year 1933-34—the peak reaching to 7,350,280.

The American Red Cross, headed by the President of the United States and officially recognized as the national disaster relief agency, is semi-governmental in character and enjoys the cordial co-operation of the several arms of the government. Nevertheless, it depends for its support upon the people. Each year it calls upon the citizenship for membership support with which to gird itself for the tasks of the ensuing year. The invitation goes out between Armistice Day and Thanksgiving, and every reader of The Grizzly Bear is urged to embrace the opportunity to join through a local chapter.

WHEN WINTER COMES

(REGINA KAUFMAN.)

Dank fogs, grey tresses of the sea,
Cling close to the stark nudity
Of hills and bay.

Leaves veined and shriveled as an aged hand
Spread sapless palms for clemency
To sodden clay.

Brown seed pods with their summer's hoard
Hide their rich treasure jealously
In earthy mould.

And petals pale as dreaming lids
Deep in their sleep so helplessly
Release their hold.

THE MISSIONS OF CALIFORNIA

THE CHRISTMAS SEASON WAS THE pride and joy of the childlike neophytes; for then they could represent the coming of the Saviour. Everything was enacted as lifelike as possible. Mary, Joseph, the Shepherds, the Three Kings, and all the others were impersonated by Indians. Other ecclesiastical seasons were similarly celebrated, and the instructions adapted to the occasion. In truth, a more kindly, patriarchal life hardly existed anywhere. Inasmuch as there were many holidays, and nothing worried the neophytes, surely no one was overworked save the heads of the great families—the missionaries.

The principal occupation of the mission Indians was agriculture. This included the clearing of the land, ploughing, planting grain, building irrigation ditches, irrigating the soil, harvesting the crops, thrashing wheat and barley, husking corn, picking beans, peas, lentils and garbanzos, gathering grapes and fruits and so forth. The implements were necessarily very primitive. Where wheat and barley were sown, a bushy branch was used to cover the seed. In places a log of wood was drawn over the field. Corn was planted by hand in the rut made by the plough, and the seed was covered with soil by means of the foot. Harvesting was similarly primitive and laborious; but as there was no need of haste it made no difference to the Indians, and the missionaries were satisfied to see their wards acquiring habits of industry and shunning idleness. The grain was thrashed by the trampling of cattle. Wheat and corn were ground to flour by the Indian women after their own primitive way by crushing with the pestle in a mortar or in baskets. Later on water mills were introduced.

Many of the neophytes were set to work at the various trades, such as the needs of the community demanded. Thus in the course of time we find them making bricks, tiles and pottery, laying brick, doing carpenter and mason work, making shoes, saddles, hats, clothes, candles, soap, tanning hides, combing and spinning wool, melting tallow, shearing sheep, blacksmithing, etc. One of the chief occupations was the weaving of a kind of coarse cloth and blankets from the wool of their own sheep. The women and girls would spin, sew, grind corn, and attend to household duties. Even the children were employed to chase away birds from the orchards and vineyards, or doing the chores of which they were capable.

Fewer laborers were required to care for the livestock; but, as each mission possessed large herds of cattle, sheep and horses, and some mules, a good number of men and boys were engaged in this department of the mission system. The pastures at most seasons of the year were abundant, and the domestic animals increased amazingly; but, except for those that were slaughtered for food, little advantage was obtained from the cattle beyond the value of the hides and tallow. A time was set apart at certain seasons of the year to which the Indians looked ahead as a period of feasting and relaxation. This was the time of the rodeo. The cattle were rounded up in a large enclosure for the purpose of examining and counting them. On this occasion also the young would be branded with the mark of the mission. Those that were to be operated upon were forced through a gate singly, and then lassoed. When secured the iron brand was applied, and thus marked the animal as the property of the particular mission.

The product of the field was garnered in granaries, and the goods produced in the shops were stored in the mission warehouse for the benefit of the community. All, Indians and missionaries, shared alike in what was produced. No one received wages, because the wants of all were supplied from the common property. The missionary himself received no more. When there was an opportunity, the missionary would sell to foreign merchants what could be spared, and in turn he purchased groceries, dry goods, and especially iron and ironware. Most wearing apparel was manufactured by the Indians, so that no other expenditure was necessary. The clothing of the neophytes was simple, but well adapted to their tastes and mode of life. The men wore a linen shirt and pantaloons; they were also given a woolen blanket made at the mission shops. The overseers and expert workmen wore clothes like the Spaniards. The women wore chemise, gown and blanket or shawl, likewise manufactured at the mission.

This was the carefree, contented, and happy life which the Indians led under the care of the devoted padres.

No one was compelled to join the mission. Only those who voluntarily presented themselves for instruction and for the mode of life they observed at the mission, were admitted to baptism after a period of probation. They were first induced by means of gifts and persuasion to visit the establishments and to witness the happy, carefree life of the Christians, and thus shown the advantage of it from a merely worldly point of view. The missionary then would try to make the visitors grasp the spiritual aim and the advantage of becoming Christians. The persuasion of well-fed Christian relatives operated more powerfully in favor of the mission than even the gentle manner of the missionary. To know that there would always be something to eat at the mission, while away from it there was everlasting want of food, was a powerful incentive; for a material meal would attract the savage far more effectively than any other inducements. It was not a noble motive, but it was as high as the low Californian was in the habit of thinking, and the only one which he could command. The better motive for staying and submitting to the conditions came when he received instruction. If he could form the firm resolution necessary, he was free to depart; and many did return to their wild ways. After the candidates had once received baptism, however, which could not be administered until the missionary had convinced himself that the catechumens were in good faith and determined, they were not free to resume their wild and immoral life, because they bore the indelible mark of a Christian upon the soul, which it is not allowed to desecrate.

There was another reason to forbid the neophyte to return to former ways. If he rejoined his heathen tribesmen, he was a menace to the peace of the mission people and of the colonists. The mission history of Old Mexico, New Mexico, Florida, Texas, Arizona, and of San Diego itself proved this. Nevertheless, the male neophytes were allowed to visit their pagan relatives and friends in the mountains or deserts. Such permission was frequently granted for a period of two weeks. During the vacation he might go anywhere from San Diego to San Francisco, and he was sure to be treated hospitably at every mission. That was far more than the Indians could do in their savage state. Before the coming of the missionaries, the Indians could not safely leave their little district to go even so short a distance as forty or fifty miles.

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO---A MEMORIAL

Before the ruins of San Juan Capistrano, in the point of beauty, even the unblemished pile of Santa Barbara must give way. The great cross, shattered now, with its church, monastery, convent and workshops, and its wings of corridors outlined, was erected of gray stone and was hardly less than a decade in building. On a mountain several leagues away the great timbers for the beams were hewn. The stone came from a quarry six miles distant. The huge blocks were transported by the mission Indians, numbering roughly a thousand, in crude bullock-carts; the smaller blocks, men, women and even children carried on their heads. Back and forth in the daylight hours, year after year, the Indians of Capistrano trod the long way to bring the stone that should build an imperishable shrine. Imperishable, in one sense, it is; but its structure, completed in 1806, stood unmarred for only six years. One of the uninjured rooms of the convent was converted into a chapel. Services are held there and the parish priest lives at the mission.

About San Juan Capistrano, even today, lingers the fragrance of the past. In the little seaside village, English is seldom heard. The sombrero frequently, and even an occasional dingy and frayed serape, may be seen in the groups of swarthy skinned men lounging and smoking in the sun. All reminds one of the caballero who rode forth to take part in one of the numerous fiestas at Monterey or San Jose, attired in a jacket trimmed with scarlet, a brightly colored silk sash, velvet pantaloons slashed below the knee and laced with gilt, embroidered shoes, a sombrero sporting a band of embroidery or ribbon under which his head was tightly boun with a black silk handkerchief. A serape wa draped about his shoulders; his long hair wa braided in a queue and tied with ribbons. Rib bons and jingling bits of metal on bridle-rein and stirrups added to the pride of his high mettled horse. The sloe-eyed maid who chal lenged him to dance by breaking on his hea a cascaron—an eggshell filled with gold an silver paper, or scented water—would be arraye in white muslin smock and petticoat flounce with scarlet—her arms bare and her trim ankle visible—scarlet sash, shoes of velvet or of blu satin; and a gay rebozo or cotton scarf, in th management of which she would display an in finite number of enticing and graceful gestures When the day's sports were over, the thin swee twanging of guitars would call caballero an senorita to the dance, until, by ones and two and whispering, laughing groups, the merry makers flitted home like shadows across th plaza which lay white as pearl in the drenchin light of the southern moon.

Today, within the walls, shut off from th modern world, it is not difficult to transpor oneself in spirit back to the pastoral days, to th golden age of the missions, when the vine-cov ered graves were fewer, when the unmarre walls stood firmly and proudly, a beautiful sigh to the traveler approaching from the open, de serted country.

The picture was an animated one, full of lif and activity, as well as a beautiful one, not onl from the buildings, rearing up their walls grandly white, in the bright sunlight, but als from the beauty of human life and purpose Here was a gathering of the aborigines in al stages of savagism and semi-civilization, work ing at every kind of occupation necessary to th well-being of the community as a whole. Her were men making adobe bricks and tiles fo buildings, clearing the land for the harvest working in the vineyards and olive groves, tend ing the livestock, grinding corn and wheat shearing the sheep and preparing the wool fo the weaving, filling the occupations of carpen ters, builders, workers in iron, potters; here could be seen women busy in all domestic af fairs, spinning, weaving, sewing, sometime working in the fields and gardens with the men cooking, taking care of the buildings, tendin their babies. The children, too, were not idle— for they had their own part in the general activ ity of all, doing what their slighter strengt permitted, and, then, they had their school du ties to fulfill, under the charge of the father who oversaw and directed everything. Then to complete the picture, over all, the great whit church, heavy buttressed, covered with roof o warm yellow and red tiles, ending the sky wit a domed belfry; the buildings adjoining, long low, cloistered rooms, all white, running aroun the four sides of the patio, a sunny spot, bow ered in blossoming plants, with a fountai splashing musically in the warm sunshine.

Such is the picture of the old days a visit t the mission conjures up. And now in its ruin San Juan Capistrano is a noble, imposing reli —a mute tribute to the faith and the courag that built it.

The Franciscans are gone, but as long as stone of Capistrano remains, their spirit will b with us.

"TO THE OFFICERS AND MEMBERS of all Subordinate Parlors N.S.G.W.—Dear Sirs and Brothers: You have already or will shortly receive notice of the official visit of the Visiting Grand Officer assigned to visit your Parlor. His visit is a very important event in the official business of the Parlor. In recent years the visit of the Grand Officer to the local Parlors has been too frequently regarded as a matter-of-course affair; consequently, it has lost the significance which it should have upon our members.

"The system of visiting local Parlors was established for the special benefit of the Parlors, and we should get out of these visits as much as possible, and this can be accomplished only by arousing interest in the visit of your Grand Officer. He comes to you as a representative of the Grand Parlor, in a spirit of goodwill and in an earnest effort to help you build up your Parlor. He brings the message of the Order to the local members. The Secretaries and all brothers should see to it that the membership is notified and specially requested to be present. Support him by a full attendance. Every member present will enjoy the meeting, and the Visiting Officer will be helped and encouraged to put forth his best efforts to increase our membership.

"Brothers, I am greatly encouraged by the enthusiasm that everywhere pervades our ranks. Every Parlor in the state is taking up the work in earnest. Conditions are most favorable for a greatly increased membership. Let us not miss our opportunity. I hope the good work started will continue throughout the year. If possible, initiate a class upon the visit of the Grand Officer. In Friendship, Loyalty and Charity,

"CHAS. A. KOENIG,
"Grand President N.S.G.W.

"San Francisco, October 15, 1934."

State Division Rapped.

Oakland—Fruitvale No. 252 has adopted the following resolution, presented by George J. Hans and Grand Trustee Edward T. Schnarr:

"Whereas, The daily press informed us that a resolution had been introduced in the special session of the California Legislature designed to give study to the advisability of dividing California into two separate states; and whereas, there is no good reason, either economic or poliitcal, for a division of the State of California; and whereas, the tenets and promulgations of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West have always been for a united California, and against state division of any kind; and whereas, a division of California into two separate states will bring about a disruption of our great fraternal organization and of itself compel those Parlors existant in the emasculated section of our State to be disbanded, or to carry on in a state other than the one for whose early traditions they have long labored and existed; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the members of Fruitvale Parlor No. 252 N.S.G.W. hereby emphasize the fact that, as members of this great Californian fraternal organization whose teachings recognize no sectional part of this State as differing from any other section, also as private citizens born on Californian soil in all sections of this glorious State, we want a united, bigger and better California, and are unalterably opposed to any resolution, legislation or propaganda designed to bring about a division of the State of California; and be it further resolved, that a copy of this resolution be sent to the assemblyman from this district and to the other assemblyman who sponsored the resolution; that a copy be sent to the Grand Parlor, Native Sons of the Golden West, and another copy be sent to The Grizzly Bear Magazine."

Great Occasion—Huge Success.

San Bernardino—With Arrowhead No. 110 as the host, the group initiation at the Parlor's Crestline clubhouse September 29 was a huge success. The Parlors in Los Angeles, Orange, San Bernardino and San Diego Counties were all represented by large delegations, and No. 110 dispensed hospitality lavishly. Grand President Chas. A. Koenig and Grand Secretary John T. Regan were delighted with the excellent showing. Thirty candidates were presented for initiation—twenty-three for Arrowhead, three for University No. 272 (Los Angeles), two for Sepulveda No. 263 (San Pedro) and two for Glendale No. 264. The ritual was exemplified in an exceptionally impressive manner by Grand Secretary Regan, acting as president, and the regular officers of Arrowhead filling the other stations.

Grand President Koenig, addressing the gathering, praised highly the southern district deputies for their efforts to promote the Order's welfare, and commended the Parlors for their enterprise and co-operation. Other speakers were Grand Third Vice-president Eldred L. Meyer, Grand Marshal William A. Reuter, Grand Trustee Donald E. VanLuven, Past Grand John T. Newell, Chairman Bernard Hiss of the southern district deputies committee, and Ben Harrison, former grand trustee, who voiced the sentiments of the host, Arrowhead Parlor, whose members were out in force, garbed in costumes of the days of '49. CALIFORNIA FIFTY YEARS AGO

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION WAS held November 4, 1884. In California, the day was a balmy one, and a big vote was polled, the Blaine electors receiving 102,416 and the Cleveland electors 89,248 votes. The Republicans elected five congressmen, the Democrats one, and the Republicans captured the State Legislature. The presidential result in the nation was so close the electoral vote of New York decided the contest; that state gave Grover Cleveland a lead of 1,047 and he became President.

San Francisco elected as mayor, Washington Bartlett, a Democrat, and by being elected coroner, Dr. C. C. O'Donnell achieved the ambition of his life.

Thanksgiving Day, November 27, was observed according to the habits and tastes of the citizens. Of course, there was a difference in the feelings of many. As a newspaper editor surveyed the situation: "This is the first Thanksgiving Day, since President Lincoln issued his first proclamation establishing it nationally, that the Democrats can feast on turkey and the Republicans eat crow."

Viands for the Thanksgiving dinner were cheaper than at present. There was no depression—except a political one with the Republicans—existing then to make low prices. Prevalent retail prices were: dressed turkeys 20c, roast beef 8c, leg of lamb 5½c, butter 30c pound; eggs, 40c dozen; chickens, 50c each; mallard ducks, 50c brace; quail, $1 dozen; jack rabbits, 15c each; apples, $1 box; potatoes, turnips, carrots, onions, 75c cental. Wheat was selling for $1.25 a cental.

No rain fell during November, but as the rainfall in October was in excess of normal there was no worry about a dry season ahead.

San Diego was putting up poles, to light the city with electricity.

Eureka, Humboldt County, had a population of 6,000. Its police force of three men had little to do.

Stephen H. Meek, who arrived in California in 1833 and was now 80 years of age, was still following the occupation of a trapper in Siskiyou County.

Former Governor Leland Stanford arrived in Menlo Park, San Mateo County, from Europe, November 27, with the remains of his son, who died in Italy.

The Georgetown, El Dorado County, stage was stopped November 6 near Johntown by a masked man who got $500 worth of golddust and robbed the driver of $6.

Charles and Frederick Sattler, brothers, stole $3,000 worth of amalgam from the Waterman mine mill at Daggett, San Bernardino County, and were arrested.

The sluices of the Coon Hollow placer mine were robbed the night of November 15. Six days later five Chinamen were overhauled as they boarded a train at Shingle Springs, El Dorado County, and over $3,000 worth of golddust was found hidden in their baggage.

A. D. January, a deputy under his father, State Treasurer W. A. January, was found to have stolen $40,000 of state funds, which he lost at gambling. This caused the state treasurer's bondsmen to withdraw as sureties, and he lost his position.

The San Francisco "Chronicle" published a series of articles reflecting on the business methods of Claus Spreckels, the sugar magnate. November 19, Adolph Spreckels, the son of Claus, entered the editorial room and shot Mike DeYoung, the publisher. A dangerous, but not fatal, wound was inflicted. A clerk named Emerson shot and slightly wounded young Spreckels.

Boring an artesian well near Ukiah, Mendocino County, oil was found at a depth of sixty feet, and great excitement resulted.

Boring an artesian well at Windsor, Sonoma County, a strata of blue clay 101 feet thick was struck at a depth of sixty feet. Then the auger went through the trunk of a buried redwood tree ten feet in diameter, and below that penetrated the bone of some prehistoric animal.

Fire at Biggs, Butte County, November 4, destroyed several buildings, causing a $10,000 loss; Allen Crow was cremated. The same day, at Merced City, four business buildings were destroyed, with a $20,000 loss.

At the Buckeye House, on the Quincy, Plumas County, stage road thirty-five miles from Oroville, Butte County, fire destroyed the stage stables, eleven horses, two stages and other property. The loss was $20,000.

The Southern Pacific depot at Mojave, Kern County, was destroyed by fire November 15. The Napa City Hotel, the pioneer hostelry there, burned November 19 with a $10,000 loss. The Rancho Chico Flourmill at Chico, Butte County, burned November 25; it was a three-story structure built in 1860; the loss was $40,000.

Rev. Barney Fletcher, a Negro minister of San Francisco, died November 2. Born a slave in Maryland, he was brought to California by his master in 1849. He sold newspapers on river boats, saved his earnings, and purchased his freedom and that of his wife. Then he became a self-educated minister.

Dr. H. Gibbons Sr., a leading San Francisco physician, died November 5 at Wilmington, Delaware, aged 77. He founded Cooper Institute, the first medical college in California, and for many years was president of the State Health Board.

S. G. McMahon, Yolo County Pioneer, died November 23. He came to California in 1841 and settled on the farm on Putah Creek which he tilled until his death.

Dan W. Gelwicks, one of the state's prominent newspapermen and state printer in 1868, died November 24 at Sacramento City. He mined at Coloma in 1849, and for many years lived in El Dorado County.

A train struck a carriage occupied by five men near San Rafael, Marin County, November 27, and killed Thomas O'Donnell and George Harding.

A. D. Cameron of Gilroy, Santa Clara County, while quail hunting November 22 was accidentally killed.

Ezekiel Roberts, Nevada City, Nevada County, Pioneer of 1850, fell from a tramway November 20 and was fatally injured.

Mrs. Eliza Hoey, hanging out washing in San Francisco, fell from a balcony and broke her neck.

Mrs. Philip A. Wagner was thrown from a buggy at Stockton, San Joaquin County, November 10, and fatally injured.

In New York City last month, the National California Club observed, with appropriate ceremonies, the one hundredth anniversary of the arrival in New York of John August Sutter, one of the outstanding early-day Pioneers of California.

The club has launched a movement for a memorial to General Sutter and James Wilson Marshall, who made the famous gold discovery at Coloma, El Dorado County, that brought thousands to California from all points of the world.

Mrs. Thomas J. Vivian, president of the club, in an address stressed the fact that John August Sutter and James Wilson Marshall, who paved the way for California to become famous,—the most wonderful, the most glorious and universally useful unit of the Union—should have a memorial worthy of their courage. Californians in the East have taken the initiative because New York was the landing place of the immigrant, Sutter, and New Jersey the birthplace of Marshall, El Dorado discoverer of the standard metal of the world.

Homeless Children

A WORTHWHILE NON-SECTARIAN ENDEAVOR SPONSORED AND SUPPORTED BY THE ORDERS OF NATIVE SONS AND NATIVE DAUGHTERS OF THE GOLDEN WEST

AT THE REGULAR MEETING OF THE Central Committee on Homeless Children, September 21, Ariana W. Stirling was re-elected chairman, Martin J. Dinkelspiel vice-chairman and Mary E. Brusie secretary. Edward J. Wren, Sue J. Irwin and Fletcher A. Cutler were appointed to the finance committee. The officers fully appreciate the confidence expressed by their co-workers in again electing them, and the honor that is theirs in being called upon to serve for another term. Members of the committee are fully alive to the many problems confronting them, the uncertainty of the times, the need for strict economy in carrying on the project, the convincing of the new members of the Order that the work requires their whole-hearted support if it is to progress, and the calling to arms of the older members who have not been as active as in the days of old, although loyally cherishing the charity as something for which they have been personally responsible and which they hope to be proud of always.

A three-year-old boy came to the office of the Committee a few weeks ago with his mother and while she dealt in whispered superlatives in describing the disposition and intelligence of their adopted boy, the little fellow proceeded unconcernedly to play "make believe." He placed a large envelope on his head for a postman's cap and gathered all the envelopes from the office waste-paper baskets and began to make his afternoon deliveries. No postman ever found more expectant or more grateful recipients than this little man found when he delivered his letters that September afternoon in 998 Edd street. His mother told of another play time at home when she sent him to the make-believe store supposedly for buttons. Upon his return she inquired if he had brought her the buttons and her small son replied: "No, they were all out of buttons, so I brought you some button holes," and forthwith solemnly presented the "parcel" to his mother.

The fact that children are ONLY children no doubt accounts, too, for a little girl whose mother told of the child's love for Make-Believe Land. She and the little four-year-old girl were waiting in their automobile in front of a store for a friend to complete her shopping. The child grew restless, and finally said: "I've filled up your gas tank now and we can get started. Mother said: "Well, that was very kind of you I am sure, but where did you get your money to pay for gas?" The child replied: "Oh, I told the man to come on the first or the fifteenth and that's the time I pay my bills."

Two Native Daughters Parlors are planning to adopt baby girls: Joaquin No. 5 (Stockton) and Fort Bragg No. 210. They have not named them as yet, but will soon. Presidio Parlor No. 148 (San Francisco) has just completed the six weeks' care of its second child, "Florence."

The Central Committee has just heard from Secretary Frances Wackman of Liberty Parlor No, 213 N.D.G.W. (Elk Grove), that it is hard to put over a dance or any other form of entertainment and clear anything for the children the Parlor is assessing each member fifty cents, and expects to have the returns in the hands of the Committee at an early date.

J. C. Bates of Halcyon Parlor No. 146 N.S.G.W. (Alameda) writes: "Enclosed please find our check for $25, Halcyon's usual donation to the noble cause you so faithfully carry on. We are glad to contribute; our only regret is that we cannot do more."

The Central Committee appreciates the courtesy of these letters and will be glad to hear from other Parlors as to their activities for the children this year.

Native Daughters of the Golden West

"TO THE OFFICERS AND MEMBERS of the Subordinate Parlors Native Daughters of the Golden West—Dear Sisters: During the month of November occur the two holidays which are most distinctively national of all the days of special observance throughout the year. These are Armistice Day, November 11th, and Thanksgiving Day, November 29th. They are occasions universally observed through the entire country; both are in a measure days of solemn and thoughtful thanks to Almighty God—days at once appropriate for penance and for rejoicing. It is perhaps significant that such observance should occur at this time of falling leaves, 'the saddest of the year,' for the memories of the past throw about these days a certain amount of sadness by way of contrast to the rejoicings to follow.

"The signing of the Armistice that marked the end of the World War terminated a period of horror and universal carnage. No more melancholy memory can touch our lives than that which is involved in those years of catastrophe. In our observance of this day, let us not lose sight of the suffering and privation that preceded that joyful event; in that memory let us highly resolve that there shall be no abatement of our abhorrence for national strife, and that we shall contend against it till 'the war-drums beat no longer.'

"As in the early Pilgrim Days, Thanksgiving Day in 1934 comes at the end—let us at least hope—of a period of great financial stress and uncertainty. Many months, perhaps years, of struggle still lie before us on the road to true prosperity, but we may never-the-less unite in profound gratitude to God for the upward trend that is at last raising us from the depths.

"Let us then sing our Thanksgiving throughout this season of November festivity, for the bounties of Nature so richly bestowed upon us; for happy homes filled with laughter; for a land at Peace with all the world, and blessed with returning plenty; for the brave banner of our freedom, that shall ever guide us on the path of Truth to fulfillment of a glorious destiny.

"It is my wish that both of these days shall be appropriately observed by all Subordinate Parlors, in the spirit of true Thanksgiving for the deliverance from calamity and gratitude to the Author of our being, for the blessings of Peace and returning plenty. Sincerely and fraternally yours in P.D.F.A.,

"GLADYS E. NOCE,
"Grand President N.D.G.W.
"Sutter Creek, October 22, 1934."

Covered Wagon Days Theme of District Meet.

Watsonville—The thirteenth annual parley of District No. 25, comprising the Parlors in Monterey, Santa Cruz and San Benito Counties, was held here September 29. The festivities opened with a dinner at which the table decorations were miniature covered wagons and stagecoaches. At the speakers' table was a eighty-year-old linen tablecloth, into the fabric of which is woven a portrait of George Washington, and other interesting relics, including a 350-year-old spinning wheel, were on display. The 115 members in attendance were attired in pioneer costumes, in keeping with the theme of the occasion, "Covered Wagon Days."

Supervising Deputy Rose Rhyner was the toastmistress, and a welcome was extended by President Bernice Games of El Pajaro No. 35 (Watsonville). Community activities were reported by the presidents of the six Parlors, Deputy Mildred Peers spoke on "Co-operation," Past Grand Bertha A. Briggs urged formation of a district past presidents association, and Grand Organist Pearl Reid paid tribute to the Pioneer Mothers. Mary Gregory and Adele Wackerman presented a pleasing "Mickey and Minnie Mouse" stunt.

Secretary Mary E. Brusie of the Central Homeless Children Committee gave, in her own inimitable manner, a most informative talk on the placing of homeless kiddies in good homes. The closing number on the program was a progressive pageant in six episodes portraying the story of a wagon train from an Eastern point to the establishment of a pioneer home in California. The episodes were presented by Santa Cruz No. 26, El Pajaro No. 35, Aleli No. 102, Copa de Oro No. 105, San Juan Bautista No. 179 and Junipero No. 141.

Trek to Historic Church.

Columbia—Several Native Daughters, including a large delegation from Encinal No. 156 (Alameda City) headed by Laura Fisher, Irene Rose and Charlotte Heritage, recently paid a visit to historic Saint Ann's Church, and were royally received by the local residents. During luncheon a letter from Golden Era No. 99 was read. "Everything in our human experience started as a thought," it said, "so what a joyous day it has been to have our Native Daughters of Alameda, Encinal Parlor No. 156, and other Parlors return and sing in the cherished and historical St. Ann's Church, that was erected between 1856 and 1858." Among the speakers were Past Grand President Mae C. Boldemann and Past Grand Secretary Laura Frakes-Toman.

In 1911 Saint Ann's Church was condemned, but was saved through the efforts of the Native Daughters and the Native Sons. At that time Ella Sterling Mighels of Hayward No. 122 composed the following, entitled "St. Ann's Church, 1858-1911":

Toll my bell! Toll my bell!
Let it ring my funeral knell.
Here I stood for fifty years,
Built by hands of Pioneers.
I've kept the faith, taught the creed,
Now sacrificed for miner's greed.

Placentia—Anaheim members of Grace No. 242 furnished the program and refreshments October 4. Geo. Spears gave an illustrated talk on California's historic landmarks, and the Anaheimites presented a miniature milk wagon containing a donation for the Parlor's adopted baby. Among those present were Grand Trustee Nellie Cline, Supervising Deputy Mary Noerenberg, Deputies Eleanore Fisher, Lena Aspden and Lillian Zirkel. With Erma Watts in charge, a cooked-food sale September 29 brought in a goodly sum.

October 8 a very successful rummage sale was held under the direction of Helen Anderson, and all articles were quickly disposed of. October 31 the sewing club met at Mrs. Anderson's home; a potluck dinner was served and sewing was done for the Parlor's adopted baby. November 1, Grace will celebrate its first anniversary in Placentia; families of the members have been invited. Mrs. Elvin Waters, formerly Irene Bessonett, is a bride of October.

Preserve Ideals of True Americanism.

Chico—Annie K. Bidwell No. 168 received an official visit from Grand President Gladys E. Noce, October 11, and an elaborate program was given in her honor. Others in attendance were Grand Marshal Edna Briggs, Supervising Deputy Florence Boyle and Deputy Margaret Gilbert. President Mary Westbrook presided, and ten candidates were initiated.

The Grand President gave a wonderful talk, urging co-operation to preserve the ideals of true Americanism and to protect the state's welfare, and stressing the need for increased effort for the homeless children. A pageant of discoveries commemorated Columbus Day. In the banquetroom the table was adorned with autumn flowers. Chairmen of the evening included Edna Boyd, Alice Bass, Irene Henry and Cora Hintz.

The Parlor had its annual "pioneer day" celebration September 29, and several oldtimers were guests. An interesting event of the occasion was the presentation of a large lifelike painting of General John Bidwell. Cora Hintz and Myrtle Stolp have been appointed on a committee to bring before the Parlor literature, history, etc., of the Golden State which will prove instructive and entertaining.

Poppies, by the Thousands.

Modesto—Fifteen members of Morada No. 199 having birthdays in July, August and September were honored guests September 26. They were seated at a banquet table, the centerpiece of which was a large, attractively decorated birthday cake, and were presented with corsages of fall flowers. Ann Sargent related events of the Columbia pilgrimage, Ethel Enos spoke on California history, and Lena Browder read a poem, "The Pioneer Woman."

Morada formed a club to make poppies to decorate a float for the Armistice Day parade. The club has been meeting weekly the past two months, and to date some 10,000 poppies have been made. The meetings are held at the homes of different members, and an award is made on each occasion to the one making the most poppies. Refreshments are served by the hostess, who is assisted by three members.

Eight Initiated.

Napa—Grand President Gladys E. Noce paid an official visit to Eschol No. 16, September 24. A turkey dinner preceding the meeting was attended by sixty-five members. Among the many other visitors were Grand Trustee Willow Borba, Supervising Deputy Lillus Kelly and Deputy Doris Filtz.

SAN FRANCISCO

COMPLETION OF SAN FRANCISCO'S great Hetch Hetchy water-supply project was celebrated at Crystal Springs Lake reservoir in San Mateo County October 28. The celebration centered upon the first flow of actual waters from the distant mountain reservoir at O'Shaughnessy Dam, Tuolumne County, into Crystal Springs Lake.

Traversing 155 miles, Hetch Hetchy water was released from the mouth of the Pulgas tunnel, at the south end of the lake. The occasion signalized completion of San Francisco's $100,000,000 mountain water-supply system after twenty years of construction. The significance of the event attracted a huge crowd.

RECEPTION FOR N.D. GRAND PRESIDENT.

The N.D.G.W. Home Committee, Past Grand President Dr. Mariana Bertola chairman, had a reception for Grand President Gladys E. Noce, September 30, and members of the Order from all parts of the state were there, including a large delegation from Amapola No. 80 (Sutter Creek), Mrs. Noce's home-Parlor.

The very best of talent comprised the program, and the main speaker was Congresswoman Florence Kahn. Light refreshments were served. Among those present were Past Grand Presidents Eliza D. Keith, Margaret G. Hill, Cora B. Sifford and Carrie R. Durham, and Past Grand Secretry Laura Frakes-Toman.

ANNUAL CHILDREN'S BENEFIT.

The San Francisco Joint N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. Homeless Children Committee will have its annual ball at the Civic Auditorium, Saturday evening, November 17. Walter Bammann is the chairman and Agnes M. Curry the secretary of the committee. Prizes will be awarded the Native Sons and the Native Daughters Parlors for the largest number and the largest percentage of members in line.

Preceding the ball there will be competitive contests, and awards will be made as follows: best N.D. drill team; best N.D. drum corps; best N.S. drum corps; best N.S. and N.D. drum corps; best N.S. drum corps with field music.

ALAMEDA N.D.G.W. SPONSOR BREAKFAST.

More than a hundred were in attendance at the October 14 breakfast at the N.D.G.W. Home sponsored by the Alameda County deputies, with Supervising Deputy Dora Brayton in charge. Honor-guests included Past Grand Presidents Harry G. Williams and Justice Emmet Seawell of the Native Sons; Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler, Grand Treasurer Susie K. Christ, Grand Inside Sentinel Alice M. Oldham, Grand Outside Sentinel Claire Lindsey, Past Grand Presidents Dr. Mariana Bertola and Eliza D. Keith of the Native Daughters; Mrs. Sara Rutherford, Home Committeewomen Emily Ryan and Millie Tietjen.

A splendid program was presented. Justice Seawell, the speaker, gave an inspiring talk on the life of Christopher Columbus. A quartet from Bahia Vista Parlor No. 167 (Oakland)—Imelda Smith, Mary Mills, Ann Quinn and Elsie Derickson—accompanied by May Mills, sang two compositions, and Florence Derickson favored with a piano solo. Members of the Alameda County Parlors participated in a jam and jelly shower, and presented over a hundred glasses to the Home.

Piedmont Parlor No. 87 (Oakland) chose the occasion to formally dedicate a room as a loving tribute to the memory of Past Grand President Addie L. Mosher, deceased, for many years a faithful member of the Home Committee. Gretta Murden was in charge of the ceremonies. Harry Williams presented a plaque for the door of the room named for Mrs. Mosher, and it was accepted by Dr. Bertola. Melba Staehle, accompanied by Ruth Martin, gave two violin selections, and the fine program concluded with Miss Staehle's rendition of "A Perfect Day."

SAN FRANCISCO IN AUTUMN

(DELMAR H. WILLIAMS.)

We feel our senses quicken
And scan the cloudless sky;
About our sturdy vessel
The silent waters lie;
A mist bedims the headland
That seems so far away;
We're sailing in the Autumn
On San Francisco Bay.

We're wondering why the natives
Must ever stress the boon
Of California's winters
And vaunted days of June;
There's not in all the Union
A climate so sublime
As that of San Francisco—
When it is autumn time.

—October Sunset.

LASUEN CORRECT.

Editor Grizzly Bear: Have read with interest the article by Wilbur Sherman on "The Missions of California" in the October Grizzly Bear. Note, however, the name of Father Lasuen (as I believe it to be) is, throughout the article, spelled "Lausen." Kindly advise which is correct. RICHARD E. BARRY.

(Barry was advised: According to the best California history authorities, the name is, as you believe, correctly spelled "Lasuen, Fray Fermin."—Editor.)

THANKS FOR ESSAY PUBLICATION.

Editor Grizzly Bear: On behalf of Los Postas Parlor No. 96 N.S.G.W., want to thank you for printing the Sherman essay ["The Missions of California"] in your good magazine. We are going to have the manuscript bound and placed in the California history section of the Livermore Library, for which we have purchased a number of books. Again thanking you, and wishing you plenty of success,

J. J. KELLY, Secretary.
Livermore, October 5, 1934.

GREAT CARE SHOULD BE TAKEN.

Editor Grizzly Bear: Have read with much interest your "Growls" in the October Grizzly Bear. Much is said about the immigration laws of the United States as affecting Japanese, but very little about the immigration laws of Japan. Have understood that the immigration laws of Japan are quite strict.

I am a member of a Congregational Church, but believe great care should be taken to keep the United States as free as possible from nationals who have sinister motives, especially where the mother country exacts homage to the mother country and protects against its nationals becoming fully and completely americanized.

OSCAR W. LORD.
Eureka, October 6, 1934.

(Not only are the immigration laws of Japan very strict, but aliens in that country are under constant surveillance. Japs, however, come here by scores, in defiance of our immigration laws, and are permitted, without interference, to go and do as they please; they even "inspect" and photograph our defenses. No Jap ever becomes "fully and completely americanized," regardless of claims otherwise.—Editor.)

GRATEFUL FOR LOYAL SUPPORT.

Editor Grizzly Bear: The official vote cast at the August primary has been compiled by the Secretary of State, Frank C. Jordan. I have had many inquiries from Native Sons and Native Daughters requesting the figures on the result of the vote cast for Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, Office No. 1, to which office I was a candidate for re-election. The complete vote shows: Justice Emmet Seawell, 774,318; Judge Hartley Shaw, 398,260; Leo Gallagher, 42,313. My plurality over Judge Shaw was 76,058, and my plurality over Gallagher, 532,-05. I received a clear majority of 133,745 over the combined vote of both Shaw and Gallagher, which means that I was elected at the primaries.

The most satisfying result of the election to me as a Californian, and I assume to the Native Sons and Daughters, is the fact that I carried EVERY county in the state by a comfortable majority. My plurality over Shaw in Los Angeles County was 77,430. Many other counties gave proportionately, and even larger, majorities.

I am not deceived as to the influences which recorded this large vote. No man ever received more loyal, earnest and active support from human agencies than I received at the hands of the Native Sons and Daughters of California. They were a tremendous power in my fight, which was purely a non-partisan contest. I have not words to express the gratitude that is in my heart for the valiant fighting spirit exhibited by the Native Sons and Daughters, equaling almost the spirit of Crusaders. I felt the weight of their influence in every part of California, and have not the slightest doubt that Native Sons and Daughters of California contributed in a very large measure to the vote which I received.

I was greatly honored by your support and trust that I may continue to merit your good opinion and respect. Fraternally yours,

EMMET SEAWELL.

NATIVE SON NEWS

NATIVE SONS NEWS BRIEFS.

Sacramento—Sacramento No. 3 entertained its oldtime members and past presidents October 11, the festivities starting with a supper; Gardner Prossy was chairman of the arrangements committee. A membership contest which started October 1 will terminate December 31. Chairman A. Mull Jr. of the Parlor's public speaking committee announces that the winter series of talks on California history by students at the junior college will start shortly.

There are thousands of fine eligibles just waiting to be extended an invitation to affiliate with the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West. Be a recruiter—extend the invitation today, not tomorrow!

San Jose—San Jose No. 22 and Observatory No. 177, and San Jose No. 82 and Vendome No. 100 N.D.G.W. are jointly sponsoring a card party for the benefit of the homeless children to be held November 2.

Livermore—Las Positas No. 96 has set December 17 as the date for its annual Christmas tree for Livermore Valley children.

Sonoma City—The Sonoma, Marin and Napa Counties Parlors will have a group initiation here November 19, with Sonoma No. 111 as the host. The ritual will be exemplified by the officers of Sea Point No. 158 (Sausalito).

No applications, no new members to fill the ranks. And California needs more Native Sons! Today's responsibility of every member of the Order is to contact eligibles. Don't leave this important duty for "George" to perform.

Oakland—Athens No. 195 initiated a class of candidates October 9, an italian dinner following the ceremonies. F. E. Trestler is chairman of the athletic committee, which is forming a basketball team with S. Taylor as manager.

LOS ANGELES CITY AND COUNTY

ANOTHER DRY WINTER IS PREDICTED for California and the Pacific Coast area by Dr. George F. McEwen, oceanographer at the University of California's Scripps Institution of Oceanography at La Jolla, San Diego County. Precipitation for the winter season of 1934-35 may be slightly greater than that of the last winter season, he states, but it will range between 62 to 85 percent of the average of the years between 1916 and 1933.

Since 1915 Dr. McEwen has issued seasonal weather forecasts, usually about the middle of October, the forecasts covering the coming winter season. His predictions, based upon a study of cycles and of the surface temperatures of ocean water, have been classed as particularly accurate. In only one or two instances have the variations in actual rainfall from the predicted precipitation been great enough to cause him to seek new methods for making his forecasts.

"The long cycle of about twenty-five years, the prominent five-year cycle and the differences between the late summer and previous winter sea surface temperatures have been used as before in estimating the probable 1934-35 seasonal precipitation," states Dr. McEwen. "While the long cycle is rising to a crest due probably before 1940, both the short cycle and sea temperature results combine to indicate a deficient precipitation for 1934-35. However, cycle studies alone indicate a definite increase in precipitation beginning with the 1935-36 season."

FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY PARTY.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. will celebrate its fiftieth (golden) institution anniversary with a dinner-dance at Elks Temple, Sixth and Parkview streets, the evening of Saturday, November 17. Several entertainment features will be introduced. This promises to be the biggest affair in southern Natives' circles in several years, and all Native Sons and Native Daughters, their families and friends, are included in the invitation to join the festivities. Reservations must be made in advance.

Among the invited honor-guests are Mayor and Mrs. Frank W. Shaw, Sheriff and Mrs. Eugene W. Biscailuz, Police Chief and Mrs. James E. Davis, Grand President and Mrs. Chas. W. Koenig. The golden anniversary arrangements committee includes Past Grand President John T. Newell (honorary chairman), Clyde Harry Davis (chairman), President Michael Botello, J. F. Meehan, Walter Fisher, Walter Smith and Deputy Grand President Sidney B. Witkowski.

MICHAEL BOTELLO,
President Los Angeles Parlor N.S.G.W.

Los Angeles initiated three candidates October 11, refreshments following the ceremonies. The Hallowe'en dance held jointly with Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W., October 25, was well attended and everyone had a jolly time. November 8, the Parlor will have as special guests members of Santa Monica Bay No. 267 and University No. 272 Parlors.

SEWING FOR DECEMBER BAZAR.

San Pedro—Charter members night at Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W., October 1, was a huge success, thirty being in attendance. The Florencita thimble club, which meets weekly at the home of Lucia Guzman, is sewing for a bazar to be held in December.

Initiation is to be featured by Rudecinda November 7. The Parlor is taking an active part in arranging for the Spanish fiesta to be held in San Pedro during December to celebrate the return of the United States fleet. Carrie Kuhlman is on the executive committee. In the parade in celebration of Wilmington's birthday last month, President Carrie Rogers rode in the covered wagon entered by Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W.

UNIVERSITY PARLOR NEWS.

The second birthday Hallowe'en dance of University Parlor No. 272 N.S.G.W., October 27, was a big success. Lucien Griffin was the chairman. Stanley Parker is now manager of the ball team, and great success is anticipated. Sponsored by Solly Smith and Lucien Griffin, another handball tournament was held at the Elks Club.—W.F.W.

HUNGER RELIEF NOT ENOUGH.

An average of $24 per month per family is being spent by the Federal Government to give work to the destitute. Obviously, this can cover only barest necessities. No federal funds go to those whose need arises from sickness, old age, desertion or any cause save unemployment. People cannot be "rebuilt" by hunger-relief alone. Only by increased giving to the privately supported agencies of the Community Chest can the vast numbers who are ineligible to Federal Government aid be assisted and health and other essential welfare services be provided.

MANY NOVEMBER ATTRACTIONS.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. had as guests October 17, members of Verdugo Parlor No. 240 (Glendale), including Grand Trustee Hazel B. Hansen and Deputy Kathryn Burke.

The ALL California Monthly

Sarah Bixby Smith gave an interesting talk on Los Angeles reminiscences. Refreshments were served. Flora Holy reported the proceeds of the September card party were $60. The sewing club had a very pleasant meeting at Mattie Gara's home. The Parlor is competing in a table-setting contest; Ella Steinbeck heads the committee. Owing to rain, the barbecue announced for last month was indefinitely postponed. Donations of $15 have been made to the philharmonic orchestra and $10 to the Community Chest.

"At this harvest time," said President Olinda Kerby's October message to the members of No. 124, "with its yellow grain and ripened fruit, we are reminded that without effort there is no return. Let us all give of our best to the Order,—the best of our thought, our work, ourselves—for then the best of the Order will come back to us."

Commencing November 7, Los Angeles will meet in the Friday Morning Clubhouse, 940 South Figueroa street; at the initial meeting there a large class of candidates will be initiated. Other events on the Parlor's November calendar are: 14th, tournament card party; Sophia Stewart in charge. 15th, sewing club at Adeline Waite's home; the hostess will be assisted by Rosa Graffia, Grace DuCasse, Sophia Stewart. 21st, "Fannie Prather nite," honoring the charter president and all past presidents; Santa Monica Bay No. 245 and Rudecinda No. 230 Parlors as guests; entertainment and refreshments. 24th, bridge luncheon at Lillian Spinner's home to raise funds to purchase dishes; the hostess will be assisted by Mattie Gara, Edna Trombatore, Evelyn Trautwein, May Sherwood, Juanita Porter, Emma Lazzarevich, Dolores Luckey, Leonie Clos.

SURPRISE PROMISED AT DINNER DANCE.

Santa Monica—Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 267 N.S.G.W. is all set for its annual dinner-dance, to be held Monday, November 5, at 7 p.m. at the Paris Inn Cafe, 210 East Market street, Los Angeles. Chairman Ed. Carroll promises plenty of surprises at the informal affair.

Manager William Dowsing of the Parlor's drum corps announces a large demand for the "stag" to be held November 21 at the Elks Clubhouse, 1811 Ocean avenue, Santa Monica. No. 267 will be host, December 5, for the southern district Parlors' fifth group initiation. The meeting will begin promptly at 8 p.m. and will be followed by a fine repast.

CALIFORNIA BANK'S FINE SHOWING.

Word has just been received by Rod Maclean, advertising and publicity manager of the California Bank, that the institution's advertising which has appeared in this publication during the year ended October 1 has been rated seventh, in competition with all banks in the United States and Canada, by Socrates, Eastern advertising critic.

Rated thirty-fourth a year ago, the bank's advertising rating has risen steadily during the past twelve months, ending the period in seventh place. Although California Bank was the only Los Angeles financial institution to appear on Socrates' list, of three other Pacific Coast banks with head offices in San Francisco, one was included in the critic's roster of the first ten banks, the others in the first fifty. Maclean was made manager of the bank's advertising and publicity department in August 1933, after having served as acting manager for a year.

SOCIAL AFFAIRS LARGELY ATTENDED.

Californiana Parlor No. 247 N.D.G.W. had as honor-guests at luncheon October 9, Mrs. Annie Green, who spoke on "State-owned Land Colonies;" Mrs. Jean Farr, who reviewed the book "Little Man, What Now?", and Dr. C. W. Decker, who delivered an address on "Citizens, What of the Nation?" Program Chairman Ora Evans presented George Stinson in a song group.

Social affairs during October were enjoyed by large numbers at the homes of the president, Mrs. George F. Parrish, and Mrs. Walter Harris. At the latter function the folklore committee honored the sewing circle, which is busy preparing for the December 11 bazar for the homeless children. The Parlor will present the plaster cast of the bronze Felipe de Neve statue which stands in the Plaza to the Southwest Museum. A subscription of $5 was sent the philharmonic orchestra, which is campaigning for funds to carry on.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY ENJOYED.

Long Beach—Headed by President Alice Waldow, a large delegation from Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. visited Grace Parlor No. 242 N.D.G.W. (Anaheim) and had an enjoyable time. Deputy Jennie Raymond was a visitor October 4. The membership drive was won by Mary Stultz and her group, who were entertained at dinner by the losing group. Gertrude Riddle was captain of the drive.

October 18, the Parlor initiated five candidates. After the ceremonies a Hallowe'en party, arranged by Mrs. Eugene Smith, Mary Stultz and Margertia Burch, was enjoyed. The tables were beautified by black and orange decorations. The thimble club met at the home of Eleanor Martin and spent a portion of the day sewing

SERRA SESQUICENTENNIAL OBSERVED IN SONOMA AND MARIN COUNTIES.

San Rafael (Marin County) A Serra Sesquicentennial celebration, sponsored by Marinita Parlor No. 198 N.D.G.W., was held October 27 and 28 at the site of Mission San Rafael Arcangel, founded December 14, 1817. A parade, the morning of the 28th, participated in by all local organizations, was followed by an outdoor mass at which Archbishop Edward J. Hanna officiated and a choir of 100 boys sang for the first time.

After the mass, Marinita presented a plaque in memory of the mission founders, Jordan Martinelli making the presentation address. The plaque was a gift to the Parlor from Mrs. Sadie Winn-Brainard of Sutter Parlor No. 111 N.D.G.W. (Sacramento). The committee in charge of the celebration—Eugenie Watson (chairman), Mollye Spaelti, Marie Borba and Marguerite Brusatori—hopes to revive San Rafael Day which, prior to the World War, was annually celebrated in San Rafael on October 24.—M.Y.

IN OLD SONOMA.

Sonoma City—The one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the death of Father Junipero Serra, founder of California's chain of Franciscan missions, was observed August 26 with impressive ceremonies. Mrs. Luisa Vallejo-Emparan, only surviving child of General Mariano Guadalupe Vallejo, sang a solo in praise of the founder of Mission San Francisco Solano.

Although the mission here was not established by Father Serra, it was his plan to complete a chain of missions up the coast of California from San Diego to christianize and civilize the Indians. So, July 4, 1823, sixty years after his death, San Francisco Solano, last and most northerly mission along El Camino Real, was founded.—C.B.

RETAIN

ASSESSOR ED. W. HOPKINS

IN OFFICE

If there has been one faithful officeholder in Los Angeles County through the years of serving the people, it is Ed W. Hopkins, the County Assessor. It were a gesture of common sense, of selfish interest, to retain in office this fine type of public servant whose efficiency has been abundantly demonstrated. Now, more than ever, is it necessary for the people to avail themselves of Hopkins' experience; the problems are many which the complex situation engenders, and to place the affairs of the county assessor's office in inexperienced hands, no matter how honest, would be a great blunder. Los Angeles County needs an official of Hopkins' type to solve the vexed problems the office must confront and, as never before, modern methods are required in making appraisals, to the end that equality in assessed values may be assured in these times of deflated prices. A just man, a man of ripe experience and sound judgment, it should be regarded as a privilege to vote to retain him in office.

FRANK F. MERRIAM

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE FOR

GOVERNOR of CALIFORNIA

WHAT IS EXPERIENCE WORTH?

In the management of a business . . . it counts for everything. In the conduct of a farm . . . it is absolutely necessary. In the practice of a profession . . . it is the greatest essential.

Wherever you look, EXPERIENCE is found in co-partnership with success.

INEXPERIENCE and failure usually travel together. Management of State affairs is no exception . . . experience is necessary if success is to follow.

FRANK F. MERRIAM

experienced in Statecraft . . . successful in helpful legislation . . . with a constructive record of nearly two decades in State service . . . is needed to continue the building of California . . . and should be retained as Governor.

Calm, unemotional reason will indicate to you that these are times when California cannot afford to experiment with INexperience.

GRIZZLY GROWLS

NOTE—Expressions of opinion in these "Growls" are, unless indicated otherwise, those of the Managing Editor,
CLARENCE M. HUNT.

CALIFORNIA APPROACHES THE crossroads, and the citizens must, at the November 6 statewide election, decide what course is to be traveled the next four years. This will be the most important ballots-battle in this state's history, and there should be no vote-slackers, for the future of California is in the balance.

Through croesus-like spending, stupenduous waste, unpardonable stupidity and inefficiency, and everywhere-apparent racketeering in government, California has been mercilessly outraged during the past few years. Instead of curbing expenditures and relieving overburdened citizen-taxpayers, the state government deficit mounts higher and higher month by month and, by June 30, is expected to reach $32,000,000. "The power to tax is the power to destroy." Governing officials have exercised the taxing-power beyond the limit, beyond actual necessity, and destruction of confidence, as well as of values, has followed.

So, because of this existent condition in California, to correct which no determined effort has been put forth, a great majority of the citizens of the state indicated, at the August primary, determination to change the course of government. And there is, at this writing, no indication other than that determination will be realized November 6. More and more, citizens are doing their own thinking, and they cannot, by threats and deceit, be stampeded against their judgment and will. The day of winning success at the polls through resort to political trickery appears to be gone, never to return.

The momentous question, therefore, is: what course will the electors choose November 6? There are three gubernatorial candidates. They have outlined courses, for the state government, which are, or at least should be, familiar to all those qualified to vote. Consider, carefully and without prejudice, the qualifications and the plans of each of the candidates for the governorship and then, uninfluenced by preachments of fear, expediency or party-regularity, decide for yourself which of the three is best suited to return California to its rightful place in the sun.

THEN, VOTE YOUR DECISION, NOT THAT VOICED BY SOME BLOC SEEKING AND EXPECTING SPECIAL FAVORS! DO NOT, FOR ANY REASON, NEGLECT YOUR CHIEF DUTY AS A CITIZEN—TO VOTE!

If all loyal, thinking Californians will be election-day heroes—not driven human-cattle in political strife—and, unafraid of political bogeymen, will be guided solely by conscience, the government-course chosen for California November 6 will be for tax reduction, elimination of racketeering, and consequent better times for all.

"Moral courage," says Dr. John Watson, "is obeying one's conscience and doing what one believes to be right, in face of a hostile majority; and moral cowardice is stifling one's conscience, and doing what is less than right to win other people's favor." Exercise moral courage, November 6, and there need be no fear for California's wellbeing.

President Franklin Roosevelt said, in the course of a recent address: "In our efforts for recovery we have avoided on the one hand the theory that business should and must be taken over into an all-embracing government. We have avoided on the other hand the equally untenable theory that it is an interference with liberty to offer reasonable help when private enterprise is in need of help. . . . I believe with Abraham Lincoln, that 'The legitimate object of government is to do for a community of people whatever they need to have done but cannot do at all or cannot do so well for themselves in their separate and individual capacities.'

"I am not for a return to that definition of liberty under which for many years a free people were being gradually regimented into the service of the privileged few. I prefer and I am sure you prefer that broader definition of liberty under which we are moving forward to greater freedom, to greater security for the average man than he has ever known before in the history of America."

"There are an increasing number of American-born Japanese who constitute a real problem in the social, economic and religious life of the Pacific Coast," said President Unoura of the Japanese Ministerial Association. Not a real problem, but a real menace!

An organization of several thousand American-born Japs of voting age has been formed in California. "Nisei's" members are taking an active interest in the November election. They are particularly interested in having the Federal Immigration Law amended, to provide for Jap-quota, or repealed. Believe it or not, eventually Japs will be members of the California State Legislature and will represent the state in the Federal Congress.

Every day loyal White Californians delay in constructive, lawful action to rid California of the Oriental menace, adds to the Orientals' strength in this state. If we delay much longer, they will be so thoroughly entrenched and so numerous in numbers it will be impossible to accomplish anything and we will, of necessity, be forced to surrender our birthright.

Lauding voluntary service in the relief of distress, Herbert Hoover, former President of the United States, said, "One of the oldest and soundest observations ever made to humanity is that the only property you take out of this world is the gifts you have given."

The right of cities to prohibit promiscuous distribution of handbills, or printed or written advertising matter, has been upheld by the United States Supreme Court. California cities should, now, abolish those nuisances, including mis-named "shopping news."

The new executive director of the National Emergency Council, Donald R. Richberg, declares: "The men and the organizations who are most likely to wreck the NRA and all the good of its program, as far as they possibly can, are the intolerant partisans on both sides of the picture: those businessmen who want the Government to support them but do not want to give any support in exchange, and those labor leaders who want their organizations supported more or less by the Government and then demand that they be left entirely free from any obligation to support the Government. Those groups on each side want only partisan public officers and they are rather prone to denounce any fair-minded public official who simply does not regard himself as a partisan or regard his job as a tool of some special interest."

The National Advisory Council on Radio in Education was told by Dr. Robert G. Sproul, president University of California, that radio has failed to make anything of its great opportunities for cultural betterment. It was pointed out that unless broadcasting assumes the role of educator it will find itself in danger of government ownership.

The November 6 ballot contains several proposals. Give them thorough consideration, and vote on them intelligently. Bond propositions are among the number. Every parcel of property in this state already is encumbered b bonded and other indebtedness far beyond i value. That fact should be taken into consi eration in determining an answer to all suc proposals. Claims that bonds are not a pro erty encumbrance and do not increase taxes a hooey.

In conference at Akron, Ohio, bishops of th Evangelical Church termed motion pictures menace, and said: "Abnormal sex life, fr love, marital infidelity, . . . scenes of actual crin in the most thrilling fashion are set before th eyes of youth and age alike as food for the mir and ideals to be re-enacted,—a thinly veiled i vitation of the promoters in Hollywood to 'g thou and do likewise.'

"Unchecked and uncondemned, many of th promoters in Hollywood and elsewhere wou have it so, and their nefarious institution mig well be designated as a 'billion dollar filth mill'

President William Green of the Americ Federation of Labor says: "We have made headway whatever this year in putting the u employed to work in industry. Unless indust re-employs a substantial number this Fall, w shall even be losing ground. . . . We cannot i definitely support one-sixth of our population money borrowed against future taxes."

The vast influx of tourists into California du ing recent months has been publicized and ethe ized to the limit, during the closing gubern torial campaign, by state government offici Manager A. B. Gray of the California Touri Association came out with this rebuke:

"It is just as truthful to say the [tourist came to share the promised $24,000,000 bon issue sponsored by . . . as to claim that th came because of the political promises of son other candidate. To claim that 218,000 pe sons, rich or poor, have come to California b cause of the platform of any candidate is bo ridiculous and false.

"We care not what . . . anyone does to reta a soft job, but we do insist that the tourist i dustry be left out of politics and that only t truth be published. It may be necessary f state employes to work for the administrati in order to hold their jobs, but it is not nece sary to falsify facts as to one of our leading i dustries."

Manager Gray opines "The slight increa over last year has been brought about by t advertising of Californians Inc., the southe California advertisements, and organizatio that make a business of bringing tourists a tourist-dollars to California." This agrees e actly with the oft-repeated contention in the "Growls," that California's unemployment a relief troubles are to a large extent chargeal to promotion organizations which subsist on ta payers' dollars. Again we say, it is time to p a stop to the handing out, by public officials, dollars extracted from near-bankrupt taxpaye for tourist-promotion purposes!

Appealing for funds, the Los Angeles Co munity Chest claims: "One-fourth of the pe ple of this city are going to need help of so kind from somewhere this year." Additio evidence that, in its quest for greatness, t Angel City has accumulated a population quantity rather than of quality. Millions a spent to attract people, and then additio millions must be supplied by the public to su port them.

President Franklin Roosevelt has declar that the work of the Civilian Conservation Co "must go on." That's fine, for the CCC is o of the most worthy of the Federal Governmen undertakings.

Headed "Pharmacy Barred To Japanese," t "West Coast Druggist" for March 1934 had t news item, just recently received by The Griz Bear from a Native Son of San Francisco w stated the daily press had failed to give the formation to the general public:

"Holding that the Legislature has power restrict the practice of pharmacy to citizens the United States and those who have declar their intention to be such, Superior Judge E met H. Wilson [of Los Angeles] has sustain a demurrer of the California State Board Pharmacy to the petition for writ of mand filed by Thomas T. Sashihara, Kesanosuke S kuda and Fukuichi Fukushima, and refused issue a writ of mandate compelling the Boa to allow the petitioners to take examinations.

"The petitioners, being Japanese and in gible to citizenship, asked for a writ of mand compel the State Board of Pharmacy to permit them to take an examination, claiming that being denied the right to practice pharmacy ey were deprived of property without due ocess of law and were denied rights which ere guaranteed to them by the Treaty of Comerce and Navigation between the United States id Japan.

"Judge Wilson held that if the practice of armacy constituted trade in the commercial nse, the right to engage therein was guaraned by the Treaty of 1911 which assured to the bjects of each nation the right to carry on ade in the territory of the other nation, but at the practice of pharmacy was not a trade the commercial sense but was a profession mparable to those of medicine and law and at the practice of such a profession was a ivilege conferred by law and was not an abso-te right.

"The court stated that inasmuch as the prac-e of pharmacy was a privilege and not a sted right, the petitioners were not deprived property without due process of law by reason the provision of the statute prohibiting the suance of licentiates' certificates to non-citi-ns."

During the gubernatorial campaign much has en said about "keeping the 'reds' out of Cali-rnia." How little has been said, however, out eliminating—and keeping out—the red m the state government budget.

At the Washington, D. C., convention of the lice Chiefs International Association, Los An-les was reported to have a 479 percent in-ease in drunken auto drivers. The increase ill continue until the law is strictly and im-rtially enforced.

Reports from Washington, D. C., indicate that taxpayers of this country will this winter ve more of a relief load than ever before in history of the United States. It is estimated number dependent on public relief will in-ease to 20,000,000.

The Imperial County Board of Supervisors s passed a resolution calling on the State gislature to adopt a statute making it unlaw-for any individual, group, corporation, asso-tion or political subdivision to hire any alien work. Such a law, if enforced, would go a g way toward solving the unemployment dis-ss among citizens, and would greatly benefit state otherwise.

Discussing current issues in an article in the "aturday Evening Post," Herbert Hoover, for-r President of the United States, contends: "It is now claimed by large groups that lib-y has failed; that emergency encroachments on its principles should be made permanent. Hereby are created the most urgent issues: st, whether we must submit to some other stem by which the fundamentals of liberty e sacrificed, and, second, whether even if we ke these sacrifices we shall not defeat the pe and progress of humanity. It is my hope show that to resume the path of liberty is t to go backward; it is to return to the path progress from following the will-o'-the-wisps ich lead either to the swamps of primitive ed or to political tyranny. . . .

"The first step of economic regimentation is ast centralization of power in the executive. wers once delegated are bound to be used, one step drives to another. The whole thesis hind this program is the very theory that man out the pawn of the State. It is a usurpation the primary liberties of man by government. is a vast shift from the American concept of man rights, which even the government may infringe, to those social philosophies where n are wholly subjective to the State. It is a t casualty to liberty if it shall be continued."

THINK THIS OVER!

The order of Native Sons of the Golden West , we believe, with the exception of the Order Native Daughters of the Golden West, the ly organization that limits membership ex-sively to NATIVE-BORN AMERICANS.

Knowing the serious conditions in this country day, this fact alone should impel every Native n of California to immediately SEEK AF-LIATION with that American-born and merican-operated institution, the man-power d wealth of which are pledged to the protec-n of American institutions in times of peace well as in times of war.

DISTINGUISHED NATIVE SON GONE

FRANK LESLIE COOMBS, PAST GRAND President of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, died at his home in Napa City, October 5. He was born in Napa County, December 27, 1853, the son of Nathan Coombs, a California Pioneer of 1847 who founded Napa City. He is survived by three children Nathan Coombs, Miss Dorothy Coombs and Mrs Harry Dunlap.

Deceased had a distinguished public career, which began with his election in 1879 as district attorney of Napa County. Subsequently he served several terms in the State Legislature, was elected to the Federal Congress, and in 1892 was appointed United States Ambassador to Japan. He was at one time state librarian, and served as United States Attorney for the Northern District of California.

Coombs' association with the Order of Native Sons began April 10, 1885, when he affiliated with Napa Parlor No. 62. His first Grand Parlor was the Eleventh (Fresno 1888) Session; he was elected Grand Trustee at the Twelfth (San Rafael 1889) Session, Grand Orator at the Twenty-first (Nevada City 1898) Session, and Grand President at the Twenty-fourth (Santa Barbara 1901) Session. Owing to absence in Washington, D. C., as a member of the Federal Congress, he did not, as the Grand President, preside at the next year's Grand Parlor Session (Santa Cruz 1902).

Funeral ceremonies for deceased, held under the auspices of the Grand Parlor N.S.G.W. October 8, were attended by Grand President Chas. A. Koenig, Grand First Vice-president Harmon D. Skillin, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Trustee Edward T. Schnarr, Past Grand Presidents Judge Frank H. Dunee, Judge Henry C. Gesford, Lewis F. Byington, Hubert R. McNoble, Thomas Monahan, Congressman William I. Traeger, Edward J. Lynch, James A. Wilson and Charles L. Dodge, and Mayor Angelo J. Rossi of San Francisco.

MEMORIAL ADDRESS.

Past Grand President Lewis F. Byington delivered the following memorial address:

"As a representative of the fraternity of the Native Sons of the Golden West, I have been asked to pay a tribute of friendship and love for one of the noblest and best of the sons of California. The hearts of all members of the fraternity were saddened when they heard of the death of that kindly, loyal man, Brother Frank L. Coombs. His genial presence, his unfailing courtesy, his sympathy for and love of humanity, his loyalty to country, his high and ennobling character, drew and held our warmest affection.

"Born here in the pleasant valley of Napa County, December 27, 1853, of Pioneer parents, he passed to his final rest October 5, 1934, in the eighty-first year of his age. All through his long life he continued a resident of the county of his birth, and his remains will rest tonight almost within the shadow of the home in which he was born.

"His grandfather crossed the plains many years before the discovery of gold, and his mother was present in the town of Sonoma, June 14, 1846, when the Bear Flag of California was first raised. His father and mother rode on horseback from Napa to Fort Sutter and were there married by General John A. Sutter, who had authorization from the Mexican government to perform marriage ceremonies.

"He rose to official positions of distinction both in the state and the nation. At an early age he was elected district attorney of his native county; thereafter served for many years in the California Legislature and was chosen speaker of the House. During the administration of President Harrison, he was appointed Minister to Japan, and later served as United States District Attorney for the Northern District of California. He was then elected a representative to Congress. He later served again in the State Legislature, and was the author of the bill under which the great Golden Gate bridge is being constructed. In the year 1901, he was chosen Grand President of the Native Sons of the Golden West.

"He was ever faithful and courageous in the performance of duty, and the esteem in which he was held by his fellowmen grew out of the universal recognition of his high character, which was ever marked by honesty and kindliness. He was proud of his native state, proud of the romantic history of California, and of the sturdy Pioneers who settled it and drafted its constitution and laws. Proud above all of his country, because he knew its history and, as an upright and learned man, respected and defended its laws. He was a true, devoted, loyal American.

"Fastened beneath the cover of the casket which holds his mortal remains, I note the silken folds of the flag of our country. When the casket is closed, it will rest upon his breast, and what nobler restingplace can there be for that flag than over the loyal heart of the man who ever cherished and defended it.

"He loved literature and books. He cherished deeply the family ties which bound him to wife and children. He loved the companionship of friends, and the kindly and tender association which knit him to the members of our fraternity. He was charitable toward all, and spoke no word which might wound the heart of another. He has left behind him a name honored throughout the state, and his memory will be forever cherished by all who knew him.

" 'None knew thee but to love thee,
Nor named thee but to praise'."

MY CALIFORNIA HOME

(EVELYN COLEMAN.)

Back across the years my memory wanders
To my dear old California home,
Quiet, peaceful, sheltered by the mountains,
Rustic camps where many tourists roam

Purple shadows tint the distant hill tops,
Silvery mist floats out to meet the sky,
Wild birds chirp and flutter in the tree tops,
Timid creatures to the woodlands fly.

Night spreads o'er the earth a cool dark blanket,
Shining stars peep out of Heaven's dome,
Children tucked away in dreamless slumber —
Happy is my California home.

Oh, my home in California!
Mountains high and valleys wide,
Tides of restless changing ocean
Ever flowing by her side;
There still live a grey-haired mother
And a father kind and true.
Some day I shall be returning,
O, my California home, to you.

(This came to The Grizzly Bear from Evelyn Coleman of Peters ans Home, Napa County, with the request that it be given space in the magazine. Editor.)

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER

VELVETEEN ACCESSORIES IN RICH colors are among the smartest style trends for fall. The dark velveteen blouse, austerely tailored, is one of the smartest accessories to the fall suit mode. Everybody simply has to own a velveteen blouse this season. Found one the other day that appealed to me particularly. It was rust, and would be stunning with a brown, black or gray suit. It had a square "buster" collar, held with a bow, and buttons down the front, at the cuffs, on one small pocket and at the left side. Other colors to be found in this model are black, brown, flame red and dark green.

Jackets, handbags, scarfs and hats strike ringing notes of color in the fall fashion symphony. The matched set of velveteen jacket, beret and handbag in some such warm tone as carioca rust is hailed as one of the successes of the season. If you are blessed with a new tweed suit for fall, you may achieve endless variety by expending a little time, thought and, of course, money, on some quick-change jackets and blouses. The velveteen jacket of kelly green is the last word in swank, and is worn with a brown or gray tweed skirt. Some of the more formal velveteen blouses of the season are assuming a russian tone, with full bloused sleeves and draped necklines. A stunning one in scarlet has a handkerchief scarf of self material, held in place by a huge wooden button.

Triangle scarfs are proving very popular with sports clothes, and collegiates are practically devouring them. One is of a very dark green sheer wool, with a plaid of deep dull red and gold threads, and fringed at the edge to go with the new colored tweeds. There is a very plain and smart slipon doeskin glove guaranteed to be washable and the color will not rub off. That is a lucky thing, because it comes in a heavenly hunter's green, navy blue, brown and black.

The perennially smart camelshair top-coat appears in a new version. It is fashioned after a man's double-breasted coat, is belted with four buttoned pockets and has a slightly fitted back. Having a dress on hand for the unexpected date to a Sunday tea or a rush bid, is the bright thing to do. Get in ahead of the emergency with one frock which goes with all the everyday accessories and you will appear around town respectably dressed. The velveteen vogue is a "honey" along those lines.

Every girl should have brown and black shoes, no matter how sketchily she runs her budgeting, with hats and bags to harmonize. The shortest cut to a dressy outfit is something that can be popped on with these old standbys and make them look selected.

Grey and green shades and black and jewel shades have an intrinsic richness about them in velvet type goods. The very plain model will show off one's fur piece. Necklines which depart from ascot or johnny lines are extremely dressy. The many frill and petal collars to be had are very attractive.

Rhinestones, buttons, hooks and eyes, or cut steel buttons with a big buckle to match build up a plain dress to rather a formal one. Lame touches make another good formal stunt, used either in accessories or in the weave of the material itself. The shirtmaker design becomes quite festive enough for the casual good time if its buttons and tie are lame.

Alligator bags fit into our picture this year as never before, when worn with a pair of matching shoes and a rough tweed suit at the football games. One is rather squatty-shaped and roomy. It has a leather lining and a grip handle with a place for monogram. It comes in brown or black in the alligator, antelope or bengal grain.

Of the suits I have seen in the past few weeks, one of my "pets" has a very definite russian feeling. It is of an imported grey tweed, trimmed with grey astrakhan. The skirt is perfectly straight, and the jacket is hip length, slightly fitted and belted with a big silver buckle in front. The astrakhan is used in a stand-up collar that comes down over the shoulders a bit and buttons high on the left shoulder. In one of the shops, I came upon some good-looking fabric gloves that are very smart with sports clothes. They have flared cuffs, hand-stitched in navy, brown or black.

Double-duty costumes are ones that always cause us to pause and investigate. A dinner costume is developed in black crepe and silver lame. The crepe skirt and the lame blouse can be used for a complete new evening dress by simply removing the jacket blouse and there you stand in a low decolletage back.

Have you noticed that many cocktail frocks and dinner dresses introduce beaded accents just on the bodice or the tunic? Plain crepe or satin skirts have beaded uppers. Jet beads are the newest. Sequins and rhinestones are employed together. Do not forget that daytime necklines are high, at will. Figure or select your neckline so that it can be worn high, low, closed or open. Pink and brown is a grand combination for evening. Saw a pink crepe satin with brown accents in the girdle and flower trimming.

Impressive to a degree is the massive jewelry to be seen in the shops. It would put the crown jewels to shame, were it not of the costume variety. There is a bracelet of elaborate gold design, three inches wide, that has a carved jade medallion set in it. This, on a black velvet sleeve, would flatter any hand. Clip bracelets are the newest wrinkle in the costume jewelry field. They are huge affairs that look like jeweled cuffs. You clip them at the wrist of your favorite long-sleeved cocktail costume to add a cleopatra note of elegance.

Busy modern women who must dress in the morning for what the day may bring forth have seized the idea of carrying a couple of bracelets and clips in their handbags for the quick transformation of an unadorned black dress. Wit a jeweled pin or clip for your black beret c toque and a few odd pieces of brilliant costum jewelry in your bag, you may face anything the the evening may hold. The clip earring was i troduced to a breathless world last winter an continues in importance this fall. Women lik its close-fitting compactness and its smart no elty. You will see it this winter in glitterin rhinestones, simulated precious gems, and tal ored gold and silver. Long earrings and cuf of bracelets to match seem to be the latest no elty for evening wear.

Thanksgiving Day will be observed Thursda November 29.

GRIZZLY GROWLS

NOTE- Expressions of opinion in these "Growls" are, unless indicated otherwise, those of the Managing Editor.
CLARENCE M. HUNT.

CALIFORNIA FACES A VERY DANGERous situation! That opinion is based on the result of the November 6 election, when more than a million voters registered dissatisfaction with the state government system and operation, and an additional million, because of disgust or dontreness, failed to vote. The state controller ys the cost of operating the state government r the fiscal year ended June 30 leaped upward 1,486,942, to $163,796,953. Little wonder ere is such widespread dissatisfaction! What e attitude of some two-thirds of the state's ting population will lead to, is the question ich should have the most thoughtful consideation of the state government authorities and al citizens, for California's wellbeing is, ined, in the balance.

The cost of government must be materially duced, actually, not theoretically, for the tax rden is paralyzing California's backbone by cing small-home owners to relinquish their ldings and by forcing small-business men to ase operations—and, in many instances, forcg many of both to, against their will and de e, become public charges. The cost of govnment can be reduced, without loss in efficien , by eliminating stupendous waste, notorious competency, and racketeering—which latter mbraces several needless and duplicating ards and commissions, fixed charges and numous other abuses. If the cost of government not reduced, trouble is certain to come, and cannot be much longer delayed.

State government authorities, and others, ve considerable to say about "reds," and are lined to class all who will not "fall in line," litically, as communists, anarchists, fascists, c. Apparently, they fail to realize that rotten vernment conditions—including bankrupting xes—create the dissenters, and their numbers ll increase until conditions are improved. e dissenters are not the creators, but the oducts, of the existent system. Eliminate m government the rottenness responsible for decidedly "red" budget, and enthrone therein nesty and competency, and the much-discussed eds" will, to a very great extent, vanish from e body politic.

A man who, through no fault of his own, has t his job and belongings, whose belly is pty, and whose wife and children are without e necessities of life, should not be censured cause he expresses dissatisfaction with a govnment system responsible, to no small extent, r his situation. Centure should, on the other nd, be directed at those officials who, as parts the system, sit in luxuriously furnished offices th feet cocked upon expensive desks, joyride public-owned autos, draw good salaries regurly, and prate long and loud about "reds"—eir smokescreen to divert attention from the ficiencies of, and the racketeering in, governnt which they manipulate for their own benei and not that of the masses.

A wellknown Californian, following the Noember 6 election, remarked: "You can't tell that when a man like . . . , with the millions ainst him and without newspaper support, can t nearly a million votes, there isn't something ong somewhere." Certainly something is ong—a blind man can perceive that—and, for lifornia's sake, if not to the liking of political keteers, it must be speedily righted.

A new state government administration comes power the first of the approaching new year. hether the balance goes up or down for Calinia, will depend solely upon the course the w administration pursues. Every loyal Calinian will hope for the best, and will give full operation if the course be right.

In his Thanksgiving Day proclamation, Presint Franklin D. Roosevelt said: "During the t year we have been given courage and fortie to meet the problems which have confonted us in our national life. . . . We can truly , 'What profiteth it a nation if it gain the ole world and lose its own soul.'

"With gratitude in our hearts for what has eady been achieved, may we, with the help of God, dedicate ourselves anew to work for the betterment of mankind."

General Smedley D. Butler, again much in the publicity limelight, says that war is the greatest international racket known, and that he will "never carry a rifle beyond the borders of the United States again."

"There are 40,000,000 men under arms in Europe today," according to Butler, "and they are not there for parade purposes. It's too expensive. The nations of Europe are like a lot of boys choosing sides. As soon as the right side gets the right pitcher they are going to see if they can put the other fellow out." It is quite evident some "side" thinks it now has the "right pitcher," and the battle appears not far off.

A speaker the other day, condemning the Japs' invasion of California, concluded with the statement, in response to a question, that if he had a farm, could not get a fair price for his product, and a Jap came along and offered a good price for the land, he would sell to the Jap. Consistency, where art thy jewels?

In that expressed attitude is the answer to the oft-asked question: how have the Japs been able to get such a foothold in California, when there is such apparent general opposition to them? Much of the opposition is of the mouthing variety and, therefore, neither sincere nor effective. And, too, the Japs know that America has deteriorated into a dollar-worshiping nation, and the yellow dollars sowed in California have produced, for Japan, a harvest of thousands of California's most fertile acres.

Until principle is put above and beyond the dollar, no progress is possible in curbing and curing the Jap, or any other, evil. When a Californian will sell his birthright for a few yellow-dollars, the future for California is not promising, is it?

Another economic menace which should have earliest consideration by lawmakers, is the chain store. Speaking in the National House of Representatives, Congressman Harold McGugin of Kansas said: "Any kind of a recovery program which fails to take into consideration the chain-store menace will never accomplish permanent recovery. If the chain stores continue daily to gather in all the profits derived from the sale of the things which the people eat and wear, and immediately transfer this money to central points, it will mean the continued impoverishment of the greater part of the country. . . .

"The chain store is the instrumentality by which the financial sustenance is sucked out of thousands of local communities of the United States. . . . There are various ways in which Congress and the administration can meet the chain-store problem. The truth is, if Congress and the administration will enact legislation which will insure common honesty and fair dealing in business the advantage of the chain store over the local merchant" will be nullified.

President DuPont of a war-munitions company which attained a very unsavory reputation for profiteering during the World War, now advocates "a sound policy for abolition of these extraordinary profits." He must be a humorist, as well as a dollars-successful manufacturer! Haven't heard, have you, of his refunding any of his ill-gotten gains?

"There is still available for this study," he says, "the experienced judgment of the men who successfully conducted America's efforts in the World War." He should have said, men who mercilessly robbed the American people. Lord deliver us from them and their "experienced judgment!"

California lost a fine and valued citizen when Montaville Flowers, internationally known author and lecturer, journeyed on from his Pasadena home, November 10. He enlightened the people of this nation on the "peaceful invasion" of the Japs, and his "Japanese Conquest of American Opinion," published in 1913, did much to influence the passage by the Federal Congress of needed Oriental immigration legislation. The Japs, incidentally, expended much energy and many dollars in an effort to suppress that book of facts.

Those who believe—or, at least, contend—that the President and his party are losing public confidence and support, must have been considerably shocked and disheartened at the result of the November 6 election. For, the Seventy-fourth Congress, that meets January 3, will have 321 Democrats in the House, compared to 309 in the last Congress, and 69 in the Senate, instead of 60.

Ponder over this, too: November 6, 1934, was the first time since the establishment of two-party government in this country that the party in power increased its congressional lead in an election-year when no president was being chosen.

Advocating a bigger and a better navy, for adequate protection at home, President Nelson Macey of the Navy League of the United States stated in the course of a San Francisco address:

"While we do not fear immediate attack by Japan, anything could happen. That country has served notice she intends to rule the Pacific." A superior navy is certainly needed and, unless the national administration be influenced by the pacifists, it will be provided immediately, for Japan, like time, marches on.

"If the unused vitality and energy in the manhood of our Nation could be aroused and guided into the right direction, America would be transformed," says Gerald C. Tresler in The New Age Magazine. "We need men of conviction, honesty and service to be elected to our offices throughout this great Nation."

"To be alive in such an age with every year a lightning page turned in the world's great wonder-book, whereon the leading nations look! . . . Give thanks with all thy flaming heart, crave but to have in it a part—give thanks and clasp thy heritage—to be alive in such an age!"—Angela Morgan.

Speaking in Sacramento, Hillis Lory, Stanford University lecturer, described Japan as a modern nation with a medieval mind, and declared its military rulers ar backed by the people. "Japan has an outer shell of civilization, but her soul is back in ancient times," he said. "You cannot measure her strength in terms of men and guns, for Japanese soldiers are not taught to retreat and consider it a disgrace to be captured in battle."

Anent the recent attempt of some Los Angeles bigboys to disfranchise several thousand registered voters, Justice William H. Langdon of the California Supreme Court said, "It outrages every principle of justice and fair play." Petty politics,—to bolster up the fear-campaign—it appears, prompted that disfranchisement attempt, and also the expulsion, a few days previous to election day, of students from U.C.L.A.

"What is California going to do about the problem of drunken driving?", queries the California State Automobile Association. Probably the same as always—nothing! There can be no improvement in that disgraceful situation unless and until officials, particularly judges, cut out probation and "lesser charge" pleadings, and inflict the law's full penalty, impartially. So-called prominent personages—male and female created He them—are the worst offenders against the drunk-driving law. How many, if any, of them have been given the punishment they rightly deserve?

There is no doubt that much of the trouble and unrest in this country emanate from numerous propaganda agencies maintained here by and for aliens. The Federal Government should clean them up by closing them out, by denying them the use of the mails, and by otherwise hampering their operation. They are of no benefit to this Nation or its peoples; why, therefore, countenance them? They could not operate overnight in any other country.

Another outstanding example of the incompetency that characterizes Los Angeles government is San Gabriel Dam No. 1, work on which has been suspended. The "mistakes" will cost the taxpayers anywhere from $1,000,000 to $6,000,000, it is contended. When will the citizen-taxpayers get wise?

CALIFORNIA FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

CHRISTMAS DAY WAS ON A THURSday in 1884. In California, one of the worst storms the state ever had prevailed Christmas Eve. For eight days storms had been passing over, and the holiday spirit was washed away. Merchants who expected the usual amount of buying stood idly around, as but a few bedraggled shoppers ventured outdoors to make purchases. All who could do so, stayed indoors, and Christmas festivities were almost nil.

December was another freakish weather month. During the first week a norther, blowing fifty miles an hour, prevailed for three days, doing much damage to buildings in the interior and immense damage to shipping in San Francisco Bay.

Then came a cold spell, with the temperature below thirty degrees in the valleys. The first rain to fall in sixty days came December 16. This storm was followed, in rapid succession, by three more storms and the state, with ten days of steady rainfall, was soaked. High water prevailed, and floods inundated many low regions. The rainfall for the month was 10.39 inches, and for the season 13 inches.

An irrigation convention was held in Fresno City commencing December 4. Many speakers favored taking action to control the water courses of the state. Lengthy resolutions were passed, and a permanent organization was started.

"Donation Day" was started in Grass Valley, Nevada County, in 1883 and became an annual custom there. Each scholar brought to the schoolhouse a donation of edibles, clothing or wood, which the teachers distributed to the needy. In 1884, the day was observed December 19, and more than one and a half tons of potatoes and ten cords of stovewood were portions of the contributions.

State viticulturists had a convention in San Francisco commencing December 1. Lengthy discussion was held regarding the California wine industry, which was not flourishing at the time.

California's presidential electors met at the State Capitol in Sacramento, December 3, and selected Henry Edgerton as the messenger to carry the state's vote to Washington, D. C.

J. F. Welsh was elected mayor of Stockton, San Joaquin County, December 15.

D. J. Ouelahan of San Joaquin County was appointed state treasurer to succeed W. A. January, who lost the position when his sureties withdrew.

A Scottish colony of some 1,500 sent an advance agent to Los Angeles to buy farming land for settlement. He had $200,000 to invest.

The Huer Rancho in San Luis Obispo County was subdivided, and $200,000 worth of the acreage was sold to newcomers.

A colony of sixty-four Frenchmen arrived from France, intending to engage in viticulture in one of the state's vine-growing counties.

Wm. White of Uniontown, El Dorado County, exhibited the champion quince grown in the state—17½ inches in circumference and weighing 2½ pounds.

Oscar Cochord of Covelo started for New Orleans to exhibit at the exposition there Mendocino County's champion hog—8 feet long, 4 feet high and weighing 1,076 pounds.

Santa Barbara County reported that fifty-eight varieties of beans were being raised in that county.

The total amount of wheat produced in California this season was 3,445,211 centals—the largest crop yet harvested.

It was estimated there were 3,000 Eastern tourists in California south intending to winter there.

Mrs. Armstrong, in San Francisco, gave birth to triplets election day. She was in poor circumstances, and a wealthy childless couple adopted them.

The stage from Sonora, Tuolumne County, to Milton was stopped December 10 by two masked men near Reservoir House. As they could not open the express box, riveted to the stage-bed, they got nothing for their trouble.

The Plymouth quartz mine in Amador County was producing $87,000 worth of gold monthly, and had paid its stockholders $500,000 in dividends.

Fire at Mariposa Town, December 13, destroyed five business buildings. The same day a stable burned at the Twenty-one-mile House in Santa Cruz County and fourteen horses were cremated.

Dr. Henry P. Coon dropped dead in San Francisco, December 1. He was police judge there in 1856, and was elected mayor in 1864.

A. D. Patterson died near Sacramento City, December 4. In 1849 he settled on a site which later was known as Patterson Station, and at one time was sheriff of Sacramento County.

George Henning, a 17-year-old lad, was accidentally killed December 5 while hunting quail near Forest Hill, Placer County.

Andrew Tucker was killed December 11 in the Dubec mine at Nevada City, Nevada County, by the premature explosion of a blast.

A little boy named Calpy wandered away from his Yreka, Siskiyou County, home and was found the next morning frozen to death.

Tom Leonard was burned to death December 8 in his Calico, San Bernardino County, cabin.

Daniel Kennedy, in San Francisco December 10, quarreled with his wife and broke a pitcher over her head. She shot and killed him.

At Daggett, San Bernardino County, December 5, Josiah Harris was killed while asleep. Three days later Wm. Pitts was arrested, charged with the crime. A mob gathered, took him from the officers, and hanged him from a telephone pole.

Soloman Torres and Jose Sato were hanged in the Salinas, Monterey County, jail December 5 for the murder of a Chinaman in December 1883. Some 600 invited guests of the sheriff attended the "party."

Baptista Gallioni, a San Francisco frog catcher, sold thirty dozen of his catch at $2.40 a dozen. He displayed his wealth in a Barbary Coast saloon and later was found in a dark alley, dead and moneyless.

At Stockton, San Joaquin County, Christmas Day, Mrs. Catherine E. Campbell, aged 64, was seated in a rocking chair singing carols with her husband, when she was hit by a bullet and killed. John Wilson had shot at a duck in a nearby pond; the bullet ricochetted from the water into the Campbell home.

John Vivian, employed in the Wyoming mine at Nevada City, Nevada County, dreamed he was killed in an accident at the mine. The following afternoon he was caved upon and killed.

"Sallie Benton," a 4-year-old trotter from the Palo Alto, Santa Clara County, breeding farm of ex-Governor Leland Stanford, in a speed test at San Francisco, December 14, made a mile in 2:17—the best time on record for a 4-year-old.

A gam of whales came into Monterey Bay, December 12. Some appeared to be over sixty feet long, while hundreds of others were of lesser size. They were following a school of sardines, hundreds of miles in extent. Along the coast of Santa Cruz the sardines came close enough to land to be washed ashore by the surf, and they were shoveled into wagons by farmers and hauled away to be used for fertilizer. Thousands of gulls also came to feast upon the stranded sardines, and at sea, a mile away, could be seen the bobbing heads of herds of seals and sealions following the feed. As the sardines did not appear south of the Santa Cruz seashore, they must have swerved out to sea, with the ocean gangsters pursuing.

A WORTHWHILE NON-SECTARIAN ENDEAVOR SPONSORED AND SUPPORTED BY THE ORDERS OF NATIVE SONS AND NATIVE DAUGHTERS OF THE GOLDEN WEST

FROM LAST CHRISTMAS TO THE Christmas almost here, one hundred and forty families in the State of California, well known to the Native Sons and Native Daughters Homeless Children Committee and to the members of both Orders, are not going to need any reminding to "Hang up the baby's stockings and be sure and not forget that the dear little dimpled darling has never seen Christmas yet." As a matter of fact, these mothers and fathers of ours have been visiting the stores for several weeks, looking at dolls and toys, dainty finery or sturdy rompers, with their child's first Christmas in mind.

Added to this 1934 list of selected parents are over forty-four hundred other foster families who can readily recall this same thrill ove Santa's first visit to their homes and the r peated preparation for the many Christmase which have come and gone since choosing th child in need of their affection and guidanc One year, two years, three years—how well the remember the little fellow at the age of thre standing beside father and gazing up at th laden tree, his litle hands clasped behind h sturdy back and saying:

" 'Et's turn on the yights, s'all we fodder?' and on through all of the intervening years the time when this son of theirs was preparir for their grandchild's Christmas. Great wa their pride when he referred to his own happ childhood and his memories of celebrating th Christ's Birthday; his anticipation of a vis from Santa Claus, the stealing downstairs the early morning to see if Santa really had r membered him, and his look of amazement whe he beheld his bulging stocking hanging in fron of the fireplace with a great orange down in th toe. (No orange juice ever could have bee squeezed from an orange so rare as this). The still can hear his shrieks of delight as fath begins to wind this, to pull that, to blow th horn, as he cuddles in mother's arms and sh with joy and thanksgiving hugs him and h armful of toys to her heart.

To thousands of former wards of the Cor mittee have come this atmosphere of a re home, the loving care of the tiny baby days, th companionship during youth, and the unde standing and sympathy when the boy is n quite a man and he first realizes that Life not one long gala day, that he is to be calle upon to make sacrifices and struggle again injustices of friend and foe, and that throug it all he must hold to his ideals.

With right influences available in hundre of outstanding homes, it is incumbent upon home-finding society not to look lightly upo the responsibility of its selections, and to co sider not only the good roof over a child's hea a comfortable bed and ample food; or to re thrice content in its selection of the home wealth, exceptional educational advantages, s cial prestige, automobiles, wherewithal to a tend movies; but to stress the spiritual value a home and its influences toward truthfulnes straightforwardness, kindliness and respect f the rights of others. Only in giving conscie tious consideration to the constant influenc thrown about a child, can any child-placing o ganization hope to overcome inherited tende cies and to develop for State and Union men an women of integrity, honesty, sobriety, loyalt strength and courage.

TUBERCULOSIS THE SUPREME ROBBER

irector Health Education, National Tuberculosis Association.)

HAVE YOU EVER SEEN A TUBERCUlosis "spot map" of your city? The enterprising health officer generally has such a map in his office. Each black pin shows where a death from tuberculosis has taken place. The pins e usually found grouped into "nests," with ere and there isolated pins scattered about. If ou know your city you will recognize these aces as the residential quarters of the poorer ople.

Whether tuberculosis begets poverty, or vice rsa, has often been the subject of unsettled bate. The practical fact is, that both are interlocked—tuberculosis causing poverty, and overty in turn causing more tuberculosis. For ty years we have known that the sole direct use of this disease is a germ, the tubercle acillus, and that this minute but destructive nemy is no respecter of persons, social position geography.

Yet, we know also that in the drama known tuberculosis, the setting or environment is st as important as the leading actor himself. nvironment, by which we mean not simply the ighborhood in which one lives but one's entire ilieu, including housing, occupation, nutrional status, mode of living, mental attitude, c., largely determines whether the tubercle acillus will gain the upper hand over bodily sistance, or will be kept down as an innocuous arasite by the superior defenses of the body.

The unholy alliance between poverty and uberculosis affects not only those who have the sease, but all of us. Any merchant appreciates at people sleeping under the sod contribute othing to civic welfare, produce no wealth and y no goods. And their number is considerble, for tuberculosis is still the leading cause death during the age period 15 to 45. But at platitude tells only half the story. For a ng period before the spade turns the earth, uberculosis steadily takes toll both from the ctim and from society.

Tuberculosis is a long-drawn-out, enervating isease. Those who are doomed to struggle with soon become handicapped in earning power. uxury goods are out for them. If they are ble to pay the doctor and the merchant for fe's bare necessities they consider themselves rtunate. As time goes on, even these ordinary eeds are beyond their economic reach. The urden then falls on harried creditors and kind riends. Struggling against odds, the morale of he family suffers, careless habits creep in, the ildren become infected—and stand a poor ance of overcoming the infection because of oor living conditions. Sooner or later the family is likely to become a liability—a liability hich must somehow be liquidated by the community, whether it likes it or not.

The widows and orphans left in the wake of he destroyer constitute another economic deadeight which no decent community would escape, even if it could. Add to that the depreson of spirit, the discouragement and the adow of futility which is bound to oppress not nly the sick but also those who live in close ntact with them, and we begin to see that uberculosis is the supreme robber of civic wellbeing and economic progress.

Work it out from another angle. It costs on average of $1,656 to educate a boy through igh school. That is only a fraction of our inestment in a single future citizen; we invest in im also a substantial sum through public and rivate expenditures for playgrounds, police and affic protection and the numerous citizenuilding advantages now provided for the youth. Ve expect the investment in this citizen to pay ividends. We expect him to bear his share of axes, consume his quota of goods and add his it of common wealth. If he is cut off before is time, the investment collapses. One out of ach 140 high school graduates dies of tuberulosis before the age of 25.

Fortunately the vicious circle can be broken. uberculosis can be, and is being, conquered. or each three fatalities from tuberculosis in 900, there was only one in 1932 in the United tates. And there is good reason to believe that he number of persons sick with the disease has eclined in corresponding ratio. The achievement that has been accomplished thus far did not just happen. It has cost money; money for sanatoria and clinics, for health departments and public health nurses, money for education and propaganda. Thus far, we have salvaged untold wealth formerly robbed, confiscated, wiped out by the old enemy, tuberculosis. The theft is still stupendous, but it can be stopped by a decent expenditure of energy and money. Modern methods of diagnosis and treatment sustain our faith that the disease can ultimately be wiped out.

Intriguing as a discussion of the dollars-and-cents values of tuberculosis control is, we are nevertheless brought back to a consideration of the human values and costs that cannot be tangibly expressed. What about the sorrow of the widow, the wistful longing of the orphan, the frustrated hopes of the ambitious youngster looking forward to a career? These are spiritual blights, the cost of which no one can calculate with the comptometer. And even though tuberculosis never crosses my own threshold, or yours, these blights have their effects upon us.

These problems, inextricably bound up in the fight against tuberculosis, are met with daily by the nurses, physicians and other workers who compose the army that fight the disease throughout the year in every part of the United States under the banner of the Christmas Seal. Everyone can, and should, help in this fight by using Christmas Seals on their holiday letters and packages!

The Western Division of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States will meet at Los Angeles City, December 2-4.

The renewal period for 1935 California auto license plates will commence January 2 and continue to midnight of January 31.

Christmas Gifts

(MINNA McGARVEY.)

There is perfume rare, caught not in crystal flagons,
But drifting free with ev'ry breeze that blows;
As fragrant as a breath from far Arabia
Released from satin petal of the rose.

There are paintings, resting not on artist's easel—
The mountains, in a long serrated row,
With changing colors, tourmaline to purple,
From early morn to sunset's Alpine glow.

There are miles and miles of shining silver ribbon,
Flung out along the ocean's curving crest;
No silken spool has ever wound the lustre
Of sun-tipped waves that, flashing, curl to rest.

There are Christmas trees, decked not by hand of mortal;
With clustered globes of gold the boughs are bright,
While in among the leaves, like twinkling tapers,
The starry blossoms gleam with waxen light.

There is largess of the earth and air and ocean;
For ev'ry one the treasure is unfurled;
No price to pay, 'tis given full and freely
To all who live and love God's lovely world.

YULETIDE CUSTOMS

YULETIDE CELEBRATIONS WERE the gift of the pagan era to Christianity which, in turn, gave to them a spiritual significance, according to Dr. David K. Bjork, associate professor of history in the University of California at Los Angeles. In the early Christian era, he points out, there was no such institution as Christmas, but the pagan celebration of the birthday of the sun god, Mitra, was so imbedded in traditional lore that, rather than vie with a rival, the early church fathers embraced the 25th of December celebration, and Christians continued in the rich celebrations, now enhanced with a new spiritual significance. Tribes in the north, who had also celebrated the beginning of the new solstice on the 25th of December, gradually incorporated the "Yule" (wheel) idea into their newly-embraced Christianity.

"Many of our loveliest Christmas traditions come from the Germanic peoples, with their sentimental celebration of their Yuletide," declares Dr. Bjork. "Their week-long celebration at Yule-time necessitated a great log which would burn for six or seven days and nights in the fireplace. Hence the Yule log. The Christmas tree idea, also, was a contribution of the northern tribes, as was the holiday consumption of the picturesque roasted boar's head."

The first Christmas hymn was written about 34 A.D., by St. Ambrose, but it was in 1700 that "Adeste Fidelis" was written and adopted as the Christmas hymn for all Roman churches. The Protestant version of the much-beloved hymn is "O, Come All Ye Faithful."

ORIGIN OF SANTA CLAUS.

The Dutch, acording to Dr. Bjork, gave to the Christian world the idea of Santa Claus, through their admiration for St. Nicholas, bishop of Smyrna in the period of the Diocletian persecutions, who became the patron saint of little children, merchants and travelers. He collected gifts for them during the month of December, an idea which, incorporated with the tradition of the Wise Men bringing gifts to the little Christ Child, led to the general giving of gifts at holiday time.

In Spain, there is no Christmas Eve celebration except for midnight mass, but previous to the great Christmas celebration in the cathedral in Seville there is the famous "Dance of the Seses," when the choir boys dance about the great altar. Seven days after Christmas, Seville celebrates the pageant of the Wise Men, and on the seventh day after Christmas children receive their gifts in memory of the gifts brought to the Christ Child by the Three Wise Men.

In Sweden, Christmas Day is a big "home day," preceded by days and even weeks of cleaning, cooking and baking for the occasion. In all countries the celebration of Christmas is based on older pagan traditions.

Christianity has not given us the Christmas celebration, explains Dr. Bjork, but it has given us the Christmas message, which is far more important: "Be not afraid . . . I bring you good tidings . . . Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Men."

"Home is a place where no distrust may grow within its soil; where at eventide one may rest, when ends a day of toil."

"Content makes poor men rich; discontent makes rich men poor."—Benjamin Franklin.

Native Daughters of the Golden West

GRASS VALLEY—CITIZENS OF THIS community celebrated October 28 the eighty-third anniversary of the discovery of gold in quartz by George McKnight on Gold Hill. The celebration was sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce and Manzanita No. 29 under the direction of Louise Wales. On the site of the discovery a marker of granite surmounted by a large piece of gold-bearing quartz has been erected, and the annual discovery celebration is usually staged there, in a natural park of lofty pines. On account of the diversity of the program, and also because of heavy rains, this year's festivities were held in the American Legion memorial building, which was crowded to capacity.

Judge George L. Jones was the speaker, his subject being "George McKnight Stubbed His Toe." A pageant depicted the earliest residents of Grass Valley and the picturesque costumes of their day. A skit featured Lola Montez and Lotta Crabtree, internationally known characters who resided here. Dances of the '60s were given by a group of eight Native Sons and Daughters in costume.

Christmas Greetings

"Within the hall are song and laughter,
The cheeks of Christmas glow red and jolly,
And sprouting is every corbel and rafter
With lightsome green of ivy and holly."

"For nineteen hundred and thirty-four year the world has, at this season, observed the birt date of the martyred Christ,—the symbol supreme sacrifice for the redemption of a sinf world.

"It would be difficult indeed to picture th state of our present civilization, had He n been born that winter day in the lowly mang in Judea. All that is sweet, and clean ar wholesome in our lives today,—all that is hig that is noble, that is true, in the pages of histo since that first Noel, we may trace to the wor and deeds of the humble Carpenter of Nazaret.

"His life and His acts awaken response, i the souls of men, to every lofty impulse of th spirit. There is grandeur and glory; there effacement, humility, sacrifice. For His sak kings and nations have risen and fallen in th welter of carnage and strife; in His name, me have laid down their lives in secret and i silence, the unsung martyrs to His cause.

"It is right that we should rejoice and b glad on Christmas Day. Christ is born in Bet lehem! Whatever our doctrine or belief, w should be thankful for that tiny spark of li that has burned on through the centuries,—a enduring lamp to guide the feet of mankind t loftier things.

"An ancient legend tells us that on the nigh Jesus was born, three trees stood about the ma ger in which he lay,—an olive tree, a palm tre and a pine tree. The olive tree, in honor of H birth, gave all its fruit as an offering. The pal tree, through gratitude, placed all its dates b side the manger.

"Some stars, looking down and seeing the the pine tree had nothing to give, stole down t earth and fastened themselves upon its bough as an offering in honor of this Child whose li from year to year has made stronger the law Love in human relationships.

"Thus the first Christmas Tree is said to hav had its origin, the light upon the tree symboli ing good cheer, kindliness, generosity, and Lov —and the Christmas Spirit.

"The Christmas Spirit is a very real thing; may be intangible, it may be indescribable, bu it is real, and it grows stronger with the year bringing to us tenderest memories and precio gifts of Love.

"In the busy hum of our daily life, let u pause and send greetings,—Christmas greeting filled with love, cheer and joy.

"May the Star of Hope on Christmas nigh shine upon you; may this anniversary of th birth of the Man of Galilee be a day of joy an comfort for you and yours.

"I send greetings to every Native Daughter o the Golden West. May you greet the Christma morn with joy, with an untroubled soul, wit thankfulness and with humility. May the Ne Year bring peace, plenty, and an abundance good health to you, and may our Order have year of progress. Sincerely and fraternally P.D.F.A.,

DIARY OF A PIONEER OF 1849

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 18, 1849, AT 1 p.m., John A. Markle and five friends left Saint Joseph, Missouri, in a wagon train, bound for California. Markle kept a diary, pen written, now the prized possession f Auburn Parlor No. 59 N.S.G.W. The party ade steady progress until they arrived in the resent State of Nevada, but one day's journey rom the Salmon Trout (now Truckee) River. hat portion of Markle's diary which records the ourney through western Nevada and California, ross the Sierra over the Donner Trail, follows:

"SUNDAY, AUGUST 12, 1849—This morning e arrived at the boiling springs where we ooled water for our mules. There were about 0 teams encamped when we came there and rom the appearance there had been a general estruction of property as there were wagons, lothing, guns, lead, irons, mining tools, and all inds of stuff left laying there by emigrants hose stock had given out. We lay by until 5 'clock in the evening. The day was a disagreeble one as it was very hot and no water except hat we cooled; and it being hot enough to boil heat sufficiently done in 20 minutes, we could lot get it very cool in the hot sun. About 4 'clock Graves and I started ahead of the teams or the Salmon Trout River on foot, with a canteen of coffee and one of hot water and some iscuit. The road was beautiful for 12 miles uring which time we passed a salt spring, but he water could not be used. We then ascended little hill which was steep and very sandy and ontinued so for 10 miles which brought us to he river, where we arrived between 11 and 12 n the night. The water was clear and cool. Before we drank any we filled our canteens and efore we were satisfied we drank five pints piece. We then got in among the willows and lept the balance of the night as comfortably as if we were on a bed of feathers. Three of the wagons got to the river about an hour after sunrise and the other 3 were left in the sand as their mules gave out. They brought the mules on to the river and watered them and turned them out to graze with the intention of going back for their wagons in the evening.

"MONDAY, AUGUST 13, 1849— Today we lay by, recruiting our mules. We herded them about 3 miles down the river where there was good grass. TUESDAY, AUGUST 14, 1849—The grass being excellent and our mules tired, we are still laying by.

"WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 15, 1849—Today we traveled 10 miles. In the morning we crossed the river and traveled up the right hand side for about 4 miles and crossed again. In the 10 miles, we crossed 7 times. The crossings were very rocky and the same. The water in the river was beautifully clear and cool and the banks were decorated with a few large cottonwood trees. The grass was all ate off the bottoms as they were very narrow; back of which the mountains rose high and abruptly. Today, Mr. Dahl got badly hurt by falling off a precipice. At night we had a shower of rain, the first since the first day of July.

"THURSDAY, AUGUST 16, 1849—Today we traveled 20 miles. Six miles brought us to where there was good grass, during which time we crossed the river 5 times. 14 miles more brought us to a beautiful valley where there was any quantity of grass, and in the 14 miles, we crossed the river 20 times more and the fords were very rough. The mountains and valleys as yesterday.

"FRIDAY, AUGUST 17, 1849—Some of our mules being tired and the grass excellent, we remain in camp to recruit them. About 9 o'clock a.m. Kit Carson passed our camp with a pack train. He had started by way of Fort Smith, but The Colorado River being overflowed, he had to steer his way through the mountains and strike the road by way of Fort Bridger, about 500 miles out of his way.

"SATURDAY, AUGUST 18, 1849—This morning we started early and traveled 20 miles. After crossing the valley (about 3 miles) we left the river. 8 miles more brought us to it again, where there is a pine tree that measures 15 feet 3 inches in circumference. 9 miles more brought us to where we are encamped on the river among some large and beautiful pine trees. The camp is pleasant, but the grass very scarce. In our day's travel, we only crossed the river 4 times and the road was so stony that the wagons would scarcely get to the ground.

"SUNDAY, AUGUST 19, 1849—21 miles today. This morning immediately after starting we crossed the river, when Graves, Steiner, and myself left the wagons and crossed the mountain which the road wound around leaving it on the left, in search of game; but found it very scarce. About 9 miles brought the wagons to a valley where there was grass and water and in the ravine there was a kind of dust which some claimed was gold. 8 miles more brought us to a creek where there was a good camp. 4 miles more brought us across a ridge to another valley where we are encamped, and the grass and water very good. The first 9 miles after leaving the river, the road was very rough but the balance was good. This morning after crossing the creek we got into a thick pine country, which made the traveling quite pleasant, compared with the traveling before as we had shade to rest in.

"MONDAY, AUGUST 20, 1849—Today we traveled about 10 miles and encamped in a valley at the base of the mountain about ¾ of a mile east of Truckee Lake. The first 2 miles brought us to the valley where Donner en-

Native Sons of the Golden West

Piedmont Parlor No. 120 submitted a resolution suggesting a change in the name of the San Francisco-Oakland bay bridge. No action was taken thereon.

A request for Native Son literature from L. C. Hagerty of Milwaukee, who desires to form a similar organization in Wisconsin, was referred to the Grand Secretary.

Lakemont Parlor No. 275 was voted a supplies credit of $150.

Various communications of a routine nature were disposed of, most of them being filed.

Grand First Vice-president Skillin reported there will be no conflict of dates with the Knights of Columbus for the Grand Parlor meeting at Vallejo next year.

A detailed report of the special committee—Grand Trustees Hynes, Foley and McShane—on Resolutions Nos. 29 and 31—proposing to amend the laws pertaining to the election and the duties of Grand Trustees—referred to the Board by the Ukiah Grand Parlor, was considered. The committee report recommended that the resolutions be not adopted, and the Board adopted the report. The coming Grand Parlor at Vallejo must pass final judgment on the resolutions.

Membership reports from Subordinate Parlors were most encouraging, the initiations to date being far in excess of the number at the same time last year.

At 6:30 p.m., the Board adjourned to the call of Grand President Koenig.

Annual Christmas Tree for Kiddies.

Livermore—Las Positas No. 96 had its anniversary banquet November 8. John M. Burnett, former grand trustee, was the principal speaker and delivered a splendid address. Among the other speakers were Grand President Chas. A. Koenig, Grand First Vice-president Harmon D. Skillin, Grand Secretary John T. Regan and Grand Treasurer John A. Corotto.

For several years Las Positas has sponsored a Christmas tree and party for Livermore Valley children, and it has always been an outstanding affair. The event this year will be held December 17. Louis J. Volponi is the general chairman, and among the many others in charge of arrangements are J. J. Kelly, Carl Clarke, H. L. Wente, J. M. Beazell, John Rose, Peter Reuss, H. W. Twisselman, E. A. Wente, L. A. McVicar, Wm. Medau and J. M. Baughman.

"To Officers and Members Subordinate Parlors N.S.G.W.—My Brothers: The year 1934 draws to a close; but one month remains. What have been the accomplishments of the annual period? What does the future hold?

"The experiences of contact and travel enjoyed since my election at Ukiah convince me that our State is grand and great beyond the power of words to describe, and that it will continue to prosper, to progress, to carry on to ever greater heights of glory and achievement.

"I find that our people, despite periods of doubt and uncertainty, are from day to day becoming more certain in their conviction that America is, indeed, the land of liberty, the land of privilege, the land of opportunity.

"Secure in their knowledge of the permanency of American institutions, Native Sons of the Golden West from all parts of the State are preparing to assist in spreading happiness and goodcheer during the Christmas season.

"Optimism, goodwill, and appreciative consideration of the advantages that are ours, will insure a new year of worthwhile accomplishment.

"Working together, we shall overcome the difficulties that have beset us for the past several years, and shall meet at our next Grand Parlor at Vallejo as members of a stronger and nobler fraternity.

"I extend to the members of our great fraternity my most sincere and affectionate wishes for joy, happiness, peace and prosperity during this Yuletide. Sincerely yours,

"CHAS. A. KOENIG,

DIARY OF '49ER

camped. 1 mile more brought us opposite to where his cabins were, which were situated about 1 or 2 miles from the road on the right hand side. There were a number of fragments left, but more human bones than anything else. 6 miles more and we came to where the Graves family wintered and all perished except 5 and 2 of them died after they got through. 1 mile more and we came to Fosters and Breens cabins where we encamped. The road now leaves them on the right, but the old road run just past them leaving them on the left. Graves and Fosters cabins are the only ones that are standing yet and they present a gloomy appearance. In Fosters there were old clothes which were worn by females and also, long female hair which appeared as if it had fallen from the head and any quantity of bones in and around the cabin. In the afternoon seven of our men ate a red berry which was very plenty in the valley and at night they proved to be poison. They all got very sick. Some of them thought they were going to end the chapter, particularly R. Woodward. There were a great many straw and gooseberries; but they were unfortunate and did not get them.

"TUESDAY, AUGUST 21, 1849—Today we traveled 12 miles. Soon after starting we crossed the Southeast end of a mountain. The road then was very good for three or four miles when we commenced climbing over rocks and stones. 10 miles brought us to the summit of the long dreaded Sierra Nevada. We came within about ½ mile of the top when it became so steep that we had to double team. The ascent was difficult, but not so much so as I expected. We had all the wagons on the Summit by 1 o'clock P.M. 2 miles more brought us down into a valley where we encamped. The descent was gentle with some places pretty steep, but not so rough as the ascent. The view from the peak on the south side of the gap was magnificent. The poisoned men are better this evening.

"WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 22, 1849—Today we traveled 18 miles. Soon after starting we crossed a small stream which headed in the mountain where we descended. About one mile from our camp, we left the valley to our right and went up a ravine to the left. 4 miles more, brought us to a group of lakes, 6 in number. The water in them was cool and beautifully clear. They averaged from 1 to 2 miles in length and from 400 to 500 yards in width. The road was very rough and after passing the lakes, which were strung out about 4 miles, we traveled up and down 9 miles of the infernalest roughest road that ever was traveled. The last mile was so steep that we had to check down with ropes. After we all got down we encamped among the rocks at a beautiful spring, which is one of the head branches of the Yuba River. There was no grass where we encamped, but by driving our mules up the other branch, we got very good grass. In coming down the mountain to our camp, Doctor Quimby's wagon upset.

"THURSDAY, AUGUST 23, 1849—Today we traveled 15 miles. The road today was indescribable, but it was the damn'dest, roughest and rockiest road, I ever saw. About 3 miles from our camp, we had to take out our mules and let our wagons down with ropes. It was off of one rock and on to another, all day except a short distance after we started and a few places in the bottom of the river. We also ascended some very steep mountains and 9 miles brought us to where we left the Yuba River. We then crossed a mountain which was not as rough as I expected. 6 miles brought us to a valley on Bear River where we encamped. The grass was very good, but there was none between the two camps. 8 miles from our last camp we came to where there had been grass, but it was all ate off. In crossing from Yuba to Bear River, there were a few oak bushes and on top there were two small lakes. Through the day we past another cabin where some of the sufferers of the Donner Party got to.

"FRIDAY, AUGUST 24, 1849—Today we traveled seven miles. Five miles brought us to the main branch of Bear River where there is a large valley. In descending to the valley there is a very steep hill where we let down with ropes for about three-quarters of a mile and the trees were worn very much where the rope had run around. Two miles more brought us to the lower end of the valley where we encamped and mowed grass.

thinking their mules too much reduced to go ahead, lay by. Captain Taylor and our wagon started and traveled thirteen miles. The road for five miles was as usual, rough and hilly. Three miles brought us where we crossed the river and we then ascended two hills, the second was so steep that we had to double team. Seven miles brought us to a spring on the left hand side of the road and six miles more brought us to another spring where we tied our mules to the trees and fed the grass we cut in Bear Valley. The road for the last six miles was very good. The timber was very large and not any grass along the mountains or any other place.

"SUNDAY, AUGUST 26, 1849—Today we traveled 14 miles. Eleven miles brought us to another branch of Bear River where there were some of the gold diggers operating but not with much success. The road from our camp to the Branch ran along a ridge and was very hilly as there were a great many gaps in it. The descent to the branch was so steep and long that we had to tie trees to the wagon. We then crossed and ascended a long steep hill or mountain. Three miles from the branch brought us to a spring on the left of the road where we encamped and cut down trees to let our mules graze upon the leaves as there was no grass.

"MONDAY, AUGUST 27, 1849—This morning we started and drove three miles to another branch of Bear River where Blair's Mess was encamped. By this time our mules were so fatigued that we could go no further. We encamped and drove our mules four miles to grass. A number were digging gold where we encamped but it is scarce.

"TUESDAY, AUGUST 28, 1849—Today we traveled 16 miles. Eight miles brought us to a spring on the left of the road and eight miles more brought us to another spring or puddle where we encamped. We tied the mules to the wagon and fed them on brush. The country was hilly with more Oak than usual and was not so rocky as before.

"WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 29, 1849—Today we traveled eight miles. The road was hilly and rough; water was scarce and not good and could only be got in ponds which were very much stagnated. About five miles brought us to a tolerably good spring on the left of the road where there was some grass in the ravines, but it was so dry that the mules would not eat it. Our camp was in a small valley on the left. Oak timber was more plentiful today than usual and about sunset we got in sight of the long looked for valley of the Sacramento.

"THURSDAY, AUGUST 30, 1849—Today we traveled twelve miles. Six miles brought us to a spring at the base of a hill on the right and four miles more brought us to Johnson's. Two miles more down the river and we encamped where we found good grass. The road today was very good, the valley presented a beautiful appearance.

"FRIDAY, AUGUST 31, 1849—This evening we started and traveled fourteen miles and encamped at Nicholson's Ranch about 12 o'clock in the night.

"SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1849—This evening we started and traveled twenty five miles during which time there was no water. We encamped about one o'clock in the morning near a slough.

"SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1849—Today we traveled nine miles. Four miles brought us to where we crossed the American Fork. 2½ miles brought us to Sutter's Fort which was converted into a hospital. 2½ miles more brought us to Sacramento City."

(This historic document came to The Grizzly Bear from Richard L. P. Bigelow of Hydraulic Parlor No. 56 N.S.G.W., Nevada City, with the notation dated August 28, 1934: "For a number of years Wendell T. Robie of Auburn Parlor No. 59 N.S.G.W. and myself discussed the marking of the Donner Trail, but never got at it until this month, when a party of eleven of us left the Donner Monument on August 12 and, under the guidance of Assistant Grazing Examiner L. S. Smith and Ranger John A. McIntosh, both of the Forest Service, followed out the old Emigrant Trail from here to the Mule Spring Ranch, marking it with special markers. We used this Markle Diary as a guide."—Editor.)

MARGARET DEMPSEY.

Whereas, Death has taken from our Parlor our beloved and respected sister, Margaret Dempsey; and whereas, the loss we have sustained is far less than the loss to those who are nearer and dearer to her, be it

Resolved, That we graciously submit to His divine will fully realizing that Phoebe A. Hearst Parlor No 214 N.D.G.W. has lost a faithful and earnest member, who was willing at all times to do her part; and be it resolved, that we extend our sincere sympathy to the family of our departed sister and also be it resolved, that our charter be draped and that copies of these resolutions be sent to The Grizzly Bear and the bereaved family, and that a copy be spread on the minutes of the Parlor.

Fraternally submitted,

SAN FRANCISCO

THE ANNUAL HOMELESS CHILDREN benefit ball sponsored by the San Francisco Parlors of Native Sons and Native Daughters attracted some 5,000 to the Civic Auditorium, November 17. It was a splendid affair, one of the very best ever held under the auspices of the two Orders in San Francisco, and a goodly sum was realized to assist in carrying on for the homeless children.

The grand march was headed by Chas. A. Koenig, Grand President N.S.G.W., and wife; Mrs. Gladys E. Noce, Grand President N.D.G.W., and husband; Angelo J. Rossi, San Francisco Mayor, and wife. Then followed approximately 1,500 members of the Orders in colorful uniforms or costumes that composed a most striking picture. Among the number were Grand Vice-president Anna C. Thuesen, Grand Trustees Orinda G. Giannini and Alice M. Lane, and Grand Outside Sentinel Claire Lindsey of the Native Daughters; Grand First Vice-president Harmon D. Skillin, Grand Second Vice-president Hartley Russell, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Organist C. George Cuthbertson, and Grand Trustees Thomas M. Foley, Joseph J. McShane, Edward T. Schnarr and Charles H. Spengemann of the Native Sons.

Also, these officers of the San Francisco Joint Homeless Children Committee: Walter Bammann, chairman; Agnes Curry, recording secretary; Bertha Mauser, financial secretary; Martin Huber, treasurer. Various prizes offered by the committee were awarded the following:

Best N.D.G.W. drill team—Twin Peaks Parlor No. 185, first; Mission Parlor No. 227, second.

Best N.D.G.W. drum corps—Mission Parlor No. 227.

Best N.S.G.W. drum corps with drilling—Piedmont Parlor No. 120.

Best N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. joint drum corps—Utopia Parlor No. 270 N.S. and Utopia Parlor No. 252 N.D.

N.D.G.W. Parlor with largest number members in line—Twin Peaks No. 185.

N.S.G.W. Parlor with largest percentage members in line—Twin Peaks No. 214.

N.D.G.W. Parlor with largest percentage members in line—Balboa No. 249.

Features—Golden Gate Parlor No. 158 N.D.G.W., depicting the adoption and care of a homeless child, first prize. Group of the presidents of eight N.D.G.W. Parlors, representing the Indians, second prize.

One who has attended every benefit ball in San Francisco wrote The Grizzly Bear: "In the opinion of the writer, this costume ball given by the Native Sons and Native Daughters was the most impressive, dignified and picturesque spectacle ever given to raise funds for the homeless children.

"The attractive, well-trained drill teams and drum corps in their bright uniforms of red and white, and blue and yellow; the nurses in white, caring for their Parlor's adopted baby; the little group in white and silver, with bows and arrows tipped with sparkling lights as of fairyland; costumes of the stars and stripes, and gowns with silver bands bearing names of the states of the Union, with regal California and her page marching in queenly dignity; the Hollanders, in gowns of brilliant blue, with their windmill; costumes of rose and flowers of gold, all combined in a most colorful pageant."

NATIVE SONS GROUP INITIATION.

At the group initiation of the San Francisco Native Sons Parlors, October 26, twenty-nine candidates were initiated. The officers of Stanford Parlor No. 76 impressively exemplified the ritual, and Pacific Parlor No. 10 was given the award for presenting the most candidates.

Addresses were made by Grand President Chas. A. Koenig and Grand First Vice-president Harmon D. Skillin. Other grand officers in attendance included Grand Second Vice-president Hartley Russell, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Organist C. George Cuthbertson, Grand Trustees Thomas M. Foley, Joseph J. McShane, Adrien M. Hynes and Charles H. Spengemann.

SHADOWS

(EUNICE MITCHELL LEHMER.)

Ah, dare we mortals pray, "Let there be light"
How kindly are the shadows where we dwell!
Our yesterdays fade gently from our sight,
Today is seen but dimly; sweet the spell
Of morrows waiting in their mists of white!

Let gods walk fearlessly beneath the sky,
And face the searching glory of the sun;
Our petty graces shrink before his eye.
Oh, kindly shadows, shield us every one,
Lest we should see ourselves go halting by!

THE BIG EVENT IN SOUTHLAND NATIVE Sons circles this month will be the group initiation of the Subordinate Parlors, to be held at Santa Monica, the evening of Wednesday, December 5, with Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 267 as the host of the occasion. Grand President Chas. A. Koenig, Grand Third Vice-president Eldred L. Meyer, Grand Secretary John T. Regan and other officials of the Grand Parlor will be in attendance.

As this will be the last group initiation for the year, a record-breaking number of candidates is anticipated. The officers of Santa Monica Bay Parlor, assisted by Grand Secretary Regan as president, will exemplify the ritual. Following the ceremonies a fine program of entertainment will be presented, and refreshments will be served. All Native Sons are urged to be in attendance.

'TIS CHRISTMAS TIME!

"Let's ring the merry Christmas bells and continue the humanitarian work of placing homeless children in childless homes!" Such is the urge in a letter from the Native Sons and Native Daughters Homeless Children Committee that will soon reach all members of those Orders in Los Angeles and Orange Counties. Thanks to the Natives, the homeless child in California is no longer a waif. Continuing, the letter says:

"There'll be an answering ring of gladness in your heart that will match the radiance in the eyes of the child your contribution will help to place in a real home. All Natives and their friends will respond to this appeal, made unselfishly in the interest of the homeless child. Because of the splendid support extended in the past, over 4,000 homeless children have been placed in childless homes. They were waifs. Eight thousand fathers and motherss help to make them happy now. Shall the good work continue?"

The need is greater this year than ever! Send in your contribution—whatever you can afford—now, to the Homeless Children Committee, 3924 Sunset boulevard, Los Angeles. Officers of the committee are: Irving Baxter, chairman; Miss Grace Norton, vice-chairman; John Gower, financial secretary; Miss Flora M. Holy, treasurer; Mrs. Annie L. Adair, secretary.

A VERY SICK PEOPLE.

"We are a very sick people, and a horde of quacks have moved in upon us," said President Louise Ward Watkins of the Friday Morning Club to members and guests of Californiana Parlor No. 247 N.D.G.W. at the November 13 luncheon. Her topic was "Americanism," and she urged co-operation and a return to independent thinking. Mrs. Jean Farr reviewed current events at home and abroad.

At the business meeting the Parlor endorsed a resolution, presented by Mrs. Martha Decker, americanization chairman, approving action taken by Dr. E. C. Moore, U.C.L.A. provost, against radical activities on the college campus. November 27, J. Duncan Gleason spoke on "Sails on the Pacific." Miss Mary Foy presided at the tea.

The tea at the home of Mrs. Earl Osborn, November 8, was an artistic and financial success. The dessert sewing circle had two delightful meetings during November at the homes of Mms. Charles Jacobson and George Adams. Members of Californiana are busily engaged preparing for a Christmas bazar, December 11, for the benefit of the homeless children. Ora Evans is preparing an interesting program.

SPANISH DINNER DANCE.

Glendale—Glendale Parlor No. 264 N.S.G.W. will have its annual spanish dinner-dance Saturday night, December 8, at Knights Columbus Clubhouse, 330 East Lomita street. Service from 7:30. A real dinner will be prepared by Mms. Phil Molen, Ione Gillett and Leslie Henderson, who have proved so successful in that art. Hal Wilcox will furnish the music and entertainment.

All Natives and their friends are invited. Reservations, at $1.00 per plate, should be made through any member of the committee: Les Henderson (chairman), Harvey Gillett, Ferris Farrell, George LaRue, Phil Molen, Benny Street, Arthur Duncan, Frederick Leonetti and President Albert Boeckman.

Long Beach—Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. entertained Deputy Jennie Raymond, November 1, who gave an interesting talk. November 15, the members had a surprise shower for First Vice-president Gertrude Riddle. Clara Scanlon, chairman of the delightful affair, was assisted by Marguerite Burch and Bess Borden.

November 8, the California thimble club met at the home of Johanna Reed, and a large number came to finish all work for the bazar held the week of November 19. Losers of the membership drive were given a dinner at the home of Past President Clara Fay. Cards followed the feast. Long Beach is making great plans for an old-fashion Christmas party December 20.

GROUP INITIATION AT HOLLYWOOD.

The group initiation of the southland Native Sons, October 29, with Hollywood Parlor No. 196 as host, attracted a crowd of some 300. Notably large delegations came from Santa Barbara and San Bernardino. Twenty-two candidates were presented, nine from Santa Barbara Parlor No. 116, seven from Arrowhead Parlor No. 110, and one each from Los Angeles No. 45, Hollywood No. 196, Sepulveda No. 263, Glendale No. 264, Santa Monica Bay No. 267 and University No. 272 Parlors.

Among the many who were called on by President John M. Costello of Hollywood for brief remarks were Henry G. Bodkin, Grand Trustee Donald VanLuven, Grand Marshal William Reuter, Charles Smith, Municipal Judge Newton Condee, Superior Judge Ruben Schmidt, President James Sloan of Santa Barbara and First Vice-president Eugene Ward of Arrowhead. Deputies in attendance included A. C. Dinsmore, Bernard Hiss, Lamar McGarvey, Walter Hiskey, Walter Richards, Walter Odemar, Sidney Witkowski, Daniel McSweeney and John Ford.

TO CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY.

Glendale—Verdugo Parlor No. 240 N.D.G.W. initiated seven candidates November 13. Flags were used in the decorations, and refreshments were served in Swedish style. Evelyn Wilson had charge of the decorating of a car which the Parlor entered in the local Armistice Day parade. November 21 a successful card party was held at the home of Ada Steele, who was assisted by Myrteze Tregea and Doria Philips. The proceeds will be used to purchase a California State (Bear) Flag.

December 11, Verdugo will celebrate its ninth institution anniversary. A Christmas party for children is planned for December 23. On the arrangements committee are President Margaret Donlan and Vera Carlson.

UNIVERSITY PARLOR NEWS.

University Parlor No. 272 N.S.G.W. has entered a team in the Sunday Morning Softball League. Stanley Theodore Parker is now the able manager of the team, which has played three games and won all of them.

The Parlor will elect officers December 12, and a funfest will be featured December 16. There will be no meeting January 2.

SANTA MONICA BAY DISTRICT

BAZAR AND FOOD SALE.

San Pedro—November 19, Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. had a visit from Supervising Deputy Gertrude Tuttle, who was awarded the tray donated by First Vice-president Irene Caresse. In the fiesta parade December 1, the Parlor will be represented by a float depicting an earlyday California marriage. Anna Menvig will be the bride.

Rudecinda's thimble club plans a bazar and food sale for December 21 and 22. Carrie Kuhlman and Margaret Kreider are in charge.

STAG SMOKER DRAWS 'EM.

Santa Monica—The stag smoker staged November 21 by the drum and bugle corps of Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 267 N.S.G.W. was a huge success, attended by more than 400 from all surrounding Parlors. There were amusements aplenty and numerous entertainment features. William Dowsing headed the very active committee that put the affair over in a big way.

The Parlor's annual dinner-dance at the Paris Inn Cafe, Los Angeles, November 5, was an enjoyable affair. Bert Rovere provided fine entertainment, as well as a good dinner.

CHRISTMAS BOX FOR CHILDREN.

Santa Monica—Complimenting Deputy Betty Saunders, the social hour of Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 245 N.D.G.W., October 24, was in the nature of a shower. Attractive table decorations and refreshments were in charge of Chairman Myrtle Barden. November 14, Supervising Deputy Gertrude Tuttle was a guest, and she gave an inspiring talk. Evelyn Jones acted as hostess. A Thanksgiving program was furnished by Dorothy Barnes, November 28. Rita Smith had charge of the social hour.

Members of the Parlor met for luncheon November 2 at the home of Hazel Swanson, and devoted the afternoon to sewing on garments for the Christmas box for the homeless children. A second gathering for the work was at the home of Grace Abili, November 23.

ARRANGING FOR BANQUET.

November was a memorable month for President Ruben Schmidt of Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W., for he celebrated his fifty-third birthday anniversary and, together with Mrs. Schmidt, his twenty-sixth wedding anniversary. First Vice-president Fred Staebler and wife won first prize at the Hallowe'en costume ball given by the staff of United Artists Studio. The Parlor's November birthday dinner was well attended.

Ramona will elect officers December 7, and initiation, followed by refreshments, will be held December 14. Past Grand President Herman C. Lichtenberger heads a committe which is arranging for a banquet to be held some time in January. It is expected this will be one of the most outstanding affairs ever sponsored by the Parlor.

PAST PRESIDENTS GREETED BY MANY.

At the first meeting in its new home, the Friday Morning Clubhouse, 940 South Figueroa, Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. initiated seven candidates. Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer spoke on the Order's activities. The November 14 card party, under the supervision of Sophia Stewart, was a success. The sewing club had an evening gathering at the home of Adeline Waite, November 15.

November 21 was past presidents night, and members of Rudecinda and Santa Monica Bay Parlors were special guests. In attendance were 106 members. Louise Robinson told about the Parlor's early days, and other speakers were Gertrude Allen, Marvel Thomas, Jennie Raymond, Flora Holy, Irene Eden, Ruth Ruiz, Mattie Gara and Dolores Luckey. A pleasing program was presented, and delicious refreshments were served. Edna Holcomb was chairman of the evening. The bridge luncheon November 24 at the home of Lillian Spinner was a com-

PATHWAYS OF THE SEA

(A. L. SMITH.)

At Land's End begins a highway
Where heroic souls have trod
Ever since Adventure's summons
Drew men from their native sod,
And when God's judgment morning
Ushers in Eternity,
There will still be men a sailing
Down the pathways of the sea.

There's something in the whisper
Of the trade winds in the shrouds,
In the toss of billowed canvass
To the call of racing clouds,
That wipes away the hunger
For mountain, vale or lea
From the hearts of men a roving
Down the pathways of the sea.

Man has filled the land with ruins
From his puny, weakened race,
He has blazed his million failures
With a brand on Nature's face;
But uncontrolled as ever,
Bravely untamed, wild and free,
Toss the whitecaps of the ocean
On the pathways of the sea.

There's something in the thunder
Of the charging billows' roar,
In the crying of the sea birds
As they wheel above the shore,
That wakes a restless spirit
Whose dominating plea
Sends men bravely plowing outward
O'er the pathways of the sea.

Sailors love the grim old ocean
With a love God understands,
For He made earth two-thirds water
And left but one-third land.
Then when Jesus chose disciples
We know at least of three
That were taken from the fishers
On the pathways of the sea.

There's something mighty tempting
In the call of wind and tide
To that world of tossing waters
Where Adventure's sons abide—
The world by men unconquered,
Where winds of earth blow free,
With ships, like proud queens, passing
Down the pathways of the sea.

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER

THIS IS THE TIME OF YEAR WHEN the weeks grow shorter. They are here and gone as quickly as that, for days have a way of flying by. Three weeks, says the calendar, until Christmas. The time has come for all good citizens to begin making final Christmas lists, and then check them off. Gayly decorated stores are ready with Yuletide gifts suitable for everyone's fancy and budget.

First of all, the wrapping is part of the gift, for a gift without gift wrapping is bare. The festive beauty of wrappings exalt the gift. Packages will be specially wrapped without additional charge at stores where decorations are purchased. The merry array of decorations in the new printed papers, the cellophane, the imported holly, the glass bells and balls all give a special touch. Christmas seals come in lovely designs. Tags and enclosure cards come with small metal bells, and tinsel and cellophane ribbons are shown in all combination of colors. Such plain white, red or green tissue paper is being used.

Clocks and lamps always rank high on Christmas gift lists, and are in keeping with the modern trend. A distinctive table lamp is seen of frosted white glass with a black catalin base for accent; a claire-de-lune shade has grosgrain ribbon edgings and bow. Another all-white table lamp is empire in feeling, with columnar standard and crystal balls, is mounted on a circular piece of alabaster and has a silk shade with fringe and sways of white crepe.

A gifty desk lamp with a rare combination of dignity and usefulness is displayed. It is swivelled on a sturdy semi-circular bracket and may be adjusted at any desired angle. It is finished in polished chromium or english bronze, and has a smart shade.

Down through the ages, time has been measured with ever-increasing accuracy, and the evolution of time-telling devices has been one of the most fascinating developments. You must see the new time-tellers to appreciate their charm and versatility. Any one of them would make a Christmas gift par excellence.

We always have the dependable cocktail trays in cream with a black design, and those lacquered in red, green, beige or black. A very smart gift is a tidbit or sandwich tray with metal handles. Chromium finished ice tongs, spiral action sugar tongs, or a combination glove-and-hose box of brown or white embossed fabricoid all make splendid Christmas gifts.

A hose box with twelve compartments is covered with rayon moire and is with or without cover. Rayon shoe covers come in pastel shades in boxes of three, in the same color or assorted. Enameled racks to hold eight pairs of shoes are seen in rose, blue, green, orchid, black or yellow, and are useful and inexpensive.

In the toy department, we find Santa waiting to deliver the new streamlined trains, sidewalk bikes, miniature furniture, dolls, polar bears, frosted white trees, and santa claus reindeer and sleigh.

At some stores, there is a surprise package for each and every little boy and girl, and from inside a cave fairy tales come to life. There are sparkling Christmas tree ornaments, electric trains, musical toys and many new games. Toyland gives us the musical cave. One walks right through a big book into booktown to get there.

Many gifts thrill the tots. The dy-dee doll is almost human, because it drinks, breathes, coos, bathes, needs diapers, moves arms and goes to sleep. An adorable doll with velvet body and curly hair is seated on a plush horse with flowing mane. A barn accommodates the farmer, his wife, all the animals, farm implements, and even a bag of hay.

A huge doll is dressed with coat and hat, and her trunk includes twenty-five changes consisting of a girl-scout uniform, nurse's uniform, rubber beach cape, tennis dress, evening dresses, wraps, sweaters, sports clothes and a bathing suit, with hats and shoes for all occasions. This is a gift to thrill a youngster for years to come.

For the tiny miss are miniature toys, including famous music boxes decorated with carved figures, depicting little scenes, each with a splendid musical unit, clear and authentic in tone. Others include the imported ones of mother with gocart, baby doll, cherub on skis, dutch dolls, and many families of dolls. Musical instruments from accordions and trumpets to trap drum sets are shown.

Looms are sold for actually weaving scarfs and rugs. Three kinds of clay are shown for modeling the diminutive kitchen where the smallest woman in the world makes coffee and muffins for visiting children.

Since playthings belong to the development of childhood, they help direct the imaginative impulse into creative realism. The right playthings for a child assist his physical, dramatic and imitative functioning. Others allow practice in building or constructive expression.

Clever new styles appear in glasses of every type for the cocktail hour. New mixers and new serving gadgets afford plenty of gift ideas for both men and women. The plump wooden pig devotes his back to holding hors d'oeuvre on bristling toothpicks. New ideas galore come in electric chafing dishes, warming sets, buffet servers, coffee makers and a host of things. The new waffle iron and sandwich toaster just shifts the plates and the toast is ready.

A practical and beautiful comforter is wool filled. Covered in rayon taffeta in the most delectable color combinations, with lovely quilting and a cord edge, it has the new tailored look that is so correct this year.

As for the women who give close attention to their homes and want smart appointments, there are linens galore. Give, for example, a martex towel set. It comes in the new dark blue or brown, as well as the light pastel shades. A wash cloth, hand towel, big bath towel and bath mat will please any good housekeeper.

A clever bit of gadgetry we call this—the top of a cigarette case equipped with a calendar that gives you the date wherever you are. These novelties are finished in a smooth rich enamel, in black or fascinating colors to match or contrast your ensemble. They are of generous size, and hold plenty of cigarettes.

There is no end of novelty jewelry of every description, in dazzlingly brilliant bracelets, earrings, clips and cuff-clips. These are always acceptable gifts. Perfumes come in the most attractive bottles.

Gloves, scarfs and berets match, and furs are displayed to please the most fastidious. Let's all help make this the happiest Yuletide ever.

California cattlemen will meet in annual convention at San Francisco, December 7 and 8.

"We tend to spend our lives in making up our minds to decide to decide."—Howard Scott.

THE CALIFORNIA FRENCH

"THE FRENCH IN SONORA (1850-1854)"—the story of French adventurers from California into Mexico—by Rufus Kay Wyllys, Ph.D., is the title of volume twenty-one of the University of California's publications in history, issued in 1932. Chapter three, dealing with "The California French," is very interesting, and is here presented verbatim:

Mexico's frontier situation thus forms one phase of the background for a study of the French in Sonora. The foreign immigration, however, at least so far as Europe was concerned, did not come as readily as was hoped: the northern frontier had small attraction for distant Europeans.

There was, however, in a land contiguous to Mexico, a considerable European element which could be attracted to the nearest feasible region of colonization in that republic. If the Sonora frontier had been nearly depopulated by Indian raids and an exodus of Sonorans to the California gold fields, in California itself there were Europeans who had found her gold fields unprofitable or had been excluded from them. These, therefore, seeking some other possible region in which to retrieve their fortunes, became interested in Sonora. Such were the French of California and they form the complementing phase of the background for this study.

The French emigrants to California contributed much of the color that still lingers in the chronicles of the gold rush. In order to understand them and their interest in Sonora, it is desirable to examine in some degree their origins, why they came to California, and what happened to them on the Pacific slope. For all these things contribute to an explanation of their coming to Sonora in the fifties.

From 1848 to 1854, France was in a state of economic depression. Revolution and reaction had paralyzed industry and commerce. There were thousands of unemployed, and poverty, street fighting, and political intrigues and changes made the future seem dark. In such circumstances, the tidings of the discovery of gold in California attracted much attention in both Paris and the provinces. A perceptible exodus to California took place. Many Frenchmen came merely for the sake of adventure; others were seized with the gold fever; some found it convenient to leave France for political reasons; a considerable number embarked on commercial ventures into the new country; and some simply tried to escape certain poverty and perhaps starvation at home.

A number of Frenchmen had come to California even before its annexation by the United States. Scattered in various parts of the territory, however, they were of little importance in the population. Frenchmen, too, had been interested in Mexico in the forties. Some had even, we are told, fought in the Mexican army during the war with the United States. More were to be found in other parts of Spanish America and in the islands of the south Pacific. Some of these seem to have composed the first large group of French to come to California after the discovery of gold in January of 1848. In July of that year there was a camp of French goldseekers at Placerville, most of whom were said to have come from Spanish America, Louisiana, and the Pacific islands.

The first considerable group of French to come directly from France is said to have arrived in September in 1849, and to have numbered some forty persons. From then on, for several years, the French came in shiploads, in varying numbers. California came to be widely advertised in France, and soon companies were being formed to expedite the shipment of emigrants. Doubtless these companies were looked upon with favor by some persons as means of ridding France of her undesirables; but their purpose was purely mercenary, and they do not seem to have professed any particularly benevolent motives.

The companies were numerous. Some of them owned or shared property in gold mines in California. Others were organized for the purpose of forming agricultural colonies in the state. They were chiefly stock companies, selling shares of stock at prices ranging from ten to five hundred francs. They bore such alluring names as "La Fortune," "La Californie," "Toison d'Or" and "l'Aurifere," and at least one of them granted a free passage with every series of two hundred shares issued. Shipments of emigrants from Havre, Bordeaux, and Marseilles were fairly frequent. From November 1849, to June 1850, it is said that thirty-five French vessels brought over two thousand French to California.

One of the more noteworthy of the companie known as the "Gardes Mobiles," was formed 1850, under the patronage of the French go ernment, for the purpose of transporting retire French soldiers of the "gardes mobiles" to Cal fornia. One hundred and thirty of these me the first shipment, arrived on November 2 1850, and were at once sent off to the gold field

The most famous of the French emigratio companies was the "Societe du Lingot d'Or. This organization was peculiar in that, in ord to attract members, it had formed a lottery, th grand prize of which was a golden ingot, whi other prizes included passages to California. first drawing in this lottery was held in Pari November 16, 1851, and on their arrival in Sa Francisco, the emigrants sent by the society we supplied with money through the French cons and also with clothing and equipment if th chose to go on to the mines. Many did so choo but many also elected to remain in San Fra cisco, especially those who came in later shi ments, when the society decided to abandon the there and discontinued supplying them wi money and outfits. The French who were se by the society of the Golden Ingot were, if n the most turbulent, at least the most distinctiv of the French emigrants to California—so diffe ent, indeed, from their fellow-emigrants, th they were commonly known in the mines ar towns as "lingots." By 1853 over three tho sand of them are said to have arrived. Most them were penniless, or nearly so, and there probably good reason for asserting that fro these malcontents and unfortunates were r cruited most of the later French expeditions in Sonora.

A great many French of course came to Ca fornia on their own initiative and at their ow expense, and they were soon, as a whole, of su ficient number to make themselves noticeable the social mixture of those times. By the midd of the year 1851 their number was estimated some twenty thousand, scattered mostly throu the northern and central portions of the Stat especially in and around San Francisco, in t gold fields, and in the Santa Clara Valley.

The prevalent anti-foreign sentiment of t goldrush days, however, was to prove an impe ment to the French of California, although affected them considerably less than it affect the other outlanders. This was particularly tr before the admission of the State to the Unio In 1849, on his way to California to take up h duties as commander of the Pacific military vision, General Persifer F. Smith learned th

NOTE—Expressions of opinion in these "Growls" are, unless indicated otherwise, those of the Managing Editor.
CLARENCE M. HUNT.

THE CALIFORNIA STATE LEGISLATURE meets at Sacramento early in January, and the taxpayers should keep in close touch with its doings. The state government is in a deplorable financial condition, its operative cost having mounted stupendously. The question is, will the Legislature reduce the cost of government, and thereby reduce taxes?

Every government official and every legislator knows, or should know, that high taxes are not only retarding recovery in California but are actually wrecking the state by forcing the small-home owner, the backbone of the commonwealth, to surrender his holdings. Yet, since the November election, all efforts of officials and legislators have been devoted to finding new sources of tax revenue—which means more and higher taxes.

The cost of government must be reduced, and taxes lowered, and the reduction will be brought about if the legislators have the "guts" to heed not the pleadings of the political-racketeers machine and those seeking special favors and privileges. Taxes can be reduced materially by curtailing government functions, cutting high-bracket government payrolls, eliminating useless and duplicating boards and commissions, refinancing obligations imposed in prosperity days, eliminating waste and inefficiency, and in numerous other ways.

The big cry is, that most of the outrageously high cost of government is "fixed charges," and that they cannot be changed except by vote of the people. That's "boloney!" The last Legislature passed emergency legislation setting aside various laws. One act, for instance, permitted building and loan associations to violate their contracts—and also the Constitution—guaranteeing a specified rate of interest on investments. Perhaps the lawmakers and officials do not know it, but that emergency still exists, and because it does exist, the legislators can, if they so choose, pass emergency legislation eliminating "fixed charges." Of course, the building and loan emergency legislation affected, mostly, the common people, whereas "fixed charges" emergency legislation would affect, largely, the politicians. Many new lawmakers will be in the Legislature, so there is hope that they will provide a new deal from which the masses, and California, will benefit.

On a recent visit to San Pedro, Pedro Guevara, Philippines resident commissioner at Washington, D. C., expressed the fear that Philippine independence will result in the islands' assimilation by Japan. Said he: "Japan withdrew from the League of Nations and now in the province of Davao she has established the entering wedge of a plan to assimilate the Philippines. In Davao province alone there are 13,000 Japanese, out of a total of 15,000 in the Philippines. We are convinced that this concentration is part of a carefully laid plan. The Philippines will soon become the 'Polish corridor' of the Far East, unless the United States takes a definite stand on Japan's persistent economic inroads. We feel that our fate rests on the outcome of the approaching naval limitations conference, so delicate and dangerous is the Japanese problem."

Apparently Japan is following the identical course—peaceful invasion—in the Philippines as in California and the other Pacific Coast states and the Hawaiian Islands.

Addressing a crime conference in Washington, D. C., President Franklin D. Roosevelt said: "We have come to a time when our need to discover more fully and to direct more purposefully into useful channels that greatest of all natural resources, the genius of the younger generation. Crime is a symptom of social disorder. Widespread increase in capacity to substitute order for disorder is the remedy."

The President asked that law-enforcement agencies be backed by "every man, every woman and every adolescent child in every State of the United States and in every county of every State."

Our wish for 1935 is expressed in these famous lines of Josiah Gilbert Holland:

"God give us men. The time demands
Strong minds, great hearts, true faith and willing hands;
Men whom the lust of office does not kill;
Men whom the spoils of office cannot buy;
Men who possess opinions and a will;
Men who have honor; men who will not lie;
Men who can stand before a demagog
And dam his treacherous flatteries without winking;
Tall men, sun-crowned, who live above the fog
In public duty, and in private thinking."

"Ring out the old, ring in the new,
Ring, happy bells, across the snow:
The year is going, let him go;
Ring out the false, ring in the true."
—Alfred Tennyson.

Japan has given notice of its termination of the Washington Naval Treaty. Does the day of reckoning draw nigh? Is the withdrawal linked with the "grave consequences" referred to by Japan's ambassador when the Federal Congress passed the Immigration Law with the ineligible-to-citizenship exclusion provision?

From San Francisco come the report that the Japs are flooding the public schools with propaganda designed to convince that Japan is entitled to naval parity. And that is not the only propaganda the whites and the yellow Japs are spreading.

What Japan really wants, and will go to any extreme to get, is racial equality. All its acts are but preliminary to that final demand.

The statement has often been made in these "Growls" that government in Los Angeles County and City is offensively rotten with corruption, and in the past few months an abundance of evidence has come to public attention to substantiate that statement. In addition:

A Los Angeles County official, in a semi-public address, said that $12,500,000 of public funds have been wasted or stolen in the construction of San Gabriel dam; that there are 500,000 people in the county depending on public funds for existence and that, regardless of that fact, $366,000 of public funds are being annually given to promotion organizations to bring in more people.

Again we ask, how much longer will the taxpayers stand for such mis-government? Certainly there will be no improvement until they revolt, forcibly.

Happy to say, the Catholic campaign for decency in motion pictures is making fine progress. The product reflects the character of the producer. Clean the morally-rotten males and females out of that industry and the pictures will be decent.

Addressing the Commonwealth Club of San Francisco, Syud Hossian said: "The malady of the world is not merely economic, not merely political, but also and very principally it is spiritual. Any attempts at solution, if history is any witness, are foredoomed to failure unless we deliberately refrain from a secondary or partial solution and face the problem in its totality. . . .

"We have all the resources—material, mechanical, technical, and intellectual—to create a heaven on earth, but intellectually and spiritually some of us are still in the nineteenth century and some in the middle ages. A new world is impending, the old world is in process of death. Our job is to make the transition easy, natural, and peaceful."

"Satan finds some mischief still for idle hands to do." The overabundance of idleness unquestionably accounts for the overabundance of wrongdoing. Employment for some 11,000,000 jobless is, indeed, the United States' most urgent problem.

"If powerful influence could be directed toward the adoption of a 'Golden Rule Day' in which every medium of propaganda could be directed toward bringing before the entire nation the rule, what it is and what it can do in a practical way toward smoothing our national unrest in all of its forms, the benefit would be beyond measure for every soul. Consideration for adoption of this movement for a 'Golden Rule Day,' nationally, is earnestly urged. It is practical idealism at its best."—George R. Burglehaus in The New Age.

Another of the "beautiful" depression years has gone into history, and prosperity is still "just around the corner." During 1934, many additional businesses and individuals, victims of the depression through no fault of their own, folded up.

What has 1935 in store? There is a more hopeful feeling, based on reports from large manufacturing centers, of improving conditions, and the Associated Press says "Skies are brighter in all business lines."

Every person conversant with conditions knows that the depression which has taken such a stupendous toll in this country is but the result of the enthronement of dishonesty—racketeering—in and out of government. And every person knows, too, that while millions have been spent in investigating racketeers, against many of whom a preponderance of evidence has accumulated, the guilty have not been punished. In fact, there is abundant evidence that the racketeer-gang are gradually worming their way back into government and public favor.

This is certain: there can be no return of a stable and a lasting prosperity to this country of plenty until Honesty is enthroned in govern-

MOTHER WINTER

(EUNICE MITCHELL LEHMER.)

Beside the fire sat Winter and her child
The Spring;
And as she fanned the fragrant branches piled,
To bring
Again the sunshine of the summer days,
The smoke rose pale as aspens from the snow,
Like flaming scarlet tulips shone the glow
And ashes frail as apple-bloom lay round the blaze.

Her eyes of grey were turned on Springtime's face:
"My dear,
You will be going soon; your feet must trace
The year.
If suns are pitiless and winds are wild,
And seem to threaten, face them unafraid;
Though you are over-young, still undismayed,
Keep through it all an uncomplaining heart, my child."

But eager Spring stood looking down the year,
Her lip
A-smile; her foot impatient. What of fear
Could slip
Into her heart a-tiptoe for the way?
So with a kiss she took the path untried,
And watching, Mother Winter smiled and sighed,
And sighing, smiling, bent to stir the ashes grey.

CALIFORNIA FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

NEW YEAR DAY 1885 CAME ON A Thursday. In California, showers greeted its advent, and dampened the ardor of the noisy celebrants. Many prominent dames received calls from male friends, but an increasing number did not serve eggnog or cocktails, and received approving notice in the press as well as commendation from the pulpits. No casualties marred the day.

During January there were but eight showery days. A rainfall of 2.16 inches was recorded, which brought the season's total to 15.15 inches. The weather condition was welcomed by the farmers who, through drying weather, were now enabled to plow and seed many acres of land that were too wet to sooner cultivate.

The twenty-sixth biennial session of the California State Legislature met at Sacramento January 2. The Assembly, having a large Republican majority, was quickly organized by the selection of Wm. H. Parks of Yuba County as speaker, and Frank D. Ryan of Sacramento City as chief clerk. In the Senate, were twenty Democrats and twenty Republicans, so there was a deadlock for twelve days, nearly two hundred ballots being taken. Finally several Republicans voted for a Democrat, Senator Knight, and he was elected president protem.

This Legislature had the duty of electing a United States Senator, and several Republican party warhorses were seeking the honor. The Republicans had a caucus January 20 and all the aspirants had a following, but none large enough to elect. Just before the second ballot a new candidate, ex-Governor Leland Stanford, was nominated, and with a whoop the caucus selected him. January 29, he was formally elected by the Legislature, receiving seventy-nine votes. George Hearst, his Democratic opponent, received thirty-seven votes.

The selection of Stanford was the greatest political surprise the citizenry of this state had ever received. The potency of the Southern Pacific in California politics was now an undisputed fact.

It was reported that 2,500 pounds of silk had been produced in California in 1884. That this industry would give employment to a thousand families in the near-future was predicted.

California oranges were a glut on the market. They were being sold in the cities for ten cents a dozen.

A market was found for California apples in Australia, over 10,000 boxes being shipped there this month.

Wine grapes in the state now covered 65,779 acres, and table grapes 10,506 acres. A rapid acreage increase was in sight, too.

Santa Barbara had such an influx of Easterners, who had come to spend the winter in its delightful climate, it was unable to furnish them accommodations.

The United States Mint at San Francisco this month coined 94,000 twenty-dollar and 230,000 five-dollar gold pieces, 100,000 silver dollars and 54,496 dimes.

At the Oak Grove schoolhouse in Shasta County the teacher undertook to chastise a lad, and the whole school—girls and boys—went for him with benches, chairs and books, and knocked him out.

Fred Tuck, full of pluck and having good luck, struck a rich vein of ore near Shingle Springs, El Dorado County, and about $200,000 worth of gold was extracted from it.

A San Francisco schoolteacher refused to admit a 10-year-old Chinese girl as a student, and suit was brought by her parents to compel admittance. Judge Maguire decided that, under the United States Constitution and the laws of California, the girl and any other Chinese children applying should be admitted. The census listed 1,252 Chinese children of school age in San Francisco, and that city's Board of Education was viewing the situation with alarm.

Hickok and Company's flour mill in Oakland, Alameda County, a five-story building, burned January 1; loss, $50,000. M. J. Merry's machine shop at Chico, Butte County, burned January 30; loss, $25,000.

The Golden State coffeemill in San Francisco burned January 10; loss, $20,000. Kerr's carriage factory and several other buildings burned in San Francisco January 29; loss, $150,000.

B. Kozminsky, a cigar merchant in Sacramento City since 1850, died there January 2.

George G. Briggs, pioneer fruit tree grower who planted an orchard in 1851, died at Davisville, Yolo County, January 1, aged 61. He established in Fresno County the town of Malaga and made it the center of the raisin industry.

Superintendent George Nail of the Mount Pleasant mine attempted to ford the Cosumnes River at Buck's Bar, January 1, and, along with his team, was drowned.

A coaloil lamp exploded January 2 in the San Francisco home of John Wieland. He and a child were fatally burned.

Four-year-old Archie Bagwell fell into a vat of boiling water on a ranch near Sacramento City, January 3, and was fatally scalded.

Wright LeRoy, who murdered a capitalist named Sherrit in San Francisco in 1883, was hanged in the city jail there January 16.

John J. McLaughlin was a clerk in the San Francisco law office of G. W. Tyler, attorney for Miss Sarah Althea Hill, suing Wm. Sharon for divorce on a marriage contract. He sold to Sharon's attorney for $25,000 a purloined contract claimed to have important bearing on the case. The contract proved to be bogus, but McLaughlin had levanted.

A man wearing a prospector's garb called on Abe Stein, a Sacramento City merchant, and offered for sale a sack of gold dust for $12 an ounce. Stein offered him less, and they finally compromised on $9 an ounce. But the miner had to consult his partner at a nearby hotel before making the sale. Stein took a pinch of the dust before returning the sack to the miner, who now departed to consult with his partner, and hied to a neighboring jeweler, who made a test of the sample, and pronounced it the real stuff. When the prospector returned and accepted Stein's offer he was paid for 16 ounces of gold dust and departed with the "wad." Stein, figuring his prospective profits, took the sack to a jeweler's to get them, but found the sack contained only iron filings gilded with gold leaf. The prospector had evidently, when absent, changed sacks.

A WORTHWHILE NON-SECTARIAN ENDEAVOR SPONSORED AND SUPPORTED BY THE ORDERS OF NATIVE SONS AND NATIVE DAUGHTERS OF THE GOLDEN WEST

HAPPY NEW YEAR! THE SALUTAtion slips very glibly off one's tongue, doesn't it? whether the wish be fraught with meaning or uttered merely as a greeting for the day. Behind us are another three hundred and sixty-five days which have been filled alternately with questioning and faith, rebellion and theorizing on the part of the majority of America's citizens, and looked upon by them as an epoch in the country's development. The gamut of emotions has been run, joy and suffering, want and plenty, friendliness and indifference, selfishness and greed, and always the comparisons with yesteryears and the consciousness that the new order of things never will be the same as the old.

The New Year, with its disappointments, poverty, insecurity, is heralded, nevertheless, as another chance to come nearer to sane, courageous, christian-like ideals; nearer to the observance of the Golden Rule and to the conviction that we ARE "Our brother's keeper."

Perhaps the age-old simplicity of these deductions is most apparent to those who are intent upon the planning for the futures of children. The number of men and women conscious of the seriousness of taking on new responsibility is constantly increasing. They discuss their doubts and fears; they question their wisdom and ability to rear an adopted child in a way that will qualify him spiritually, mentally and physically to face the changing world. They understand that there will be greater time for leisure in future years. They realize that the industrial system will probably not be able to employ the youth of high school age, and that this leisure time must be filled with things worthwhile. The uses to which youth will put this spare time of his will depend largely upon the depth of the parents' sincerity and encouragement in its direction and upon the child's training from babyhood.

With this complexity of living facing the foster-parents of today one wonders that so many hundreds of them still have the courage to take upon themselves the rearing of a child. This facing of the future does not always seem to have the same importance in the minds of some own fathers and mothers. They accept their offspring as part of themselves, who will be all right after going through a few of the various "phases" of development. The parents cannot be bothered with crossing the bridge until they come to it, and "Anyway, maybe there ain't going to be no bridge" of temptation, wrong influences, uncurbed tempers, lack of thoughtfulness and truthfulness. They intend to teach their children to be truthful and honest and, if mother, for one reason or another, tells her child to say that she is not at home to the visitor at the door, and if father escapes railroad fare for his six-and-a-half-year-old boy by telling the conductor of the train that his son's age is five years, it never enters their minds that their little human sponges have absorbed the inconsistencies in their preaching and look upon what they do as "okeh" because father does it.

Whether it is due to the perspective which foster-parents are able to get of a child not born to them, or whether the years of longing and the time of waiting for a child make the foster-parents realize that they have clay to mould, no one can say, but certainly the stream of well-behaved, spontaneously considerate little ones of all ages who come in and go out of the office door of the Native Sons and Native Daughters child-placing society leads the ever-critical observers to believe that beyond question the adopted child is being given a rare opportunity to make good.

These demonstrations of properly reared children in the communities scattered throughout California serve as an incentive, to the Native Sons and Native Daughters, and explain the enthusiasm of the members who, regardless of their own needs and problems and necessary sacrifices, are determined to carry on!

The contributions from April 1, 1934 to December 4, 1934: Native Son Parlors, $247.38; Native Sons personal, $1.68; Native Daughter Parlors, $638.63; Native Daughters personal $32.50; milk fund, Native Daughters, $481.10; joint contributions, $739.38; Alameda County $159.15; San Francisco joint, $25; Los Angeles joint, $508; friends, $41.50; refund on board $1,614.14; bequest, $200; interest and dividends, $493.23; refund expenses, $41.41, making a total from the two Orders of $2,832.62 and from other contributions $2,390.38, a grand total of $5,223. "Fling away ambition: by that sin fell the angels; how can man then, the image of his Maker, hope to win by it? Love thyself last: cherish those hearts that hate thee; corruption wins not more than honesty. Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace, to silence envious tongues. Be just, and fear not: let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's, thy God's, and truth's . . . ."—Shakespeare.

EPIC OF A PIONEER WOMAN AND THREE NATIVE DAUGHTERS

IT MUST HAVE BEEN A LOVELY DAY IN the spring of 1824 or 1825 because all romance has its beginning in the spring when Keziah Brown of Illinois rode with Jesse D. Hunter to the next township in Kentucky, and were made man and wife. They settled down, and founded a home and family, in a log cabin. Jesse D. Hunter was a schoolteacher, and set out teaching, and Keziah, housekeeping and furnishing pupils for the school. They attended strictly to their own business, and when next heard from there were six young Hunters.

In 1846, the father, Jesse D. Hunter, started West, accompanied by his eldest son, William, to help the United States in the Mexican War. He was with the Mormon Batallion, captain of Company B. Captain Hunter later was made Indian agent at San Luis Rey, and in 1849 joined the gold rush to Sacramento, where he met his family.

A short time later, Keziah and her family started West with her eighteen-year-old son Ace, known as Dick. They joined a two-hundred-wagon train, accompanied by scouts. Each family had their own supplies and possesssions in a prairie schooner drawn by oxen. The scouts furnished the members of the train with buffalo and antelope meat. They were fortunate in not being molested by the Indians; this was due to the large size of the train. They journeyed westward slowly, and spent their first winter in Council Bluffs, Iowa. Then on again, and their next long stop was in Salt Lake City, where they remained sufficiently long to plant and harvest a crop of corn. This was to supply meal for future foodstuffs for the remainder of the long journey to California.

Here, despair was almost upon them, for the grasshoppers came in clouds and the members of the train were almost beside themselves with worry. Then flocks of seagulls arrived, and the emigrants first thought they, too, meant to finish the remaining crops, but the gulls settled down in the fields, gorged themselves with grasshoppers, and then returned to the lake whence they came. Thus, some of the crop was saved. Here, Keziah, tired with the trials and anxieties of the trip, wished to turn back, but her son, Dick, urged her to continue, telling her of the nearness of their goal, and that soon they would join the father and the elder brother. She consented, but on condition that she be allowed sufficient time to finish a certain number of pairs of socks. Dick put that objection off with, "The socks might just as well be knitted while enroute."

Of the intimate daily detail of the trip, little is on record, for the sole survivor of that historic journey is Samuel Hunter, now ninety-two years of age. He was, at the time, five years of age. When asked about the trip, he stated all he could recall was that they had a "fine time," with "stories, music and singing, and plenty to eat." He naturally could not comprehend the fears, fatigue and anxiety which beset the older members of the party. His imagination could not conceive the fears of sickness, shortage of food and water for such a number of people and stock, bad weather, wild animals and, last but not least, hostile Indians. All of this to be borne by a little woman, but slightly over a hundred pounds, and an eighteen-year-old boy to depend on.

However, when they did start to "move on," it was not so easy, for the influential men of Salt Lake City wanted to keep as many families in their part of the country as possible. Many were the discussions, and the arguments waxed warm, and Keziah Hunter waxed warmer until she threatened to use her iron skillet on them. The cause of the argument was a lovely daughter, Mary, the late Mrs. Joseph Burk. At last, Keziah won the argument and they were permitted to journey on.

The trip from Salt Lake City, Utah, to Sacramento, California, proved to be the hardest part of the entire journey, but throughout they had music, singing and dancing, while the elders and the children knitted socks from buffalo wool, gathered from the brush, which they carded and spun into yarn.

At last, Sacramento was in sight. They arrived in July 1849. A long, two-year journey from Kentucky! In Sacramento, they were joined by the father, Jesse, and the son, William. There they founded a store. Later, we hear from them in San Bernardino where, in 1852, the youngest daughter, Elizabeth Denicia, was born the late Elizabeth Hunter Aerick, mother of Minnie Aerick Behm.

A few years later they arrived in the City of Los Angeles. Here Jesse Hunter abandoned teaching and merchandising for a living, and started a brick kiln and yard. The first jail in Los Angeles was built of brick from his kiln. An unfortunate accident, the overturning of a dumpcart of brick on Jesse Hunter, resulted in his partial invalidism; he used a crutch ever after.

They then moved to a home ranch that covered a large part of what is now Tropico and Glendale, the home being on what is now Riverside drive. The lovely setting for the home place was planted to orchards, vineyard and walnut trees. A beautiful paradise of trees and space, where many grandchildren visited and recall today with "idealistic memories." The family embarked on raising cattle and horses, with the grazing grounds in the territory around Elizabeth Lake. The family traveled back and forth the long distance during rodeos and branding time.

One fine day, a young man called to buy some horses. It must have been spring again, for Elizabeth Denicia soon became interested in the young buyer, Johnny Aerick. To intrigue romance, the purchased horses would return when they found a breach in the fences. Of course, the young man would then have to come and drive them back to their new home. Well, the sequel was, that soon the young man claimed the young girl, and in January 1870 she rode away to start her new home, located on the Rancho de Cienga, a Sanchez land grant. This was later ceded to the original owners, and the young people founded a new home, a one-hundred-and-twenty-acre ranch adjoining the Joughin, Dryden and Lucky Baldwin ranches, now bounded by Arlington and Vernon avenues. By this time, there were several little Aericks, the eldest daughter being Minnie, born in October 1870 in Los Angeles.

In August 1877, Jesse D. Hunter died, at the age of 71, leaving besides his wife, Keziah, four sons, William, Ace, Jesse and Sam, and three daughters, Mrs. Joseph Burk, Mrs. Eli Taylor Downey and Mrs. John Eerick. Keziah spent the next eleven years in the old home place, having as a companion her son's, Dick's, eldest daughter, Emily, Mrs. Joseph Snyder. An interesting note of Mrs. Hunter's home was that she never burned any light other than candles during her entire lifetime. She had candle molds with which she made her own candles until later years, when she purchased them by the hundreds. She had her own carding comb, which she used to card wool before it was spun into yarn.

Among her many friends was the father of Jim Jeffries. He lived across the river and was a minister of the Gospel. Mr. Hunter liked to argue religion with Minister Jeffries, the passing many a pleasant hour. Her home was a gathering place for many grandchildren, for "Gran" was a jolly good fellow to all, and nothing gave the compiler greater pleasure than to spend a week with her and in her home during a vacation.

There were eight children born to Elizabeth Hunter Aerick, a happy and a united family. One day again, a horse dashed into the Aerick ranchyard, pursued by a curly headed young man recently arrived from the State of Michigan. Well, that horse returned several times and then wasn't needed any more for an excuse. May 31, 1888, Minnie Aerick became Mrs. William Behm. They made their home near Thirty-fifth and Normandie streets, Los Angeles.

January 12, 1889, Keziah Hunter passed away, at the age of 74, and was laid to rest in the old Los Angeles City Cemetery in Fort street. A woman whose life had known many hardships but one who "could always smile." When the old cemetery was abandoned, the remains of Jesse and Keziah Hunter were moved to Rosedale Cemetery.

March 27, 1889, Florence Mathilde Behm first saw the light of day. Later, two more little Behms made their appearance. July 15, 1912, the family moved to Hollywood, where they have resided ever since twenty-two years in their present home. April 1895, John Aerick was laid to rest in Rosedale Cemetery, aged 53. A wonderful father and a good neighbor, whose rule of life was "Do unto others as you would others do unto you." His widow, Elizabeth Hunter Aerick, then built her home in Eleventh avenue near Slauson avenue, Los Angeles, not far from her home ranch. January 11, 1914, she too passed through the door to her loved ones, at the age of 62.

November 27, 1912, Leiland Atherton Irish, a native son, "came a'courting." Not on a fiery steed, but in a snorting, backfiring automobile. Florence Mathilde Behm became Mrs. Leiland Atherton Irish. The third Native Daughter of this Pioneer Woman from Kentucky, Keziah Hunter, possessed much of the spirit of her great-grandmother. She identified herself with civic, cultural and club activities. After living in Hollywood fourteen years, Mr. and Mrs. Irish moved to the seashore, where the latchstring is always out at the beach cottage for their many friends, and where Mrs. Irish has as kindly a smile for everyone as had her great-grandmother, Keziah Hunter.

This little story is of four women, one a Pioneer whose courage and strength of character helped in building the foundation for the glorious golden State of California. The others are women whose lives were made bright and comfortable by the contributions of the preceding generation; all pay tribute to our dear Pioneer Mother and are proud to call ourselves "Native Daughters of the Golden West," descendants of a real history maker.

Women discussed in this little narrative: Mrs. Jesse D. Hunter (Keziah Brown), born in Illinois, traveled via covered wagon from Kentucky to Sacramento, California, 1847-49; Mrs. John E. Aerick (Elizabeth Denicia Hunter), born San Bernardino, March 31, 1852; Mrs. William Behm (Minnie Aerick), born Los Angeles, October 24, 1870; Mrs. Leiland Atherton Irish (Florence Behm), born Los Angeles, March 27, 1889.

(This very interesting history narrative was compiled by Mrs. Minnie Aerick Behm of Los Angeles, a member of Californiana Parlor No. 247 N.D.G.W., February 25, 1934.—Editor.)

TO THE STATUE OF A HORSE

(On the Stanford University Grounds.)

(BETTY L. WHITSELL.)

The Palo Alto farm
Was known for miles around
For here was bred
The finest horses in the west.
Their fame was spread
And Leland Stanford raised
World champions on his farm
Swift ones to see
Mayflower, Sunol, Sontag, Elaine,
Rare pedigree.

He had his own race track
And there in seventy-nine
He made a test
And photographed them as they ran.
Now manifest
This was the first of all
The moving pictures made
And quite complete
There stands a monument to mark
This splendid feat.

Bronze statue of a horse
Is on the Stanford grounds
To you and me
It speaks of love the horse once had
And constancy.
Ah, fifty years ago
Men knew the joy of life
And not mad speed
The charm of home and friend and horse
Was God's own creed.

"To strive with difficulties and to conquer them is the highest human felicity. The next is to strive and deserve to conquer. But he whose life has passed without a contest, and who can boast neither success nor merit, can survey himself only as a useless filler of existence."—Dr. Johnson.

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER

FRILLY BOUCLES IN PASTEL TINTS are being taken up in a big way by the gay young girls about town, who like something gay and festive to wear under a coat. Knitted frocks for cocktail parties are the newest wrinkle. To wear a pink or a sky-blue woolen or knitted frock under the coat gives an air of being impervious to season, as if one already had caught up with spring. There is a practical aspect to the idea, too, but the boucle contingent has been highly prominent at smart parties of late. These frocks are in hand-knit effect, usually in coarse, lacy weaves, and are trimmed with frills at the neckline and cuff or with the new crystal ornament. Usually these suits are two-piece, with round, youthful necklines, and have a tailored air in spite of the frills.

Linen yarn is one of the pets of the fashion-wise, being particularly effective in natural color. Little tailored collars are much used with ties of self material. Colors range from turquoise, peacock, baby blue, lettuce green, amethyst and gold to coral, cameo pink and melisande, a delicate beige.

The two-piece dress is a grand junior-miss fashion. Be sure to have some velvet or velveteen in your wardrobe. Plaid wool and velveteen make a noteworthy idea in contrast. Buttons down the front give the tunic an added claim to fame.

This is a year when you must have a tunic. It may be wrist, knee or calf length. It may be a part of the dress or worn with an evening skirt. If you buy a quality fabric, you go a long way towards assuring the success and satisfaction of your dress. It is worth the extra money. For the smart tunic, select any of the latest materials, such as lyons velvet, metallic crepe, lame, metallic taffeta or matelasse.

The narrow empire silhouette, with its flattering shoulders and high waist, is important. It is not for everyone, but if you have good shoulders, a slim waist and well-shaped bust you could not find anything more flattering. One sees dolman sleeves with square-cut armholes on the best-dressed women.

Moire is a fabric to keep an eye on, for it is gaining in popularity every day. It looks remarkably new and smart, and has a crisp, young quality. Slipper satin is used for picturesque dresses, and supple shiny satin for streamline dresses. Few fabrics have the richness and practicality of satin.

The silhouette that looks slim and sophisticated is made straight as a string, with a skirt narrow to the floor and slit at the ankles. The budding figure looks its very best in the rather prim silhouette, and the fullness of the long skirt makes it easy to move about without any upsets. The modest bodice is a great help to a youngster who can not wear "decollete" yet.

The delightful swish of taffeta and the glamour of low neck and bare arms, is just as satisfactory as ever when the dancing class gives its parties. The young girl who has wrangled a brand new, nearly evening frock from a sentimental family should not beg for accessories. Those are for their elders. Corsages, earrings, flashy wraps come a little later in life. Low-heeled sandals match one's frock, as do a lacy or a chiffon handkerchief and sheer flesh-colored stockings. Perchance a rose or two is pinned into the sash or over the shoulder.

Bridge parties, teas and luncheon dates are coming fast and furiously upon us, now that the winter season is really here. What woman's wardrobe has not a weak spot, which could be well filled by an afternoon frock, youthfully styled, and just as suitable for the young matron as for the business or college girl. It should have a prettily molded bodice and a paneled skirt. Its raglan sleeves end in important tabbed and buttoned cuffs, and its very chic scarf collar slips through tabs to tie into a soft bow for a bit of flattery about the neck.

For the sophisticated woman past the debutante age, there is an evening gown of chartreuse satin. It is quite decollete and the low "V" neck in front is held with a gold and rhinestone clip. With it goes a short jacket that ties at the waist. It has long sleeves and wide revers.

The three-piece suit is fitted closely to the figure in blouse and skirt. The sides of the coat are tentatively closed with green frogs. The sleeves are full and puffed to the elbow, where the flow is broken, and are fitted closely in a deep cuff effect to the wrist. A cross-throat rever is caught at the shoulder with a clip of beaten silver that provides the only accent to the costume. The collar is made of frosted woodland green crepe, but the dress material is wool, which invites perfect harmony with the tingling crispy days of the early winter. The hand bag is of brown suede fabric, and the hat is of woodland crepe in peaked beret style.

White hats, you know, are fast becoming very smart, to be worn with black for afternoon, cocktails or dinner. One of chamois is tied all over in little knobs and then stretched and trimmed with white pleating at the front.

This time of the year, sweaters become the universal favorite. Maybe it is because the gay colors and warm yarns seem to typify the gayety of the season. This season the array is more dazzling than ever. In the first place, there are the new metal-shot sweaters, which glisten. They are safe bets for anybody under the age of eighty, and they come in sober colors as well as giddy ones. A black lacey weave, shot with silver or gold, makes a welcome addition to any wardrobe.

Styles usually go in for tied necklines and trim ribbed waists. Short or long sleeves may be found at will. Then, there are the twin sweater sets. The best come in a soft angora-like finish and in deep pastel tones. The tailored slipon sweaters are short sleeved, with round or turn-over collar necklines. The cardigans are waist length, long sleeved and well tailored. Separate slipons of novelty weaves in every imaginable color and yarn are all over the place. Bright green is one of the favorite colors just now, with bright red a runner up.

OLD GUARD

(R. MATTESON.)

From Goose Lake to Calexico,
From Oregon to Mexico
There reigns a grizzle bear,
Upon a golden mountain peak,
Somewhere in Winter's empire bleak.
He has a hidden lair.

One day you saw a darker mist
Among your trees. Your dog barked. Hist!
The grizzly passed you by.
And evenings, on the lonely hill
Where sings the mournful whippoorwill,
You hear the old bear sigh.

But no one ever tracked him home,
Or ever found the golden dome,
Whence all our rich streams course.
In every age from every land,
Men sunk their shafts, or gold was panned;
But no one found the source.

And if you camp beneath the trees,
And talk of other times than these,
Of times before our ken;
Before the caballero's day,
Or headed Indian's dancing play,
Who hunted for it then?

'Tis profitless to ask the bear,
Though toward your fire his old eyes glare,
The ghostly grizzly gray.
He will not answer what you ask.
He surely declines the task.
He growls, and will not say.

"There is today a more urgent call for men and women of character, honesty and ability than ever before. The political and economic world today is crying aloud for leaders of culture, worth, probity and honor."—Frank Gillespie.

LOS ANGELES CITY AND COUNTY

AT A LARGELY ATTENDED MEETING OF The California State Historical Association December 18, a four-fold plan for preserving California history and landmarks was proposed and discussed. It includes: location and reservation of landmarks; preservation of historical places and names; teaching of California history correctly; classification of anniversaries and collection of historical facts on which anniversaries are based.

Vice-president Paul G. Sweetser presided, and among the speakers were Dr. F. W. Hodge, President Albert V. Mayrhofer, Mrs. Winifred Davidson and Dr. William Ellison. A discussion rose as to whether the first orange tree in California was planted in Butte or Riverside County, and Dr. Owen C. Coy, director of the association, was delegated to ascertain the facts.

During the meeting a very valuable reference booklet, giving a partial list of organizations in the state interested in California history, was distributed. It was compiled by the Association, under the supervision of Dr. Coy.

HOLY LAND EXHIBIT.

"The Holy Land Two Thousand Years Ago at the Time of the Birth of Christ," a beautiful panorama featuring the nativity scene designed by Nino Ghio, was displayed during the holiday season at the Coliseum peristyle. The exhibit was sponsored by the Native Daughters and Native Sons, with a view to raising funds for their homeless children work. Miss Grace Stoermer, Past Grand President N.D.G.W., was the general chairman.

ELEVEN INITIATED AT DISTRICT MEET.

Santa Monica—There was a large gathering of members from all the southland Parlors at the fifth group initiation of District No. 1, December 5, when Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 367 N.S.G.W. was the host. Arrowhead Parlor No. 110 (San Bernardino) had, as usual, a big crowd of "boosters" on hand, and Santa Barbara Parlor No. 116 was well represented. A fine supper preceded the meeting.

Eleven candidates were initiated—six for Arrowhead, and one each for Los Angeles Parlor No. 45, Santa Barbara, Sepulveda Parlor No. 263, Santa Monica Bay and Compton No. 273. The ritual was exemplified by the officers of No. 267, assisted by Grand Secretary John T. Regan as president and Roger Johnson (Los Angeles) as organist. District Deputy Walter Richards conducted the meeting, and other deputies in attendance were Bernard Hiss, Walter Hiskey, A. C. Dinsmore, Daniel McSweeney and F. L. McGarvey.

Police Chief James Davis of Los Angeles spoke on "Communism," detailing some of the activities of its followers; Grand President Chas. A. Koenig praised the district deputies for their good work and reported membership in the Order was increasing, and Past Grand William I. Traeger made a forceful appeal to every member to participate actively in the Order's affairs. Other speakers were Grand Secretary Regan, Grand Third Vice-president Eldred L. Meyer, Grand Trustee Donald E. VanLuven, Grand Marshal William A. Reuter, Past Grand John T. Newell, Sheriff Eugene Biscailuz and "Bob" Brazelton. Entertainment features were presented during the evening, and at midnight refreshments were served.

Santa Monica Bay Parlor will have its annual lobster feed—an event always looked forward to by all Native Sons—Wednesday, January 16. Dr. R. C. Eshelman will, as president, head the Parlor's new corps of officers.

EIGHTH ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATED.

Glendale—Verdugo Parlor No. 240 N.D.G.W. elected officers December 11 and selected Ione Gillett for president. Public installation will be held January 29. The Parlor's eighth institution anniversary was also celebrated, Myrtle Tregea and Etta Fulkerth being in charge. Deputy Ernestine Aylward was a guest. The refreshments tables were decorated with poinsettias, crimson berries and red tapers.

A Christmas party for members' children was held December 21, with President Margaret Donlan and Vera Carlson in charge. Moving pictures were shown by Harvey Gillett, and Fred Donlan impersonated Santa Claus. The Parlor gave a Christmas basket to its adopted veteran at San Fernando Hospital.

MANY CHILDREN MADE HAPPY.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. had a most pleasant Christmas party December 21. At this annual affair the Parlor has as its guests the children of members and their friends, as well as some fifty children selected by the City Welfare Department. A very interesting program was given, mainly by the members' children, and Owen Adams read "The Night Before Christmas." Santa Claus distributed toys, candy and nuts to the children, and light refreshments were served the adults.

The committee in charge of the affair, which was enjoyed by about eighty children, as well as a large number of adults, included Owen Adams (general chairman), Roger Johnson, J. F. Meehan, Ben Gurewitz, Harry Davis, Walter Smith and Howard Bentley. The Parlor has re-elected its officers, Michael Botello retaining the presidency.

PATRIOTIC LUNCHEON, ELYSIAN PARK.

Californiana Parlor No. 247 N.D.G.W. had a very successful bazar December 11 for the benefit of the homeless children; Mrs. Lelie Taber was in charge. Much fun was occasioned by the grabbag, in charge of Mrs. Minnie Behm, which yielded many valuable articles. The dessert sewing club had a table of fancy things, and contributed half of the proceeds to the cause. The birthdays of members born in December were honored at a noontime potluck luncheon. By acclamation, the entire staff of Parlor officers, with Mrs. Ruth B. Parris as president, were re-elected for the ensuing term.

Californiana will sponsor a patriotic luncheon and meeting at the city pistol range in Elysian Park, January 19. An americanization program

Native Daughters of the Golden West

MRS. LOUISE WATSON-MORRIS, PAST Grand President of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West, affiliated with Buena Vista Parlor No. 68, died at her San Francisco home November 22, survived by her husband, Harry Morris, and two sisters, Mrs. Genevieve Watson-Baker, Past Grand President, and Mrs. Georgie C. Ryan, Past Grand Secretary.

Mrs. Morris was the second Grand President of the Order, and presided at the San Francisco (1889) Grand Parlor. During her term the Grand Parlor Board of Relief was organized. She loved the Order and the great monument which has arisen therefrom, the Native Daughter Home. For nearly a quarter-century she was a teacher in San Francisco's public schools. Many of her pupils are today's representative men and women of that city and remember her for her extremely high principle and loving, kindly nature.

Burial services for deceased were conducted by the Grand Parlor officers. Past Grand President Dr. Mariana Bertola pronounced the following eulogy:

"Death has again stepped into the circle of Past Grand Presidents N.D.G.W. Mrs. Morris was one of the first charter members in 1887. She was a member of the San Francisco Board of Relief, and later became a member of the Grand Parlor Board of Relief. She was our second Grand President, and followed Grand President Tina Kane. I first met her in 1891, when Miss Wittenmyer became Grand President. These two women were such good friends!

"We are placed on this earth with a special purpose. Our common goal is the enrichment of life through better adjustment of human relations. Some of us are better fitted than others to thus enrich life. Louise Watson Morris was just such a rare soul. She always saw the brighter side, always trying to smooth out and level the rough places. Happy the home, happy the husband, the sisters and brothers, the nephews and nieces that had her influence among them. Happy the community that had her as a teacher for so many years. Happy the organization that had such a woman to build up its foundation, making each stone steadfast that others, taking up the work, might build securely, too.

"Her spiritual life was beautiful. There are few, indeed, who are thoroughly genuine and sincere. SHE was genuine and sincere. Sincere with her friends. Sincere with all with whom she came in contact. Living the spirit which came to her from on High; kindly, loving, always. Earnest in her religion, yet most tolerant. If ever a human loved God, she was that human. Loving God, meant doing His will to her fellows.

"We lay her body away, but angel wings flutter about as they accompany her spirit to her place, where the 'light of His face shall shine' upon her. The radiant spirit of God inspired her, and as we disperse and go to our homes, may that same radiance from Him come to each of you, to sweeten and bless with sincerity and love."

History Study Proves Interesting.

Etna—Eschscholtzia No. 112 had its annual Christmas ball, always an outstanding social event. The hall was decorated with fir boughs and Christmas garlands, and the committees, under the leadership of President Anita Tucker, made the affair a gala occasion. From the proceeds will be taken the Parlor's contribution to the homeless children fund. The meetings during 1934 were made more interesting by programs carrying out the suggestions of Past Grand Eliza D. Keith, Grand Parlor chairman of education. Clara Farr and Dorice Young had charge of this work.

Much that is romantic in the history of Siskiyou County was brought to light in the study of California history. As early as 1827 this part of the state was of interest to trappers, and in 1836 a group of men led by Stephen Meek, for long a resident trapper of this neighborhood, came into Scott Valley, in which Etna is situated, for the purpose of getting furs. Although these men remained only a month, they trapped 1,800 beavers! "This valley is the richest beaver ground I ever saw!", Meek reported. The skins were sent to London, to be used in making beaver hats. When the style passed, the fur business, except for lone trappers, came to an end. "The trapper came and went; the emigrant passed through, following the old trail from Oregon to San Francisco, but the country remained wild, almost unknown, until the magic word 'gold' brought thousands to this county. It was for the furs, however, that the land was first explored."

Eighteen Initiated.

Stockton—The official visit of Grand President Gladys E. Noce to Joaquin No. 5, November 27, was marked by a dinner in her honor and the initiation of a class of eighteen candidates at a largely attended meeting.

President Mary Ricker presided, and in addition to Mrs. Noce the guests included Past Grands Carrie R. Durham, Mamie G. Peyton and Pearl Lamb, Grand Trustee Clarice Cook, Deputy Ada Javete and Supervising Deputy Grace Bessac. Grand President Noce was presented with a hand-painted fruit dish.

Joint Meetings Beneficial.

San Diego—San Diego No. 208 entertained San Diego No. 108 N.S.G.W. November 28. Past presidents had charge of the program, which included several humorous skits, a soprano solo by Clara Muehleison and hawaiian dances by Martha Klindt. The younger members served refreshments. These joint meetings are doing much to stimulate co-operation between the two Parlors.

December 9, a bazar and food sale were held under the leadership of Marie James and committee. The sewing club worked faithfully for more than a year, with the bazar in view, and the sales were more than gratifying. The past presidents club had its December meeting at the home of Virginia Burke. President Irma Heilbron, absent from previous meetings on account of illness, was again in attendance. Plans were discussed for the annual party in January.

Old Adobe for New Home.

San Juan Bautista—San Juan Bautista No. 179 has completed negotiations for the purchase of a two-story historic adobe near Mission San Juan Bautista. Plans are being formulated for the raising of funds for the restoration of the building, reputed to be 125 years old, having been erected shortly after the completion of the mission. An honor roll will be kept and any individual or organization contributing to the fund will be honored by placement on this roll. The upper floor of the building will be used as meetinghall, and the lower rooms will be used for social gatherings. The Spanish atmosphere will be maintained throughout, and the building will be restored to its original state as nearly as possible.

This active group of Native Daughters is receiving deserved congratulations for their move in acquiring a meetingplace of their own and at the same time, preserving one of the worthwhile adobe buildings in the "Little City of History." Grand President Gladys E. Noce has approved of the circularizing of Subordinate Parlors for funds to carry on the work of restoration.—B.A.B.

The sewing club has completed a beautiful quilt, which will be disposed of.

December 20, the Parlor had its annual Christmas party. Dinner was served to members and their families, and the children provided a program. Gifts were distributed from a decorated tree. Among the invited guests were Supervising Deputy Mary Noerenberg and family. MIDWINTER

(NINA MAY.)

This is midwinter—as the seasons go—
Yet, here, between green hills and western shore,
No winter comes. The falling rain is mild
And mild the air that woos on leafless tree
The early bloom. The scent of spruce and wild
Wet earth comes drifting languorously
On breezes from the hills that never wore
The ermine nor the silences of snow.

But scented snow, great drifts, today, I found
White iris—in full bloom, beside a spring
From which the water flowed and sang around
The reedy ways, and singing left behind
A path of green, all lyrical with sound.
And by the singing water, here, I find
Drifts of iris bloom. Can lovelier thing
Arise, I ask, from out the sodden ground?

PROCLAMATION TO SAN DIEGO INSURGENTS

(THOMAS MAITLAND MARSHALL.)

UP TO THE PRESENT TIME OUR knowledge of the events connected with Commodore Stockton's occupation of San Diego in November, 1846, has been drawn from H. H. Bancroft, who based his information upon a letter of Stockton to George Bancroft of November 23, 1846, and upon Stockton's official report. Unfortunately Bancroft misdated the report, dating it on February 18, 1847, when, in fact, it was dated at Washington on February 18, 1848. The report may be found in House Executive Documents, 30 Cong., 2 Sess., Doc. 1, pp. 1037-1054 (Serial No. 537).

Bancroft's statement in the main quoted from Stockton's letter to George Bancroft of November 23, 1846, is in part as follows: "The situation of the place was found to be most miserable and deplorable. The male inhabitants had abandoned the town, leaving their women and children dependent upon us for protection and food. No horses could be obtained to assist in the transportation of the guns and ammunition, and not a beef could be had to supply the necessary food," though, as the writer somewhat contradictorily adds, Gibson had returned, "driving about 90 horses and 200 head of beef cattle into the garrison." Meanwhile the Californians held the region round about the town. Stockton says: "On the afternoon of our arrival the enemy, irritated I suppose by the loss of his animals, came down in considerable force and made an attack; they were, however, soon driven back with the loss of two men and horses killed, and four wounded. These skirmishes, or running fights, are of almost daily occurrence; since we have been here, we have lost as yet but one man killed and one wounded." Thus reported the commodore on November 23d, the only definite date we have for these events. That there were, however, any hostilities involving loss of life, I think there is room for doubt.

A document fortunately came to my hand recently which throws some additional light upon the San Diego situation. This is a proclamation in Spanish issued by Stockton at San Diego on November 24, 1846. The original is the property of Miss Anna M. Wood of Escondido, California, who kindly allowed me to transcribe the faded characters of the fragile document. A translation of the proclamation follows:

"San Diego,
"Headquarters,
"Nov. 24, 1846.

"Sirs:

"I have to acknowledge the receipt of the inclosed communication relative to your fellow citizens and friends, who have been induced by false representations and lies to oppose the present government of this territory and I must say to them that the government of the United States desires nothing so much as the happiness and prosperity of California. They [the United States] have made war against Mexico; but they have ardently desired to save the people of California and their property from the terrible calamities of the war.

"In spite of this, so many are the Californians who have been induced to make war against the United States by a gang of demoralized Mexicans and Sonoran robbers, that the United States have been obliged to make preparations to prosecute the war with great severity.

"There are now in the field and coming from northern points irresistible forces, and if they arrive before your friends come into this garrison, I cannot be responsible for their lives and property. But in consideration of your firm adhesion and the fulfillment of your promises, and because of the important service which you have performed by your efforts for the salvation of California from the wicked deeds of its worst enemies—I declare by these presents that all those, who come into this garrison as soon as they receive this offer of protection and friendship, will be received as friends and the security of their persons and goods is guaranteed by these presents by the Government of the United States.

"Done under my hand and signature this 24th day of November, 1846.

"Signed
"R. F. Stockton

"Commander-in-chief of the forces of the United States and governor of the territory of California.

"This is a copy translated from the original—Miguel de Pedrorena."—The Southwestern Historical Quarterly.

In Memoriam

JOSEPHINE BLAKESLEE.

No one hears the door that opens,
When they pass beyond our call;
Soft as loosened leaves of roses,
One by one our loved ones fall.

Again the Angel of Death has entered our Parlor, and taken from our midst our beloved sister, Josephine Blakeslee. We tenderly condole with her bereaved family in this, their hour of trial and affliction, and we commend them for consolation to Him who doth all things well. Let us not think of her as dead, but as having preceded us to that golden shore where she now dwells as one of the daughters of a better land, and where she waits to welcome us as we too pass through that golden gate. By her death her family has been deprived of a loving and devoted mother, and Encinal Parlor No. 156 N.D.G.W. of a sister whose noble character and kind disposition endeared her to all.

Resolved That our sincere and deep sympathy be extended to her sorrowing family, furthermore be it resolved, that a page of our records be dedicated to her memory, that our charter be draped for thirty days, and that this tribute of affection to her memory be sent to her family, and a copy to The Grizzly Bear Magazine.

Sincerely and fraternally, in P.D.F.A.,

IRENE ROSE,
CHARLOTTE HERITAGE,
MURIEL JARRATT,
Committee

Alameda, November 28, 1934

KATHERINE McKANNA.

Whereas, Death has taken from our Parlor our beloved sister, Katherine McKanna, and whereas, the loss we have sustained is far less than the loss to those nearer and dearer to her, be it

Resolved, That we graciously submit to His divine will, fully realizing that San Miguel Parlor No. 94 N.D.G.W. has lost a faithful and incere worker and officer, who was at all times willing to accept responsibility and render service; and be it resolved, that we extend our sincere sympathy to the family of our departed sister, and be it also resolved, that copies of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family and to The Grizzly Bear, and that a copy be spread on the minutes of the Parlor.

Fraternally submitted,

ELSIE LOOSE,
MARGARET PALMER,
HORTENSE WRIGHT,
Committee.

San Miguel, December 12, 1934.

ROSINA M. HERTZBRUN.

To the Officers and Members of San Diego Parlor No. 208 Native Daughters of the Golden West. We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions of love and respect in memory of our dear departed sister, Rosina M. Hertzbrun, do submit the following:

Again, our Heavenly Father in His infinite wisdom, has called from our midst our beloved sister Rosina M. Hertzbrun, on November 25, 1934, in her passing a place has been made vacant and we will miss her bright and cheery presence.

Resolved, That our heartfelt sympathy be extended to the bereaved husband and relatives and may their grief be lessened by the memory of devotion and courage of the departed. "She has passed from this earth and is now won into the glad light of tomorrow." Resolved, that these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Parlor, that a copy be sent to the husband and one to The Grizzly Bear.

SAN FRANCISCO

THE SAN FRANCISCO N.S.G.W. EXTENSION of the Order Committee planned a group initiation in honor of Grand President Chas. A. Koenig atop Strawberry Hill in Golden Gate Park, December 16, and a large crowd assembled for the ceremonies. Fifteen candidates were on hand—nine for Golden Gate Parlor No. 29, four for Pacific Parlor No. 10, and one each for South San Francisco Parlor No. 157 and Presidio Parlor No. 194.

Unfortunately, it rained so hard that, at the conclusion of the second vice-president's charge, the ceremonies had to be abandoned, and the assemblage went to the nearby boathouse, where they were addressed by Grand President Koenig and were served hot coffee and cake. Among those in attendance were Grand First Vice-president Harmon D. Skillin, Grand Second Vice-president Hartley Russell, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Organist C. George Cuthbertson, Grand Trustees Joseph J. McShane, Edward T. Schnarr and Charles H. Spengemann, Past Grands Lewis F. Byington and Charles L. Dodge.

Strawberry Hill rises about 400 feet from the level of Golden Gate Park and is an ideal site for an initiation ceremony. Had the weather not been so unfavorable there would have been an immense outpouring of San Francisco Native Sons and at least forty candidates would have been presented.

N.S. SPONSOR N.D. HOME BREAKFAST.

Stanford Parlor No. 76 N.S.G.W. sponsored the Sunday morning breakfast at the Native Daughter Home December 9. Charles W. Dechent was chairman, Marshal William Gunther offered prayer, Waldo Postel spoke on "Communism and Socialism," and President Christian A. Weske introduced the officers and members of the Parlor. Evelyn I. Carlson, Past Grand President N.D.G.W., was in charge of the decorations, and the motif was the Christmas season.

"BIG GAME" DECORATION THEME.

Grand President Gladys E. Noce paid an official visit to Orinda Parlor No. 56 N.D.G.W. November 23. Dinner was served at the Home, and the tables were beautifully decorated in honor of the "big game," blue and gold, red and white being the color scheme. Each guest received a chocolate football. A large number were present to honor Mrs. Noce, also to honor Grand Trustee Orinda Giannini in her home-Parlor. The meetinghall also was decorated with football colors and autumn leaves.

Grand President Noce was escorted to her seat of honor by ten girls, gowned alike, each of whom presented her with a large chrysanthemum. She gave an interesting talk on early California history, and was presented with a gift of silver. Deputy Tessie Pearce was also the recipient of a gift. Others in attendance were Grand Vice-president Anna Thuesen, Grand Secretary Sallie Thaler, Grand Trustees Alice Lane and Clara Gairaud, Grand Inside Sentinel Alice Oldham, Grand Outside Sentinel Claire Lindsey, Supervising Deputies Gertrude LaFortune and Ethel Begley, Past Grands Dr. Eva Rasmussen, Eliza Keith and Emma Foley. Mae Shea was chairman of the evening.

MANY AMUSING STUNTS.

Linda Rosa Parlor No. 170 N.D.G.W. had its annual Christmas party December 12, and there were many amusing stunts. Among them, Mrs. Weiler, appropriately attired, did the old favorite tap dance and sang that well-known ballad, "The Hat Me Father Wore." Mrs. O'Connell was most picturesque as a tightrope walker, and Mrs. E. O'Kane entertained with an imitation of "The Man on the Flying Trapeze." No jolly party would be complete without a portrayal of Mae West, which was beautifully done by M. Farrell. Mrs. E. Allen did a pretty toe dance, and Mrs. Essie Sunstrum gave a good imitation of "Little Egypt." Eva Tyrell looked natural as "Mahatma Ghandi," while Mrs. Gertrude Koernig was lovely as a bareback rider. Mrs. M. McGowan was a typical "Aunt Jemima," Mrs. Pauline Huber rendered several Scotch airs, and the folk songs of Erin were nicely done by Mrs. E. Taylor and the Misses Legerness. Miss Gladys Huber made a fine "Old Woman in a Shoe," and was busy gathering her disobedient children to her for chastisement. Mrs. Nora Scheflin and Mrs. Gertrude LaFortune sang a lovely Swiss yodel duet, Mrs. Freda Eoff was a jolly old Santa Claus and distributed presents to all assembled, and Mms. Cuneo and Prior were the "Gold Dust Twins." Gladys Huber made an ideal chairman, and all present voted the party a great success.—A.L.P.

GRAND PRESIDENT INSPIRES.

Genevieve Parlor No. 132 N.D.G.W. feted Grand President Gladys E. Noce December 6, the occasion being her official visit. Among the large number present were Grand Vice-president Anna Thuesen, Grand Secretary Sallie Thaler, Grand Inside Sentinel Alice Oldham, Grand Outside Sentinel Claire Lindsey, Grand Trustees Orinda Giannini and Alice Lane, Supervising Deputy Gertrude LaFortune, Deputy Emily Ryan, Past Grands Eliza Keith, Mae Boldemann, Mae Noonan and Evelyn Carlson. Vocal selections were rendered by Alicia O'Day and the Native Daughter Glee Club. Two candidates were initiated. Grand President Noce inspired with her remarks, and complimented President Eugenia Mabley and the other officers on the excellent manner in which they exemplified the ritual. Gifts were presented Mrs. Noce and Deputy Ryan. Dinner preceded the meeting, and at the conclusion of the evening's festivities members of the drum corps served refreshments.

December 20 the Parlor had its annual Christmas jinks, Kathleen Lagrave heading the committee. The afternoon of December 22 the toy and scrapbook committee—Rena Taube, Elvira Desmond, Olga Kastellic, Eugenia Mabley—visited ward three of San Francisco Hospital and distributed candy, cookies and toys to the shutin kiddies. Moving pictures of Santa Claus and many comics were the surprise feature.

SUCCESSORS WISHED SUCCESS.

At the Thanksgiving meeting of Dolores Parlor No. 169 N.D.G.W. Emma O'Meara read the "Thanksgiving Hymn for California," and Juanita Blanchfield recited the "Origin of Thanksgiving." The tables were prettily decorated and refreshments were served. December 3, Mrs. C. Arrigoni was given a shower by the drill team.

December 12, the Parlor had a Christmas party. The tables were decorated with snowballs and miniature Santa Clauses, and an enjoyable menu was served under the supervision of Chairwoman Ida Corrigan. Doris and Beverly Nelson entertained. President Irene Schonfeld wished the newly-elected officers a successful and happy term of office, and presented her chairwoman, Ida Corrigan, with a token of appreciation. Brief remarks were made by Deputy Pearl Wedde, Agnes McVerry and Past Grand Evelyn Carlson. The veterans committee, with Sister Mullaney in charge, visited the veterans prior to Christmas. Officers of the Parlor, with Mary Elb as president, will be installed January 5.

INTERESTING ADDRESS.

Keith Parlor No. 137 N.D.G.W. welcomed Grand President Gladys E. Noce on her official visit November 22. Red, white, blue and gold were the decoration colors, and footballs were suspended from the lights. While Mrs. Noce was being escorted to her honor-seat, Sally Sullivan sang "Beautiful Lady." Keith being Supervising Deputy Gertrude LaFortune's home-Parlor, she also was honored and while being escorted to her seat Marguerite Dahlstrom sang "Let Us Call You Sweetheart."

Grand President Noce gave a very interesting address, and many gifts were presented. After the meeting all repaired to the banquetroom, which was decorated in keeping with Thanksgiving. During the repast Mildred Held, accompanying herself on the accordion, sang several selections.

PRIZEWINNERS TO BE HONORED.

The annual Christmas party given by Mission Parlor No. 227 N.D.G.W. to its eighteen war nurses in Palo Alto was a huge success. TIMBUCTOO

(GEO E MORRILL)

I made a trip to the north country
Last August of '34
I found a spot that's right to my taste
On the side of Table Mountain

Old Timbuctoo was a city once
In the days of '49
And over twenty years it stood
When the town was the talk of the state

Yes, from the stalwart sons of men,
Who came from east and west
To garner gold from river and gulch
And then back home to rest

But hill and gulch were open then
To men who were not afraid
But never a place to rest their bones
No room in Timbuctoo

I stood on the slope in a dreamy mood,
While I visioned the old and the new,
And I saw again on the canvas there
The miners of Timbuctoo

They passed like a spectral army corps,
And my eyes grew moist as the dew,
But soon I roused from my dreamy mood
On the highway in Timbuctoo.

As soon as my nerves grew steady again
I looked for the stores of old,
For Booth and Stewart and John Cosgrove
Who sold bacon and beans for gold.

The shops were gone and the owners too,
And even the walls were down;
It shocked me like an earthquake jar
As I blindly looked for the town.

I sought again for my friends of old,
And found two boys that I knew,
They were hale and cheery as any kids,
And born in the '60s too.

I asked for Jim and Larry and Pete,
And Danny and Lizzie and Ted,
But they pointed to the hill beyond,
To the city of the dead.

The sexton bore our comrades there,
When the Reaper cut them down,
And placed them on the hill to sleep,
Where they overlook the town.

I asked for Dick and Uncle John
And the children, Willie and Sue,
But all had crossed the great divide
And were sleeping in Timbuctoo.

My heart grew faint with the news I heard,
And I bade a hurried adieu
To my old friends, Tom and Andy,
And I hastened from Timbuctoo.

(The above came to The Grizzly Bear from Geo. E. Morrill of Los Angeles with the notation: "Early day verses are hobbies with me and I write them for pleasure. I am an old Native Son, born near the old ghost town of Timbuctoo in 1858 and have a warm spot in my heart for old mining camps and old ghost towns."—Editor.)

In Memoriam

ERNEST H. WHITE.

To the Officers and Members of Bakersfield Parlor No. 42 N.S.G.W.—We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions of sympathy and condolence in memory of our beloved member, Ernest White, respectfully submit the following:

Whereas, It has pleased our Eternal Father to call to His home our member, Ernest White; whereas, the members of this Parlor have lost a brother who by his devotion to the highest ideals of our Order, has greatly endeared him self to each of us; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in testimony of our sincere love and esteem for our departed brother, a copy of this memorium be spread upon the minutes of the Parlor and copies be sent to his family, and to The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication.

GEORGE A. MORRIS,
MART. E. LEONARD,
Committee.

Bakersfield, December 14, 1934.

LOUIS LEMUCCHI.

Whereas, Death has taken from our Parlor our beloved and respected brother, Louis Lemucchi, and whereas, the loss we have sustained is far less than the loss to those who are nearer and dearer to him; be it

Resolved, That we graciously submit to His divine will, fully realizing that Bakersfield Parlor No. 42 Native Sons of the Golden West has lost a faithful and earnest member, who was willing at all times to do his part; and be it resolved, that we extend our sincere sympathy to the family of our departed brother; and also be it resolved, that our charter be draped, and that copies of these resolutions be sent to The Grizzly Bear Magazine and to the bereaved family, and that a copy be spread on the minutes of the Parlor.

While now upon your hearts and home
The heavy shadow lies,
May light of kindly comfort come
From hearts that sympathize.

Fraternally submitted,

Amen, to this "Private Think" of Editor Charles K. McClatchy of the Sacramento Bee: "Yours Truly prays the 'great metropolitan dailies' will give us a large, long and luxurious rest on the tandem adulteresses of the movie stage who are scarcely off with one husband before they are on with another.

"At any rate he hopes they no longer will leave their columns—yes, their pages—open to these sex-acrobats to 'pour out their souls' in testimonials to their enthusiastic search for 'true love.' They know as much about real love not the lustful imitation—as does a goat."

At the November election there was approved a measure placing every district attorney of California under the direction of the state attorney-general. Now, perhaps, it will be possible to have the Alien Land Law rigidly enforced and to oust the Japs from the thousands of acres of land they are in possession of illegally. In the enforcement of this law, the district attorneys have failed, miserably. The Order of Native Sons of the Golden West should immediately take up this matter with the attorney-general. The longer the delay, the more certain is California's doom.

Figures released by the Federal Treasury disclose the fact that, during 1933, the million-dollar class increased in this nation, while there was a sharp decline in the number of persons with net incomes up to $5,000. Commenting thereon, United States Senator William E. Borah says it is "quite evident that this is another proof of the power of monopoly and that the little fellow is being more and more chiseled out.

"The monopolies are," he says, "still raking off and gathering in the dimes and quarters of the poor and putting them into the coffers of the wealthier. I have never been able to accept the view of taking from those who have not and giving it to those who have."

The San Francisco Board of Education received the resignation of a married teacher, Mrs. Olive Laird Goodfellow, accompanied by this statement: "My husband and I feel it is not fair for me to keep a position some unmarried woman would like to have . . . . that this is one way we can help to mend the economic situation. I know how much I needed a job four years ago before I was married."

All gainfully employed married women with able-bodied husbands should do likewise. If they do not choose to follow the example of Mrs. Goodfellow, they should be compelled to do so—to assist in mending a deplorable economic condition.

Governor Winant of Vermont said: "No man in public office can make conditions any better than the public wants them to be. There is no hope of the high schools training youngsters to help work the way out of this swamp of economic disorder unless the people of the United States ask that the job be done." In other words, if the honest majority want conditions improved, they will have to force the improvement by themselves eliminating the ruling dishonest minority.

"A shipload of Rumanian Jews attempting to emigrate to Palestine is home again, barred from Canaan by a quota," said the San Francisco Chronicle, editorially. "What irony! Jews shut out by immigration restrictions from the land Moses, as God's servant, gave the Hebrews, where Solomon ruled and where their temple stood! A Palestinian quota on incoming Jews may be justified by modern population conditions, but how strange it sounds!"

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor calls the Townsend old-age pension plan an illusory quest, economically impossible. He points out:

"A $200 a month pension to the 8,000,000 or 10,000,000 persons now over 60 years of age would cost between $20,000,000,000 and $24,000,000,000 a year. The entire income of all the people of this country last year [1933] was less than $40,000,000,000. The Townsend plan would cost more than half of our national income."

Representative Tinkham of Massachusetts expresses the opinion that the United States is an impoverished nation, saying:

"In 1917, the international bankers, alien interests and alien-minded Americans forced the United States to enter the World War, thereby abandoning its tradition of neutrality, which was its fundamental protection and immunity from war. Since then the United States has lost the character of its political institutions and has become an impoverished nation."

Late information reaching The Grizzly Bear is, that at the approaching session of the Federal Congress, Japan, through its white-Jap agents in this country, will make strenuous effort to have the Immigration Law—which excludes aliens ineligible to citizenship—amended to suit Japan's desire. The claim will be advanced that Japan's insistence for naval parity is a result of that ineligible-to-citizenship provision of the law, and that if it be repealed and the quota be extended to its nationals Japan will not insist on termination of the Washington Naval Treaty.

The Japs, both yellow and white, are tricky and take full advantage of every opportunity to aid Japan. Watch carefully the proceedings in the Congress and, if interested in California's wellbeing, let this state's senators and representatives therein know that you are unalterably opposed to any meddling with the Immigration Law regardless of what Japan wants and of the veiled threats of its agents.

MARIN COUNTY HAS FIRST HOUSE BUILT NORTH SAN FRANCISCO BAY.

On the Olompali Rancho in Marin County, near Novato, is, according to the Mill Valley Record, the oldest house in California north of San Francisco Bay. "This house," says the Record, "was built in 1776. The owner is Mrs. James Black Burdell.

"An exploring expedition was sent out by Lieutenant Ayala who was then in San Francisco Bay, under orders from the King of Spain, to survey and chart the harbor. This expedition, which was said to be under Lieutenant Bodega, traveling north, reached a large Indian rancheria three and a half miles north of Novato and there they halted for a rest, at what is now the Olompali Ranch, owned by the family of Dr. James Burdell.

"The Indians were hospitable, and treated the Spaniards with such kindness that the Spaniards in turn taught them how to make adobe bricks and to form them into a house. A one-room house was erected, under Spanish supervision, by the father of Camillo Ynitia (or Unitia as it is sometimes written), the last chief of the Olompali tribe.

"Several additional rooms were built later, presumably by Camillo Ynitia himself; these are better preserved than the original structure. The walls are thirty-two inches thick and the ceiling is about eight feet high. The adobe house has been encased inside and out, to preserve it, but the adobe wall can be seen. The original room was sixteen by twenty feet; the roof was thatched with tules and an opening in the roof permitted the smoke to escape. The Burdells have since made additions to this house.

"Near by, not far from the driveway, is a great oak tree, marked with a large cross cut deeply into the bark, many generations ago. The Burdell family say that a fierce battle took place near this tree, between the Olompali and an attacking tribe. In this battle the chief was killed and buried under this tree."

THINK THIS OVER!

The order of Native Sons of the Golden West is, we believe, with the exception of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West, the only organization that limits membership exclusively to NATIVE-BORN AMERICANS.

Knowing the serious conditions in this country today, this fact alone should impel every Native Son of California to immediately SEEK AFFILIATION with that American-born and American-operated institution, the man-power and wealth of which are pledged to the protection of American institutions in times of peace as well as in times of war.

foreigners were usurping claims in the gold regions and he at once threatened to issue a proclamation which would put a stop to this menace. Nothing came of this bluster, but it was symptomatic of the feeling in the State at the time, and the next year the legislature passed the first Foreign Miners' Tax Law. The background for this and similar measures was the current dislike of the Anglo-Americans for the Spanish-Americans and the Chinese. The fact that in some localities the Mexicans and other "greasers" were too numerous to be ejected from their claims by ordinary means and threats, evoked this recourse to legislative methods. The Foreign Miners' Tax Law of 1850 provided that, pending the making of federal regulations for mining, no foreigners should conduct mining operations without a license, which was to be renewed monthly at a fee of twenty dollars. This obviously unfair and discriminatory law was very difficult of enforcement and was later radically modified. But it worked great hardship upon many of the foreign miners, who often did not earn enough, especially during the rainy season, to pay the monthly tax. Thousands of them, discouraged by this measure and by the rough treatment meted out to them by the Anglo-Americans, gathered in San Francisco and other towns, where they led a haphazard existence. Others became outlaws and highwaymen or left California altogether.

It appears that, while the French were not affected so much by the tax law as were the other foreigners, they nevertheless suffered severely from it. Furthermore, the tax law, even when not rigorously enforced against them, was an encouragement to the Anglo-Americans and the Irish to deprive them, as well as the Latin-Americans, of their claims on any possible pretext. One reason for their being thus singled out for spoliation was their reluctance to become citizens. Being thus without votes, the French and their troubles were of no great concern to the local officials. Another reason was that the French found the society of the Spanish-Americans more congenial than that of the Anglo-Americans, and so they were often suspected of being leagued with Mexicans and Chinese to resist their persecutors.

Typical of such ill treatment was the Mokelumne Hill episode of 1851. Here a group of French miners had held and worked very rich claims until the time of the anti-foreign movement. In the spring of 1851, as the result of a quarrel between the French and their Irish neighbors, the French hoisted the tricolor and open hostilities broke out between the Americans and the French of the camp, one man being killed and several wounded. The local French consular agent sent word to Patrice Dillon, French consul in San Francisco. Upon the arrival of this official and some State officers and militia an agreement was made by which the matter was laid before the courts, the tricolor was lowered, and the French finally kept quiet possession of their properties.

In the mines the French remained a group apart, isolated from the other emigrants, whose language they made little effort to acquire. They seem to have been industrious miners, however, and they were among the earliest to exploit the southern mines. They were to be found in greatest numbers at the towns of Sonora, Placerville, Marysville, Columbia, Mokelumne Hill, Coloma, and Auburn. Many place names, such as French Bar, French Flat, Orleans Bar, and Frenchtown, bear witness to their presence and influence. Some of them settled around the base of Mount Shasta and at Crescent City, while others wandered far northward, into Oregon and British Columbia and even, it is said, to Alaska, drawn by the gold lure of later days. But in the California gold fields Anglo-American persecution gradually checked French immigration and drove large numbers of them from the mines back to San Francisco. From such as these, also, the French expeditions into Sonora drew many of their members.

The French of San Francisco played an important part in the city's growth and life. Before the middle of 1850 there were numerous French commercial establishments near the water front. The majority of the newly arrived emigrants, especially those who lacked money to get to the mines, gathered in hastily constructed homes on the outskirts of the town. The early French merchants found a ready sale for the articles of luxury—wines, brandies, conserves, confections, silks, olive oil, sauces—which were imported from France to please the extravagant tastes of San Francisco's bonanza society. French hotels, restaurants, and gambling houses were opened, newspapers were established, and soon there were two or three theaters producing French plays. Some of the French became prominent bankers, while others as importers contributed one-fourth of the customs receipts of the port for 1851. The center of the French colony in those early days was to the north of Market Street and not far from the Embarcadero. In addition to the merchants and bankers there were also promoters, miners, land speculators, and shipowners active in the French business life of the city. The French business men were not farsighted, we are told, and the San Francisco fire of 1850 left many of them bankrupt.

But of the five or six thousand French in San Francisco, by no means all were as prosperous as those described above. A large number of them seem to have found California disappoint ing, whether in the mines or in the cities, an they longed to return to France. They com plained of injustices at the hands of the Anglo Americans, injustices due largely here, as in th mines, to the fact that they did not, as a rul become citizens, and so had no political value However this may be, they were discontente with life in San Francisco. Few were skille workmen and their ignorance of common trade and of the English language was a handicap t them in earning a livelihood. In consequenc they were forced to take up many "semi-artistic professions, such as hairdressing and bootblack ing, which they are said to have monopolized Many were gamblers, journalists, and architects as occasion offered. In short, they lived by thei wits, on the edges of the town's social and ecc nomic life, preserving more of their nationa characteristics than did the other foreign ele ments of San Francisco's motley population.

It was inevitable that such restless, disap pointed spirits as these pioneer French of Cal fornia should respond readily to rumors of a other gold country where they might be the firs to work the mines. Just as the lure of the fu trade drew the Canadian French across the con tinent, so the attraction of gold and silver wa to draw many Frenchmen southward beyond th confines of California. Years before, a brillian French traveler had described and commente upon the mineral wealth of Sonora in a wor which had the sanction of the French goverr ment. From the Sonora emigrants into Cal fornia the French learned more concerning thi wonderful but little known land to the south wherein they might be more kindly received b fellow Latins. Said an observant Californi Frenchman in September of 1850: "Sonora, s it seems, is very rich in gold and silver mine It is reputed to be even richer than Californi But the mines are situated in the Apache India country, and this tribe is warlike, vicious an not dependable."

ECONOMIC DEPRESSION OF 1854-1858

Peter Thomas Conmy
(Historian Presidio Parlor N.S.G.W.)

THE ECONOMIC DEPRESSION through which we are now passing, and from which we are slowly but surely emerging, is not the first business slump suffered in California. In the past, there have been many drops in business. Indeed, it seems to be a law in economics that periods of prosperity shall be followed by hard times, just as the seven years of plenty in the Bible story were followed by as many years of famine. The causes of each depression seem to have been similar. For this reason, much can be learned about present-day conditions from a study of the causes of depressions. Hence at this time we are presenting a discussion of the first depression felt in California, from 1854 to 1858, in the hope that some lessons of the past may be applied to the present.

The discovery of gold in California in 1848 encouraged thousands of men and women to leave their homes in all parts of the world and follow the long trail to the Pacific. Once arrived here, these Pioneers needed materials with which to work, to build, and for the necessities of life. Because commodities of every description were in demand, manufacturers and merchants of the East sent wares to California to supply the demand occasioned by the Gold Rush. During the first few years materials were bought up as fast as they were unloaded, but after a time people had purchased all that they needed and hence the demand dropped, but merchants in the East continued to ship wares west until finally San Francisco stores were oversupplied. Merchants were left with large supplies of goods for which there was no market. This started a depression among storekeepers.

In the first years of gold mining, the metal was obtained by the simple process of operating a pick and a pan along the sides of the rivers. After the first few years, however, the abundance of gold petered out and thousands of miners lost work. These men drifted to the cities, where oversupply had already caused a slump, and their presence but aggravated the situation, adding unemployment.

In time, hydraulic mining took the place of the original pan mining, but a dry winter left the streams without abundant water in the spring and, as both water and pressure were needed for the work and could not be obtained, the result was that hydraulic mining had to be suspended temporarily, adding to unemployment and increasing the depression. Lack of rain not only hampered hydraulic mining; it also injured farming, and many farmers who had given mortgages on their land or crops were ruined. Miners, too, lacked capital to purchase the equipment needed for quartz mining and so, projects were abandoned, bringing more unemployment. Oversupply, drought, unemployment, financial ruin—one thing led to another.

Depressions never come in days of high moral observance! A major slump in business is always parallel with degeneration in matters of integrity. The Teapot Dome scandal, corruption of public officials, the rise of gangsters that presaged the present depression, were not without counterparts in 1854. In that year Harry Meiggs, a respected public official and businessman, left San Francisco for South America, and after he was gone it was discovered that he had defrauded both private creditors and the public treasury to the extent of approximately $800,000. Then, too, the years of prosperity which followed the Gold Rush had caused land values and economic rents to rise unduly high. We are told of a lawyer who paid $250 monthly for an office in a basement twelve feet square, the ceiling six feet from the floor. Those who bought and were paying for property at these abnormal values were unable to continue payments after prices dropped. Banks which had taken mortgages on pre-depression values could foreclose only on depressed values. The same was true of the stock market. Many who were playing the margin suffered tremendously, just as they suffered in the break in 1929 and 1930.

In the '50s banks were not supervised by the state as they are today. A state banking department headed by a superintendent of banks having broad executive discretions and vigilant in preventing disasters, is a product of the twentieth century. The Federal Reserve System, offering protection and backing to banking institutions, dates from 1913, when it was recommended by President Wilson. If banks have failed under the close supervision of state and nation, how much the more did they fail in the fifties in the absence of that supervision. In 1855, Page, Bacon & Co. and Adams & Co., t two leading banks in California, failed. At t time of its failure, Adams & Co. owed o $2,000,000 to depositors. A run on all ba started. Those that were strong closed th doors until the trouble was over, but those t were weak failed completely. At this point, quote a San Francisco trade journal for A 1855:

"Times have never been so bad in Califor from the day of discovery of gold until present as they are now. It is almost impossi to negotiate loans on any terms. . . . and sec ities which would attract capitalists are not be had. . . . money can hardly be raised on terms even on the best of paper. Real est is at it lowest ebb, and but little of it is offe as collateral. . . . It is beyond cavil or disp that money is tighter today than it has e been in San Francisco." In 1857, the Merc tile Gazette and Shipping Register said: " tual purchases of real estate even for ho steads or investments are now of rare occ rence."

In 1855, bank failures were 197; in 18 146; in 1857, 128; in 1858, 94; and in 1859, Recovery from the depression was by no me rapid. It would seem that it takes about long to emerge as it does to descend into economic pit. On this point, Dr. Cross sa "Business in California revived very slowly fr the effects of the depression 1854-55. It not until the autumn months of 1858 that th were signs of returning confidence. One of most important reasons for the delay in get back to normal state of affairs was the fact t California was going through a rather inter ing industrial revolution. Mining methods changed and were changing. The placers given way to the quartz mines which requ deeper tunnels, a greater number of emplo and a larger amount of capital." Cross the depression was a blessing in disguise, cause it taught the lesson of honesty and t perance in business relations.

This depression which started as a local m ment in California in 1854, became a nati movement and resulted in a terrible finan catastrophe in the East known as the "Pani 1857." The present depression started in East, and spread West. The depression of 1 58 started in the West, and spread East. I

NOTE Expressions of opinion in these "Growls" are, unless indicated otherwise, those of the Managing Editor.
CLARENCE M. HUNT.

GOVERNOR FRANK MERRIAM, IF HE has his way, will burden the people of California with millions of new taxes! His budget for the State Government's 1935-37 biennium, submitted to the State Legislature, so indicates. He would boost the cost of government to record heights, regardless of the inability of the people to pay more taxes. He should know that constantly hightened taxes impair the prospects of prosperity, and lowered taxes invite prosperity.

The Governor apparently gives no thought to reducing government costs, for his budget deals not with that necessity. These statements do appear: "Operating costs have been greatly reduced. Reductions have been made in the higher salaries." But, no details of the reductions accompany. If they have actually been made, how come his general-fund wants are some ten millions of dollars more than those of his predecessor? The public schools cannot be blamed, for that increase does not include the schools appropriation. The increase exceeds by some nine percent the five-percent increase permitted by law, but there are always ways and means of beating the law when public officials desire to collect and spend the people's money —taxes.

The State Legislature should cut the stuffings out of the Governor's budget, but in all likelihood it will not. For, of the thousands of bills that went into the hopper last month, but one has any important bearing on economy—a proposed constitutional amendment, introduced by Senator Swing. That, however, according to reports, is not to be pressed for passage. The legislators, also, appear not to be at all interested in economy. They should know that there is no difference between sound private business and sound public business; that the way to economic security is open only to that government which spends less than it earns—and taxes are not earnings.

Both the Governor and the legislators reiterate the "fixed charges" buncum as a reason why government costs cannot be reduced. The previous Legislature, remember, forgot the Constitution, and passed emergency legislation protecting owners of building and loan associations and, incidentally, taking millions away from investors therein. Why not again forget the Constitution, and cut those "fixed charges" to within the state's present income? Certainly the emergency still exists. Would that course take too much from the "gang?"

The cost of operating the State Government must be reduced, not increased one dollar, regardless of propaganda otherwise or the pleadings of political racketeers. For California cannot possibly get started on the road to normalcy, much less to prosperity, until that be done. It is incumbent on the Governor and the State Legislature to devise ways and means of bringing about the reduction. If they fail in their duty, the people of this state should follow the example of those in Chicago. They forced a reduction of forty-seven percent in the cost of government in that city, by acting in concert. If those in charge cannot find a way to operate the State Government within present revenues, they should step out and make way for those who can, and will.

"We have undertaken a new order of things;" quoting from President Franklin Roosevelt's message to the Federal Congress—"yet we progress towards it under the framework and in the spirit and intent of the American Constitution. We have proceeded throughout the nation a measurable distance on the road towards this new order. . . . There is evident a restoration of that spirit of confidence and faith which marks the American character. Let him who, for speculative profit or partisan purpose, without just warrant would seek to disturb or dispel this assurance, take heed before he assumes responsibility for any act which slows our onward steps. . . .

"The attempt to make a distinction between recovery and reform is a narrowly conceived effort to substitute the appearance of reality for reality itself. When a man is convalescing from illness wisdom dictates not only cure of the symptoms but also removal of their cause. . . .

"No wise man has any intention of destroying what is known as the profit motive; because by the profit motive we mean the right by work to earn a decent livelihood for ourselves and for our families. We have, however, a clear mandate from the people, that Americans must forswear that conception of the acquisition of wealth which, through excessive profits, creates undue private power over private affairs and, to our misfortune, over public affairs as well. . . .

"It is not empty optimism that moves me to a strong hope in the coming year. We can, if we will, make 1935 a genuine period of good feeling, sustained by a sense of purposeful progress."

Declaring "The Federal Government must and shall quit this business of relief . . . the giving of cash, of market baskets, of a few hours of weekly work," the President has asked of the Federal Congress an appropriation of $4,000,000,000 to end the need for such relief. If the appropriation be made, and undoubtedly it will be, the Federal Government will cease giving such relief and, instead, will employ on public projects some 3,500,000 employable persons on the relief rolls. All unemployables will have to be cared for by states and local communities. Incidentally, there are now some 19,500,000 persons on relief.

Also, the President has presented his budget to the Congress. If the proposed expenditures are authorized, the deficit of the Federal Government for the fiscal year 1936 will amount to $4,528,000,000. The national debt will be increased by approximately $3,152,000,000, bringing the total up to $34,239,000,000. "I do not consider it advisable at this time to propose any new or additional taxes for the fiscal year 1936," he said, and the message concluded with the assurance that "The excellent credit of the government will be maintained for the common good."

February is outstanding as the birth-month of two of the United States' most famous citizens: George Washington, first president, born February 22, 1732; Abraham Lincoln, sixteenth President, born February 12, 1809.

In December 1862, Lincoln made this statement, as pertinent to the situation in this nation today as then: "The dogmas of the quiet past are inadequate to the stormy present. The occasion is piled high with difficulty, and we must rise to the occasion."

California lost a most loyal adopted son and a fine citizen when, New Year Day, George J. Burns, a former state senator of Massachusetts, died at his Los Angeles home at the age of 79. He recognized the Jap menace and, voluntarily, rendered splendid service by making known the danger to California.

"To every man there openeth
A way, and ways, and a way.
And the high soul climbs the high way,
And the low soul gropes the low,
And in between on the misty flats
The rest drift to and fro.
But to every man there openeth
A high way, and a low,
And every man decideth
The way his soul shall go."

There is before the Federal Senate a proposal, having presidential approval, for the United States to go into the League of Nations through the back door, the World Court. The move is being strenuously opposed, and may be blocked. Certainly a vast majority of the citizens of this nation are opposed to entering the League via either the front or the back door. There are numerous excellent reasons why the United States should not go into the League or any of its subsidiaries, but one reason wins this country should go in. May those thoroughly American senators who are, in opposing entrance into the World Court, battling for the wellbeing of this nation, be crowned with success.

Speaking against the proposal, Senator Hiram W. Johnson of California said: "Easy is the descent into hell! This is the first step into the League of Nations. The propaganda for taking the final step will be well-nigh irresistible once we have entered the Court. . . . Do we enter this sacrosanct tribunal for the preservation of peace? Not so. Not so . . . Then why do we enter it? Not for America, our beloved republic, but to meddle and muddle in European affairs and in a court that is foreign to our people and the genesis of our institutions. . . . What a pity that we must turn for even the briefest period from the trials of our own people to trials in a foreign moribund League of Nations and, if its proponents are right, its futile court. Becoming a part of the Court officially is the first false step in the complete abrogation of the foreign policy from which our republic never has deviated."

Denouncing the Court as a political tribunal of the League of Nations, Senator William E. Borah of Idaho warned that, by joining the Court, the United States would be thrust inextricably into the quarrels of Europe. He attacked the power, resting solely in the League, which permits the Court to render advisory opinions. "In the matter of advisory opinions," said he, "we are taking a long and dangerous step backward in the protracted struggle to divorce tribunals from politics. . . . You can't separate politics from this court so long as the advisory jurisdiction remains. It is our belief that, throw around the advisory jurisdiction whatever safeguard you may, it still remains an advisory tribunal into which politics and economic matters and national feeling will inevitably intrude."

Rev. Father Charles E. Coughlin, the priest who battles for the masses and does not hesitate to express his opinions, surmises entrance into the World Court will cost the United States its position as a free and independent nation and subject this country to laws made by nations that owe the United States $12,000,000,000. "These same nations," he said, "will enforce the judgment of this World Court with the cannon of Japan, the airplanes of Italy, the financial wizardry of England, the combined forces of the world if we dare refuse to follow the mandates of this World Court."

Remember this, too: racial equality, the goal of Japan, will be forced onto the United States if this nation goes into the World Court. And that means just one thing—the acquirement of California and the other Pacific states by Japan through "peaceful invasion."

CALIFORNIA FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

FEBRUARY 1885 WAS A BALMY MONTH of sunshine in California. The rainfall for the month was but .49 of an inch, making a total for the season of 15.64 inches. It was ample for all needs. Almond trees were in bloom, and hills and vales were bedecked with blossoming flowers. An early spring was in the offing.

Donner Lake, Nevada County, was frozen over, and hundreds of skaters went there daily in sleighs from Truckee to enjoy the sport.

Companies in the vicinity of Truckee harvested and stored 38,000 tons of natural ice to be shipped during summer months to California and Arizona towns. That industry has been killed by ice machines.

H. C. Parks, Riverside County apiarist, took from thirty-three hives seven and one-half tons of honey.

Strawberries, in limited quantity, came on the San Francisco market and sold for sixty cents a box.

Six whales were captured in San Diego Bay by whalers stationed there.

Tree planting assumed large proportions in Yolo County. Over 12,000 fruit trees were being planted in the vicinity of Winters.

H. F. Crabtree and Art Porter, Galt, Sacramento County, nimrods, bagged seventy-eight quail February 1.

A Mendocino County hunter named Bean so far this year had killed three bears, six California lions, three wildcats and ten skunks.

Washington's Birthday, February 22, was appropriately observed throughout the state.

The town of Covina, Los Angeles County, came into existence this month.

A company had erected four masts, 150 feet in hight, to light Sacramento City with electric lamps of 3,000 candle power.

Nine artesian wells were being sunk near Pasadena, Los Angeles County, and four of them had struck a large flow of water.

Statistics showed that during the month there came to California 3,750 people by rail and 1,124 by sea, and that 2,242 departed by rail and 1,130 by sea.

A colony of Germans was located near Galt, Sacramento County. A section of land was purchased for each member, who was to farm it.

A Negro colony was being located on the "Lucky" Baldwin ranch in Los Angeles County, and thirty-two houses for their quarters were under construction. The Negroes, coming from Tennessee, were to replace Chinese and Mexican laborers, who were not satisfactory.

Woodland, Yolo County, opened with appropriate ceremonies February 16 a new opera house.

General Thomas J. Clunie began construction of the Clunie Opera House at Eighth and "K" streets, Sacramento City, to cost $25,000.

A Red Bluff, Tehama County, citizen dropped a blue faro chip into the Sunday collection plate when it was passed by a deacon at the end of a sermon. Discovering his error, he quietly asked the deacon to return it, but the latter, knowing its value, refused to do so unless its worth was given him in coin of the realm.

Leland Stanford, United States Senator-elect from California, was given a brilliant reception in San Francisco, February 15, and three days later departed for Washington, D. C., to take his seat in the Federal Congress, March 4.

Charles K. McClatchy and Miss Ella Kelley were married at Sacramento City, February 12. So, "C. K.," nationally eminent "Private Thinks" editor of the Sacramento Bee, and his wife will celebrate February 12, 1935, their golden wedding anniversary.

A series of earthquakes, beginning January 30 and continuing through February in northern California, did no damage but kept the people alarmed. The shakes were attributed to disturbances in the interior of Mount Lassen.

San Francisco had its third Mardi Gras Festival, February 17. Rex, the carnival king, was met at the Market-street ferry by Captain F. Raube with a military escort and escorted to Mechanics Pavilion, where joy was inaugurated.

Sacramento Parlor No. 3 N.S.G.W. gave its eighth annual party in the Capital City, February 17. Mirrors surrounded with lace curtains, and tropical and other flowering plants were used to decorate the hall. The party was under the direction of President George H. Clark.

A season of grand opera opened in San Francisco by the Mapleson Opera Company. The diva, Adelina Patti, Mlle. Emma Nevada, other singers and the scenery arrived by special train February 22.

Dick Kendall, mining on the Feather River in Butte County, found a 28-ounce gold nugget valued at $470.

A find of rich gold quartz ledges along New Creek in Trinity County caused a rush of prospectors. As they had to take a trail from Redding, Shasta County, that town, in consequence, became lively.

Fifteen White babies were found by the police in San Francisco's Chinatown. It was at first thought Chinese women had purchased them from White mothers, but it developed that a Madam Wilson, who ran a foundling hospital, had been selling the babies for $50 each with the aid of a Chinese doctor. The babies were sent to an asylum where, at first, there was difficulty in handling them, for they understood only the Chinese language and preferred rice to bread and milk. Madam Wilson was convicted of committing a misdemeanor and was sentenced to six months in the city jail.

Hing Lung, a Chinese merchant of Sacramento City, died February 2. Knowing he was going to pass out, he sold his wife to a Chinese friend for $800. He handed her $700 of the sum and gave the balance to his doctor to pay funeral expenses.

The Chinatown of Columbia, Tuolumne County, burned February 4. A Mountain View, Santa Clara County, hay warehouse burned February 14, causing a $15,000 loss.

The management attempt to dismiss the audience and a riot ensued th took most of the city's police to quell.

Wesley Maddux, who came to California 1850 and became prominent in Yolo County affairs, died at Woodland, February 7, aged 8 He was a Mexican War veteran.

There was a shooting affray in Eureka, Hur boldt County, between rival Chinese tongs, Fe ruary 6, in which several Chinamen were woun ed. S the citizens rose enmasse and exported the e tire Chinese population, closing up a number laundries and leaving a number of families coo less. The Chinamen with their personal effec arrived in San Francisco aboard three stear boats during the month, and disappeared uno tentatiously. Seven Chinese storekeepers we allowed to ship their goods from Eureka wit out delay. Col Bee, the Chinese Six Compani legal representative, threatened to bring a civ action for damages against Eureka, but ev dently did not know how or where to begin.

A pioneer steamboat captain, reminiscing th month, said: "The first steamboat to ascer the Sacramento River was a small one, name "Sitka," built and sent to California by the Ru sian government. Captain Leidesdorf, aft whom a street in San Francisco is named, D cember 15, 1847, left San Francisco to vis General John A. Sutter, and had a party of Ru sians with him. "TO KNOW A NAME IS TO KNOW A story," is a truism that is hardly better illustrated than in the color and romance surrounding the naming of places in California. But there is one section that reflects the various influences that contributed to the naming of these places more than any other, and that is the country between Sacramento and Reno, along what may be termed the old emigrant trail.

To the camper or vacationist in the Donner-Tahoe region, or the casual traveler over the Sierra summits, an introduction to the origin of some of the names of the towns and localities found along the road should contribute an item of increased interest, combining as they do the influence of the original inhabitants, the Indians; then the Spaniards, exploring the lower reaches of the foothills; later the emigrants, their trundeling covered wagons creaking and groaning while surmounting this last great barrier on the long and perilous march to the land of gold; and last, the railroaders and agriculturalists, who developed and consolidated this inheritance from the Pioneers into the commonwealth we now enjoy.

Within a short distance of 150 miles, we find a wide variety of geographical features and scenic beauty. Leaving the broad and fertile valley region, with its park-like growth of flowing valley oaks, we climb the gradual slope of the foothills, red-brown earth characterized by the growth of digger pine, and blue and live oaks, and a heavy underbrush dominated by manzanita. Above this is an intermediate region of yellow pine and black oak, followed by the rugged granite slopes of the high Sierra, where Jeffrey pine and tamarack, with towering red and white firs, reign supreme up to the timber line, giving place there to the rugged junipers, which seem to specialize in adversity. Then down the rather abrupt eastern slope of the mountains to Reno, where we receive an introduction to the Nevada desert and sagebrush.

Most of the towns and localities in this region are located on both the highway and the railroad, which parallel each other and, for almost the entire distance, are adjacent. The only exceptions are railroad sites, such as sidings and spur tracks, which are designated by names for railroad convenience only.

Our story, however, begins in the year 1808, when Lieutenant Gabriel Moraga, while on an expedition against the Indians, discovered the Sacramento River, naming it in honor of the Holy Sacrament. He first saw it near its junction with the Feather River and, thinking that both were parts of the main stream, and the upper Sacramento but a tributary, he named the latter the Jesus Maria, a name it retained for many years. The diarist of Jedediah Smith's expedition through northern California in 1828 writes of the Sacramento River as the "Bonaventure" along which they did some trapping. The Sacramento River eventually gave its name to the capital city of the state. Previous to this, the settlement was generally referred to as Sutter's Fort, which was the headquarters for the vast domain of "ninety-nine square miles of any land he might select not already occupied," granted by Governor Alvarado to General Sutter and named "New Helvetia," the classical name for Switzerland, in reference to Sutter's parentage. Following the discovery of gold, the miners used the river front as a landing place, which became known as the Embarcadero, but in a short time the space between the Embarcadero and the Fort became one settlement, which is now the City of Sacramento.

Leaving Sacramento, we first cross the American River. In 1827, Jedediah Smith's little band of trappers were forced to winter on the banks of this river, the Sierra passes being blocked with snow, at a spot since determined to have been in the vicinity of the present town of Folsom. The presence of the Americans here led to the stream being called the Rio de los Americanos, or the American River.

The town of Antelope, near the Placer County line, reminds us that at one time the valley floor was the home of large bands of antelope, which suggested the name for Antelope Creek, upon which the town was later located. In 1853 it was known as the Twelve Mile House, being twelve miles by road from Sacramento, and was a popular stopping place for stages and travelers along the road.

If we agree that "a rose by any other name would smell as sweet," then perhaps we can extend some such privilege to a city by the name of Roseville, for this railroad center was first known as Griders, when it was doubtless another roadhouse or stage station. Then, with the advent of the railroad, it became known as Junction. Its later growth justified a name with greater dignity, and Roseville was selected. There is some difference of opinion as to the source of this name. Most of the old settlers are agreed that it was named at an early-day picnic, where it was decided by popular vote to name it after an attractive young woman who was present at that picnic, and whose name was Rose. The old railroaders have their version also, and claim it was named for a popular waitress at their favorite eating house, evidently a Rose amongst the coffee cups. Other oldtimers claim it was named because of the wealth of wild roses formerly found in the vicinity, while another authority has it that the neighboring ranch of Rose Spring, formerly the property of Judge James McGinley, inspired the name.

Rocklin derived its name through being the location of extensive granite quarries, and the name was originally spelled "Rockland."

Loomis was first known as Pino, but the Central Pacific officials changed it because the name conflicted in sound with Reno. It was then named Loomis after "Jim" Loomis, a local character who for a time carried on the combined jobs of saloonkeeper, railroad agent, expressman and postmaster. He is reputed to have had his own methods of carrying on these varied occupations, and his official gesture as postmaster consisted in keeping the mail and postal matters in a cigar box. When a postal inspector once presumed to criticize him for his lax methods, he threw not only the inspector, but the whole "post office" as well, out into the road. Hopefully, his duties as railroad agent were performed with greater dignity.

Penryn was originally named "Penhryn" by Griffith Griffiths, a Welshman who developed the granite quarries that were once the main industry of the town. When the Central Pacific established a station there, Judge Crocker, who in several other instances showed himself to be an early advocate of simplified spelling, eliminated the superfluous Welsh consonant. Griffiths was born December 8, 1823, at Ty Gwin, Llanllyfin, Carnarvonshire, North Wales.

The region just east of Loomis was settled mainly by farmers from England, so it is only natural that Newcastle should be named in memory of a homeland city.

There is considerable uncertainty as to the naming of Auburn, the county seat of Placer County. The town grew up along what was known as Auburn Ravine. In 1849, the settlement was variously called North Fork, Dry Diggings, and Wood's Dry Diggings after Folin S. Wood, who was thought to have been a member of Stevenson's Regiment. In the fall of the same year appeared the first reference to the mining camp as Auburn. The "History of Northern California" states, "Late in 1849 a public meeting was held for the purpose of selecting a more suitable name for the town. The name Auburn was adopted at the suggestion of Mr. H. N. House, who had come from Auburn, N. Y." It is certain, however, that Goldsmith's "Sweet Auburn, loveliest village of the plain, where health and plenty cheer each laboring swain," could hardly have inspired the naming of the town, as the site of Auburn is lacking in anything that can be called a plain.

Bowman was named by the Postoffice Department in honor of Harry H. Bowman, who was the first man to go into extensive fruit growing in this region.

In the early days a sawmill was built on Clipper Creek, known as the Clipper Mill, which cut lumber for the miners and others in the vicinity. The gap, or pass, in the hills there, where the teams went through to the mill, was called the Clipper Gap. Later, while the railroad was being built, a construction camp was established there and quite a town sprang up which became known officially as Clipper Gap.

Applegate was first settled by Lisbon Applegate in 1849, and the settlement acquired the name of Lisbon in his honor. Before being formally named, the place was referred to as Bear River House. In 1885 a postoffice was established with George W. Applegate, son of the Pioneer, as postmaster. Later it was decided by the townspeople to change the name of Lisbon to Applegate in honor of both father and son.

The name of New England Mills was derived from the fact that some New Englanders operated a sawmill in the vicinity. The mail was brought in by butcher wagon three times a week, so in 1886 the settlers decided on petitioning for a postoffice. The Postoffice Department rejected New England Mills as being too long, and finally the name of Weimar was selected from a long list submitted. The name of Weimar honors the Indian chief of the tribes in the Grass Valley region, although the name is spelled variously "Weimah" and "Wemeh." His tribe was for a time in conflict with the whites, and considerable blood was shed until their removal to a reservation. Old Weimah proved a paternal leader of his people, and encouraged them to adopt and carry on various agricultural and industrial pursuits. The name of New England Mills is still used by the railroad to designate its station.

Colfax was named in 1865 by the officials of the Central Pacific for Schuyler Colfax, who was candidate for vice-president with General Grant. During that same year Colfax was making an extended tour of northern California, which may have influenced the naming of this place in his honor. Colfax was born in the City of New York in 1823, and was a grandson of General William Colfax, who commanded George Washington's bodyguards throughout the Revolutionary War. He served as Republican speaker of the House for three terms. Half a mile below Colfax was Illinoistown, lining both sides of the stage road at its junction with the Iowa Hill road, and originally settled by emigrants from Illinois. It was at one time a very busy place, a regular stop for stages and freighters, but when the railroad came all Illinoistown moved up to the railroad and became part of Colfax, and nothing remains of the old settlement but a marker erected by the Native Sons.

We now leave the region famous for its mountain fruits, and climb the ridges until we encounter the mountains proper. Gold Run is the first stop, where considerable country is still torn up and bare of vegetation, due to whole mountain sides being washed out in the quest for gold. A "run" of auriferous gravel was discovered and worked in this region, supposed to have been the one-time river bed of an ancient stream that was exposed with the erosion of the present mountain spurs. The settlement was originally called Mountain Springs, when it was a trading post far removed from the stage road, and mail and supplies were packed by trail from Illinoistown to the American River, then up the river to another trail that led to Mountain Springs. The name "Gold Run" was adopted in 1873 by the Postoffice Department.

Next we reach Dutch Flat, one of the few old California mining towns that exists today in appearance and spirit almost the same as it did in the early days, mellowed only by the touch of time on its old buildings that line the slope of the main street. At first the only residents here were Joseph Dornbeck and his son, Germans, who erected a cabin on the flat that later became the townsite. In order to get supplies they had to send over to Mountain Springs, now Gold Run, and the storekeeper there referred to delivering the purchases to the "Dutchman's Flat," as it was the best description of their location he could think to give. In time this became contracted to Dutch Flat. It was a later resident of Dutch Flat, Dr. Strong, who first traced a feasible route over the Sierra for a rail line, with a continuous ridge that would supply a negotiable grade for steam trains. He called this to the attention of Theodore Judah, and together they made a preliminary survey for a route, which they used to interest the four Sacramento merchants who made history by driving the first transcontinental railroad over this route. Dr. Strong became a member of the first board of directors of the Central Pacific.

Alta was a creation of the railroad when, in 1866, it marked the limit of construction. The selection of the name, a Spanish word meaning "high," is appropriate, as the station is 3,800 feet above sea level. The establishing of the

THE MASTER CALLED, AND ONE OF the most faithful and untiring workers in His earthly vineyard—Mrs. Annie L. Adair—responded to the summons January 4. No better woman ever lived; she pointed the way upward and onward for all humankind. Surviving her are two sons, Joseph A. Jr. and Aubury L. Adair, and two sisters, Mary K. Corcoran and Julia G. Smith.

Annie L. Adair was born in Mariposa, December 6, 1870. In early childhood, she was very studious, seeking knowledge in all that was beautiful and elevating. In young womanhood, she was a teacher in the Yosemite Valley and Mariposa County.

Mrs. Adair became a charter member of Mariposa Parlor No. 63 N.D.G.W. in 1891. When, in 1911, she, with her husband, the late Joseph A. Adair, at one time district attorney of Mariposa County, and sons, came to Los Angeles, she transferred her membership to Los Angeles Parlor No. 124. She was a frequent delegate to Grand Parlors, and during the incumbency of Grand President Dr. Mariana Bertola served the Order as grand inside sentinel.

In 1916, Mrs. Adair enlisted actively in the homeless children work of the Native Sons and Native Daughters, and until the day of her passing she gave untiring devotion to that most worthy cause. For years, she was the secretary of the Los Angeles N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. Joint Homeless Children Committee.—C.M.H.

TO THE READERS OF THE GRIZZLY BEAR MAGAZINE—NATIVE SONS AND DAUGHTERS AND OTHERS, MEANING YOU, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

A new California book is just out, written by Herman W. Frank, a pioneer of Los Angeles, which is a most interesting and authentic contribution to the books of California history, titled "Scrap Book of a Western Pioneer." Writing as an interested spectator, the author has created a story through the pages of which many local personages, some of them yet living, move like the characters in a drama. As a basis for the work, he started a scrap book as early as 1881, and he includes a readable diary of a trip around the world.

You, as a native son or daughter, should be interested in this book. You may own an autographed copy of this limited edition, now for sale in all book stores of Los Angeles.

The price is $5.00. Book has 300 pages, 36 inserts, with handsome cover. Superior quality paper and binding.

We quote: "Mr. Frank has written an autobiography which is one of the most fascinating contributions to the history of California that we have ever read," says W. Irvin Brennan, Sales Director Times-Mirror Press. "Local characters and color from the early days of Los Angeles, and even down to the city of today, make a tale which reads like one of Horatio Alger's immortal stories of success. Far from being a eulogy, however, of Mr. Frank, a great deal of its interest comes from his mention of the many characters whom you may have known also."

MEMORIAL TO NATIVE DAUGHTER.

Beverly Hills formally opened to the public January 5 one of its public parks which has been given over entirely to a collection of cacti from the home-gardens of Mrs. Frances Bullard, who passed away in February 1932. A huge boulder in the park bears a bronze plaque inscribed: "A Memorial to the Donor, Frances E. Bullard, California Native Daughter, Life Time Collector of Cacti. 1863-1932."

Charles G. Adams, president Southern California Cacti Association, in a brief address stated this collection of cacti is one of the four finest and most valuable in the world. He stated that the donor, prior to her demise, requested of her surviving son, John A. Bullard, a member of Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W., that the collection be placed in a park for the enjoyment of the public.

Mrs. Bullard was a native of Anaheim, Orange County, a daughter of Theodore A. Schmidt, one of the founders, in 1856, of that city. She was a charter member of Felicidad Parlor No. 52 N.D.G.W., which was instituted in Anaheim, but years ago ceased to exist.

RENEW BONDS OF FRATERNALISM.

Officers of Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W., with Fred A. L. Staebler as president, were installed January 4 by District Deputy Daniel McSweeny, who was assisted by District Deputy Burrel D. Neighbours and Walter Baskerville. Walter H. Odemar, retiring junior past president, was presented with an emblematic ring, Superior Judge Ruben S. Schmidt, retiring president, making the presentation address. The Parlor has approved proposed legislation to curb the activities of those who would overthrow the government by force.

One of the outstanding social events to be given this year by Ramona is the annual banquet to be held the evening of February 6 at the Mayfair hotel. Under the leadership of Past Grand Herman C. Lichtenberger, a snappy program has been arranged. Tickets, at $1.75 each, are available at the office of Secretary John V. Scott. The affair will be informal. "If you seek new inspiration in the ideals of our Order," says First Vice-president Clarence S. Hunt, "if you desire to renew the bonds of fraternalism, do not fail to attend this get-together." February 8, the Parlor will have initiation. February 15, the regular monthly birthday dinner; eligibles welcome. February 22, instructive and entertaining talk on George Washington.

N.D.G.W.—VALENTINE DANCE—N.S.G.W.

February 14, 8:30 p.m., at Knights of Columbus Hall, Ninth and Bonnie Brae streets, Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. and Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. will give an informal Valentine Day dance to which all Natives and their friends will be welcomed. Good music will be provided, and a genuine good time is assured.

Leonie Clos and C. Harry Davis, chairmen of the joint arrangements committee, are being assisted by Emma Lazzarevich, Edna Trombatore, Juanita Porter, Olinda Kerby, Louise McNary, Evelyn Trautwein, Walter Fisher, Walter Smith, James Van Austin, John Welch, Sidney Witkowski and Michael Botello.

BEAR FLAG FOR RESTORED ADOBE.

Glendale—Verdugo Parlor No. 240 N.D.G.W. had initiation January 8, when Supervising Deputy Gertrude Tuttle and a delegation from Californiana Parlor were visitors. Grand Trustee Hazel Hansen was given a Bear Flag to present to the old adobe on Dorothy drive, for the restoration of which she worked hard the past year. The flag was presented by Ada Steele, who also gave one to the Parlor for parade use. A successful card party was held at the home of Ione Gillett, January 12.

Officers of Verdugo were publicly installed January 29 by Supervising Deputy Tuttle, Ione Gillett becoming president. Grand Trustee Hansen was chairman of the evening, and Native Sons acted as ushers. Dancing and light refreshments followed the ceremonies.

OLD SHASTA

(GEO. E. MORRILL.)

Old Shasta's walls are crumbling fast,
Mo[illegible] the [illegible] past,
The [illegible] and [illegible] mine [illegible]
In the [illegible] of [illegible].

Lo! town was once as rich as mine,
Where gold was scooped [illegible] bed,
But years ago the mines played out,
And so the miners fled.

They fled to other mining camps
And left old Shasta bare
And soon the [illegible] followed
But they left the [illegible] there.

The empty rooms are filled with spooks,
You hear them in the wind
Or maybe 'tis the ghosts of yore,
But they make a weak heart quail.

You find a filling station there,
An old time livery stable,
The Masonic Hall is still in use
As it was in days of yore.

The names of heroes long since gone,
Who mastered stage and team,
Are mounted on granite shafts
To keep their memories green.

Naught else is there but memories
Of a golden age now fled,
An age as rich in romance true
As the world has ever known.

Thanks, thanks to you, Old Shasta,
For the wealth you gave the State,
You have our love, Old Shasta,
Your gold has made us great.

(This contribution to The Grizzly Bear was accompanied by the following statement from George E. Morrill. "I am enclosing some verses on the old town of Shasta, in Shasta County, about seven miles west of the up to date little city of Redding.

"After many years separated from this quaint old town, I visited it again last year and found conditions just as I have pictured them in the enclosed verses. When one stands in the middle of Main street today in this old, dear town, he can hardly believe that only a few years ago, but not a thriving, hustling, bustling city of over ten thousand people, with the most palatial hotel between Sacramento and Portland."

THANKS FOR KINDNESSES.

From Past Grand Stella Finkeldey of Santa Cruz, Chairman Grand Parlor Veterans Welfare Committee, under date of January 18, The Grizzly Bear received the following:

"I am very glad to report that to date 138 Parlors have sent in their contributions to the veterans welfare fund, and hope we may be able to carry on our program as in the past. Enclosed find copies of letters received from Arizona and Los Angeles Administration Facilities." Here are the letters:

"We wish to acknowledge receipt, December 8th, of the box of little hard candies sent by your organization for use in our Christmas cups. Thank you for getting the candy here so nice and early. Also, please extend our thanks and appreciation once again to the members of the Native Daughters of the Golden West for your generous donation toward a happy Christmas at this hospital. Extending to you and your organization the greetings of the season we are, sincerely yours, MISS FRANCES MAYNARD, Senior Recreational Aide. Approved: W. E. Chambers, M. D., Manager. Veterans Administration Facilty, Whipple, Arizona, Dec. 14, 1934."

"With the large amount of candy you sent us for Christmas, our dietician also served it on New Years Day, which we did not expect to do. We have enjoyed candies you have sent for four holidays, Hallowe'en, Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Years. If you can send us a supply for Easter, as you mention in your letter, we will appreciate it and will enjoy having it to serve. Thank you, for the many valuable kindnesses your organization has shown this hospital over a long period of years—we believe as long as Whipple has been a hospital. With very best wishes to you and your organization throughout the year, we are, sincerely yours MISS FRANCES MAYNARD, Senior Recreational Aide. Approved: W. E. Chambers, M.D., Manager. Whipple, Arizona, Jan 8, 1935."

"The box of prizes forwarded by you from the Contra Costa County Parlors of the Native Daughters of the Golden West has reached us safely. We are very glad to have these additional prizes from your organization and have so written Mrs. Margaret M. Delp. Your letter will be kept with the box of prizes and your suggestions, which we have always found of such help, will be followed out. Thanking you for your wonderful help, very truly yours, H. JAMES, M. D., Manager, Veterans Administration Facility, Tucson, Arizona, Dec. 14, 1934."

"Merry Christmas—there's magic in the words and what a wealth of love, joy and happiness it suggests—a beautiful vital sentiment no words can express. We say it at least once a year, and observe it essentially as an old fashioned celebration. Among the theme of conversation of the disabled Veterans of the National Military Home, and the pleasure and anticipation of the coming event in no way overshadows their memory of your generous, thoughtful efforts for their behalf during the past year. May Christmas bring you gladness and the New Year greet you with success. Very truly yours, DONALD DUNCAN, Recreational Clerk. Veterans Administration Facility, Los Angeles, California, December 22, 1934."

Homeless Children

A WORTHWHILE NON-SECTARIAN ENDEAVOR SPONSORED AND SUPPORTED BY THE ORDERS OF NATIVE SONS AND NATIVE DAUGHTERS OF THE GOLDEN WEST

SADNESS HAS COME INTO THE RANKS of the Native Daughters and Native Sons of the Golden West because of the death of Annie L. Adair, a courageous, unselfish woman who for nearly twenty years devoted every waking moment to the interest of the homeless children's work. She was a member of Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W., secretary of the Los Angeles Joint Committee of Native Sons and Native Daughters, and for many years was in charge of the Los Angeles branch of the Central Committee on Homeless Children.

Those who were identified with Mrs. Adair as members of the Order and as co-workers, and the foster-parents who have enjoyed her friendly visits and heery smile, have appreciated the little woman's devotion to the homeless children's charity. They have known her kindliness of spirit, the goodness of her heart, her tolerance, and her eagerness to spread happiness among children and homes. Those who have watched her battle against failing health mourn that a brave heart has been stilled, and are conscious that a great loss has come to the members of the Orders, to her multitude of friends, and to the state which she so dearly loved.

The receipts of the Central Committee for the month of December 1934 were $1,410.42. Native Sons Parlors, $264.31; Native Daughters Parlors, $517.37; Native Daughters personal, $7.50; Native Daughters milk fund, $138.00; joint contributions, $70.00; Alameda County Parlors, $195.00; friends, $80.00; refund on board, $138.24. Total receipts from the two Orders, $1,192.18, and from other contributors $218.24. Disbursements for December were $1,398.10. Disbursements from April 1, 1934, to January 1, 1935, totaled $14,256.23.

Fort Bragg Parlor No. 210 N.D.G.W. has paid in full for six-weeks milk for "Marjorie Mae." San Andreas Parlor No. 113 N.D.G.W. sent $257 toward the milk fund.

SAN FRANCISCO

WILLIAM JOSEPH WYNN, ONE OF the best known and most sincere members of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, died January 4, survived by a wife, Mrs. Nellie Wynn, and three sons, Harold, Wm. J. Jr. and Mervyn Wynn. He was born near Rincon Hill, San Francisco, June 12, 1860.

Deceased was the organizer and a charter member of Rincon Parlor No. 72, and almost continuously since 1885 represented that Parlor at the Grand Parlor. He filled all the offices in the Parlor, being financial secretary from July 1915 to July 1931. He served San Francisco as a member of the Board of Supervisors and as a representative in the Federal Congress.

Funeral services for "Billy" Wynn were attended by many Native Sons, including Grand President Chas. A. Koenig and other grand officers and past grand presidents. In the course of a eulogy, John A. Gilmour, recording secretary of Rincon Parlor about thirty years, said:

"It has pleased the Almighty Father to take unto Himself our beloved member, William J. Wynn, from whose lips no words of malice ever were spoken. His cheerful disposition and loyalty to friends endeared him to us. To know 'Billy' Wynn was to admire and love him for his fine and generous nature. He had no bad habits, was loyal to his friends, had no enemies, and was faithful to his wife and family.

"We share in the loss and bereavement of his good wife and family, for it is not easy to give up those who hold large places in our hearts and affections. But the pain is lessened by the knowledge that in his going there was a supreme faith in the mystery of the unknown, a confidence that a greater and better life awaited. May we find comfort in J. Whitcomb Riley's beautiful poem:

" 'I cannot say, and I will not say,
That he is dead. He is just away!
With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand
He has wandered into an unknown land,
And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be, since he lingers there.
And you, O you, who the wildest yearn
For the old time step and the glad return,
Think of him faring on, as dear
In the love of There as the love of Here;
Think of him still as the same, I say;
He is not dead. He is just away!' "

OUTLOOK BRIGHTER.

With retail trade recording marked improvement, attention during the next few months will center on developments that might cause the durable industries to join the business upturn, says President Parker S. Maddux of The San Francisco Bank. Highly significant is the slow but steady rise in demand for real estate, which already has caused some improvement in values.

With a housing shortage existing in many communities, the steady easing of credit conditions should usher in a period of pronounced building activity. That, of course, would directly benefit many allied lines of trade and would prove an important force in stimulating employment.

Natural factors, together with the steps being taken by the administration, brighten the outlook for 1935 business. And it is to be hoped that the state and national legislative bodies will aid the recovery movement by constructive action.

WINS BASKETBALL CHAMPIONSHIP.

In a game which required five minutes of overtime play to decide, and had the crowd on their feet throughout, Golden Gate Parlor No. 29's basketball team re-gained possession of the Jas. A. Wilson trophy, emblematic of the state N.S.G.W. basketball championship, by defeating the team of Stockton Parlor No. 7 by a score of 28 to 26.

Although leading for most of the second half, Golden Gate overcame a one-point lead, with less than thirty seconds of play remaining, when Damozonio made good on a foul throw. This makes the fifth time Golden Gate has held the trophy. The competing teams included: Golden Gate—Valls, Damozonio, Kotta, Laberrigue, Martenelli, Mortola, Papia and Pineda. Stockton—Rosacco, Legarra, J. Mulcahy, Alders, B. Mulcahy, Marnoch, J. Ospital, P. Ospital and Morotti.

RITES FOR CALIFORNIA PIONEER.

Funeral services were held in Oakland, December 26, for Mrs. Elizabeth J. Ward, charter member of General George A. Custer Camp No. 4, United Indian War Veterans Ladies Corps, of San Francisco, who was well known to Native Sons and Daughters. She was the widow of William Mitchell Ward, one of the two survivors of the "Ward Massacre" on the old Oregon Trail in Idaho, in which twenty-three members of the Ward family and party were killed by savage Indians, August 20, 1854.

At one time the Wards were proprietors of a Saint Helena hotel, and later resided in Alameda. For the past few years Mrs. Ward lived at the Native Daughters Home in San Francisco. Both Aloha Parlor No. 106 N.D.G.W. and General George A. Custer Camp U.I.W.V., officiated at her funeral ceremonies.—V.R.W., San Francisco.

CLARA DAVIS LAMME.

To the Officers and Members of South Butte Parlor No. 226 Native Daughters of the Golden West: We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions of respect to the memory of Sister Clara Davis Lamme, our beloved first vice-president, do hereby submit the following:

That we pay loving tribute to her memory for her loyalty to our Order by her unbroken attendance of the meetings for eleven years, for her devotion to her family, and her loving consideration of others.

That we extend our sincere and heartfelt sympathy to her bereaved husband, John H. Lamme, her sons and daughter, and to her pioneer mother, Sophia Hyndman Davis, who has just attained her hundredth birthday; and further,

That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, and to The Grizzly Bear for publication, and that they be written into the minutes of the meeting.

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER

LONG COATS ARE STILL THE FAVORED styles. They are many and varied, but always romantic. Most popular, is the full-length cape of velvet, complete with all the glamour of a shakespearean costume, in black or deep jewel tones and having lines of a contrasting shade of velvet, or more sumptuously of priceless furs. Then, there is the long velvet coat still holding its own among the new arrivals, with fitted waistline and long sweeping skirt. The tiered coachman's cape of velvet is new and striking, especially when it is made of black velvet knee-length and worn over an evening gown of a vivid hue.

The brief shoulder cape of fur or velvet has its place, too, and is nice. There is, as there always has been, the long fur cape, made on more fitted lines, this year floor length, if you can afford it. There is the pastel velvet cape trimmed in fox fur dyed to match, and the waist-length cape of fox fur put together with bands of satin or velvet. The metal lame cape with fur is the most luxurious of the season's evening fashions, and the fitted waist-length tuxedo jacket, which may match the fabric and color of your evening gown.

Fabrics are becoming more and more interesting, with new ones running off the looms every day. Combinations of these different textures and combinations of contrasting colors are used to create some of the most interesting new modes.

Flannel is being used extensively for tailored pastel sports dresses. In the color field, a turquoise sport dress has a knitted scarf and gloves of ox-blood. And, of course, there are many pastels with navy blue accessories.

One of the smartest frocks to be seen in a downtown shop, for dinner and not-too-formal evening affairs, has a shirtwaist blouse of all-over beading caught at the throat with a red velvet bow. The skirt is made of black matelasse.

The little-girl "love" of fancy dress costumes has its reflection in the season's period evening gowns. There is a growingly important division of full-skirted evening costumes reminiscent of days of pomp and splendor. They are used largely in sheer fabrics, such as net or marquisette, but there is also a goodly representation of rustly silks and satins.

One effective model for dinner wear is a demure affair of pale blue taffeta with short puffed sleeves and a round collar of white. The skirt is full and long, but fitted around the hipline. The trimming consists of several rows of carding across the sleeves, and in a scroll design on the bodice and skirt.

Another frock is of white mousseline embroidered in silver polkadots. The dress itself is cut simply, with yards and yards in the soft full skirt emphasized by four rows of ruffles at the bottom. A scarf drapery of bright sapphire blue covers the shoulders and is caught into a sash, tied in front, with the ends falling to the hemline.

They have buttoned us up the front and down the back and now they are buttoning us up the side. A row of big buttons under the arm and down the side is the newest fastening for tunics and coat dresses conceived by the designers to add a dash of variety to the mid-season picture. Very effective on a bright wool tunic.

One tunic was seen of bright green jersey, with big slate-gray bone buttons down the side, a slate-gray belt buckle, and a bandanna of gray silk with big green and black polkadots. It was worn, of course, with a gray skirt to match. Other tunics, knee-length or shorter, are made in the approved shirtwaist style, gathered onto a yoke and having a row of little buttons up the front, a small stand-up collar, a narrow belt and patch pockets. A coat dress of bright green plaid woolen has a high russian neckline with buttons across one shoulder, under the arm and all the way down the side.

The newest accessories with bright red or wine-colored sports frocks are gray toques, gloves, handbags and suede shoes. Rich wine tones such as burgundy, claret, sherry and port are the favorites for formals. A picture dress of burgundy slipper satin, for instance, is demure with short sleeves, draped bodice and full graceful skirt that touches the floor all the way around. The neckline is cut low. Gold sandals with jeweled buckles on their slender straps are visible only occasionally, beneath the long flowing skirt.

Navy blue and brown is the newest color combination seen in tailored sports frocks. We see the combination in colorful tweeds, navy blue and brown plaid tweeds, or blue woolens flecked in brown, to be worn with accessories of either color.

A smart two-piece sports frock of navy blue and brown shepherd-check featherweight tweed is tailored in shirtwaist style. This is worn with a wide, brown suede polo belt, which has triple straps and buckles, a brown suede cossack cap, brown walking shoes and handbag. Another variation of the theme is a heavy blue homespun with woven polkadots in brown. This also is worn with brown accessories.

Black jersey blouses with gray tweed suits are new. They are wearing gray in combination with all bright winter colors. Gray woolen frocks are one- or two-piece, and are nice with accessories in deep plum color or in bottle green. The old standby combination of brown and gray is still on the up and up.

The knitted ensemble is another wardrobe favorite which is taking on advance intimations of spring. The newest models reveal an interest in gray, brown, blue and beige, in contrast to the pastel and jewel tones.

Mauve, that long-neglected step-child of the color family, has suddenly been chosen for the most dazzling honors, and now emerges as the pet of the oncoming season. It is a natural reaction from the vivid reds and greens, which led the parade this winter. Do not mistake me, for these are still important, but the mauve boom is getting under way and is being taken up by the ultra set and will reach its hight with spring.

The long-forgotten pansy and modest violet have been pulled from their hiding places. Pansies will bloom on spring hats, and there will be lilacs, too. The girl who likes to go in for garden frocks and picture hats will be in her glory with the flower-laden hats of spring.

Just now, pastel hats of soft tailored lines are made of extremely soft fabrics, tinted in delicate flower shades. We will be wearing such a hat above a wash frock of silk or cotton as the season advances. These hats are poked draped into jaunty lines, and the trimmings a grosgrain ribbon, sometimes stuck with a brig feather quill.

Reports coming from the Los Angeles County Grand Jury are letting the people "in" on the rottenness prevailing in government in the angel-land—rottenness which appears to afflict nearly every department. But, nothing has been, and probably will not be, done to right conditions.

Well, there's nothing truer than the statement that the people get exactly the kind of government they desire. Conditions in Los Angeles County, and otherwheres, could, and would, be righted in a jiffy, if the people so willed. If, however, the people are content or don't care, conditions will grow worse—and they should!

General Hugh S. Johnson, former NRA administrator, had an article in the Saturday Evening Post, titled "The Future," in which he said:

"Men can't go back to work unless money goes back to work, and money won't go back unless those who have it or are responsible for it know that no magic is going to frisk it away like fairy gold turning into crisp and colored autumn leaves. It is clear that recovery awaits only an impeccable assurance in deeds, not words, that no such thing will happen. That is all there is to it. It could be done immediately. And unless it is done promptly, there is no end in sight."

The United States Supreme Court has decided, in a case on appeal from New Jersey, that chain stores are subject to special taxes. Said the Court:

"A chain is a distinctive business species, with its own capacities and functions. Broadly speaking, its opportunities and powers become greater with the number of the component links and the greater they become the more far reaching are the consequences both social and economic. For that reason the State may tax the large chains more heavily than the small ones, and upon a graduated basis. Not only may it do this, but it may make the tax so heavy as to discourage multiplication of the units to an extent believed to be inordinate and, by the incidence of the burden, develop other forms of industry."

Here's a source of new taxes for California, but Governor Merriam has not suggested tapping it! He does, however, favor increasing the sales tax.

POPULAR NATIVE SON PASSES

WILLIAM ISHAM TRAEGER, PAST Grand President of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, died January 20 at the National Military Home, Sawtelle, to the hospital of which he had been taken from his Los Angeles home because of serious illness. Surviving him are his wife, Mrs. Ruth McAllister-Traeger, a member of Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W., and two daughters, Mrs. Laura Martin and Miss Frances Traeger. He was born at Porterville, Tulare County, February 26, 1880.

Past Grand Traeger's activity in the Order of Native Sons dated from July 10, 1903, when he affiliated with Ramona Parlor No. 109 of Los Angeles. He first attended the Grand Parlor in 1912, as a delegate to the Thirty-fifth (Fresno)

WILLIAM I. TRAEGER, P.G.P.

Session from Ramona. At the Thirty-sixth (Oroville 1913) Session he was elected a Grand Trustee, was elevated to the Grand Presidency at the Forty-fourth (Stockton 1921) Session, and presided at the Forty-fifth (Oakland 1922) Session. Addressing the members of the Grand Parlor following his installation as Grand President at Stockton, he said:

"Brothers, this is your Order. If it is worth while to you, it is worth your time to boost and advertise it and its work to all native Californians. If you value your membership in the Order, you ought to value it enough to have someone not now a member share it with you. If you are interested in the Order's work, you ought to be enough interested to take the time to tell someone about it and to secure him and in it. Let us unite our efforts, for the Order's sake . . . To our Order, let us pledge our best efforts, unceasingly, untiringly, and unselfishly." And that was the keynote of the address of the most popular member of the Order on the occasion of his last appearance at a Native Son gathering, in Santa Monica, December 1934.

In public life, William I. Traeger was best known as the sheriff of Los Angeles County in which capacity he served for twelve years, from 1921 to 1933, and brought about notable improvements in the conduct of that department of the county government. Previous to becoming sheriff, he was a deputy United States marshal, a deputy sheriff, and a deputy clerk of the California Supreme Court. In November 1932 he resigned as sheriff, having been elected a Representative in the Federal Congress from the fifteenth district. He was a devout American, and enlisted in the service of the United States for the Spanish-American and the World Wars.

People by the thousands, from all walks of life, gathered in and about Patriotic Hall, January 23, to bid farewell to "Bill" Traeger. Their presence and the wealth of exquisite flowers testified to his general popularity. Services were conducted there by the Native Sons, the American Legion and the Masons. Officiating for the former were Grand President Chas. A. Koenig and Past Grand Presidents Herman C. Lichtenberger, Thomas Monahan and John T. Newell. Other grand officers in attendance were Grand Third Vice-president Eldred L. Meyer, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Treasurer John A. Corotto, Grand Marshal William A. Reuter and Grand Trustee Donald E. VanLuven.

At the conclusion of these services, the flag-draped casket was conveyed by the active pallbearers—Sheriff Eugene W. Biscailuz, City Marshal Charles R. Thomas, Edwin A. Meserve, Louis A. Duni, Undersheriff Arthur C. Jewell, Luther McGahan, Herman C. Lichtenberger and John T. Newell—to a gun caisson and, headed by the band of Police Post of the American Legion, the march to the cemetery began. There, the burial service was conducted by the United Spanish War Veterans, and taps were sounded.

"Bill" Traeger—big hearted, jovial, faithful, loyal, and honest and upright in all his dealings—has departed, but in memory he will live forever.—C.M.H.

SUCH WERE THE FRENCH OF CALIfornia and of San Francisco in particular. Far removed from their homeland, among an alien population, deprived, many of them, of a fair chance in the mines and forced to live by their wits in a gold-mad city, it is not remarkable that when the opportunity was offered, many of the more adventurous among them should accept the proposals of the Mexican government and go as colonists to the frontier of Sonora, where fabulous riches were supposed to await them. They had small encouragement either to remain in California or to return to France. Numbers of them, as has been noted, had had military experience and most were willing to seek a livelihood by any means which presented itself. The land being provided, gold-hunger on the one side and the desire of the Mexicans for colonists on the other, made easy the way to mutual agreement. Nor was it difficult for the French to see in Sonora larger opportunities than mere mining, once they learned the political situation therein.

Dr. Wyllys concludes his study of "The French in Sonora" with: It remains for us to consider the international importance of the California French in Sonora. We have already noted the effect of their expeditions on the relations of the United States and Mexico. But what was the connection, official or otherwise, between France and her wayward sons in remote Sonora? It will be long before the facts in this matter are definitely known, but we may hazard a few conclusions drawn from the available evi dence. . . .

Conscientious French scholars, while admitting the possibility of a connection between the French Empire and Raousset, are sincerely doubtful of its existence. Admitting that Louis Napoleon might have seen advantages in supporting Raousset if the latter had been successful, it remains to be proved that support was actually given the filibuster in preparing his enterprises. Encouragement was of course extended to him by LeVasseur and Dillon, perhaps at the instigation of Paris. But it was of the transitory kind often held out to promising adventurers and withdrawn at their failure or increased at their success. The most valid argument, perhaps, for assuming a connection between the Count and the imperial master of France is the similarity of their ideas with regard to the checking of the United States and the establishment of a French foothold in Mexico. But Louis Napoleon has never been given great credit for originality and it is quite possible that, without having sanctioned any of their schemes, he may have imbibed the ideas of Dommartin, LeVasseur, and Raousset-Boulbon. At his strongest, Raousset was never a serious danger to Mexico as a whole; and we may assume that if Louis Napoleon had really desired to help him, more active steps would have been taken for his support.

As for the mass of the French adventurers into Sonora, they were of a vanishing type, as were also the contemporary Anglo-American filibusters. With the debacle of Raousset-Boulbon, French filibustering and enterprise from California into Sonora practically came to an end. The conduct of the people of Sonora in 1852 and 1854 convinced the California French that their assistance as revolutionists was not desired. They were welcome as individual settlers and merchants, but not as liberators. Had the French expeditions been better organized and financed; had they possessed leaders with practical ability as well as courage and imagination; had they received substantial support from France; and had they been less hampered by Anglo-American filibusters and officials, no doubt they might have had prospects of success. As it was, misfortunes and incompetence impeded them at every step and made their failure certain.

But there was a Mexican side to the question, too, as it has been the purpose of this study to demonstrate. To the Mexicans, the French were at first a means of checking the advance of Anglo-American settlement and excellent auxiliaries to the system of frontier military colonies. When it was discovered that the California French were also susceptible to the temptations of "manifest destiny," the Mexicans became more wary. Had not Santa Anna's cunning overreached itself, there would probably have been no French battalion in 1854. As it was, the events of July, 1854, proved that the French of California were as potentially dangerous to the territorial integrity of Mexico as were the Anglo-Americans; possibly more so, because being Latins they better understood the Spanish Mexicans.

We may summarize here, then, the main points which this study has endeavored to make clear: first, Mexico's need of adequate frontier population and defense; second, the availability of Latin Europeans in California for the military colonial scheme; third, the economic motives which drew most of the California French to Sonora; fourth, the perversion of a harmless French penetration of Sonora into a rebellion led by a daring French adventurer; fifth, the persistent efforts of this same adventurer to push his plans still farther by taking advantage of a change of government in Mexico and of the mistakes of the new regime; and sixth, the series of fortuitous circumstances which made it possible for him to have a last desperate fling at the game of empire—and his failure.

Thus were the California French defeated in their design to find homes and fortune in Sonora—defeated as much by their own characteristics and misfortunes as by Mexican patriotism, for at best the latter was torpid and slow. Largely by a chain of accidents the fair state of Sonora remains today, as it was in 1854, "a lost province" to the filibuster, and still an integral part of the Mexican republic.

ECONOMIC DEPRESSION

illustrate the dependency of all sections of the country on each other. Both evidence the fact that but rarely are depressions less than national movements.

No one man may be credited as the hero of the depression of 1854-58. John Bigler, John Neely Johnson and John B. Weller, the three governors of the period, did their best to maintain order while chaos reigned. But the greatest single factor for stability and reconstruction was the Vigilance Committee, organized in San Francisco in 1856. This group of men were pledged to stopping widespread crime, which was responsible for so much of the disorder. As Hunt says: "The fruits of vigilance were not lost." The reform which they brought about in government permeated the social structure as well.

From what has been said, the reader will see that a depression is essentially a result of moral decline. With the re-establishment of ethical business relations, prosperity returns, however slowly. Following the depression of 1854-58 California embarked on a period of real prosperity, a prosperity based on sound business laws. The years from 1860 to 1872 were years in which the merchants and bankers, farmers and miners of California truly enjoyed the blessings of plenty.

Let us, therefore, face the future with hope. Depressions of the past have invariably lifted as the present crisis is lifting. The years to come will bring prosperity fully as great as those happy years after the depression of 1854-58.

"GOLDEN LEGENDS" VIEWED BY MILLIONS

More than a million people witnessed the forty-sixth annual Rose Tournament parade at Pasadena, Los Angeles County, January 1. "Golden Legends" was the theme, and the display was gorgeous beyond description.

Santa Barbara City was awarded the sweepstakes prize. Its float, "The Jay and the Peacock," depicting an old Aesop fable, was constructed entirely of flowers gathered from the gardens of that city.

Credit is the lengthened shadow of cash. Both are essential to business, but there is no question which weighs more heavily in the scales of opportunity.

Generally, the man who increases his substance adds proportionately to his credit, for thrift is recognized as a mark of sound character.

PLACE NAMES ALONG THE EMIGRANT TRAIL

Henry W. Turk

EMIGRANT GAP RECORDS THE FACT that here the emigrants passed over a gap or pass down to the headwaters of the Bear River, and then followed the trail toward Nevada City. The descent into Bear Valley was the last obstacle encountered on the long trail to "Californy," and until quite recently the marks were still visible that emigrants made as they lowered their cumbersome wagons by means of ropes hitched around tree trunks or attached to iron stakes. The Gap is half a mile above the present town, and the name of Emigrant Gap was given to the postoffice about the same time the Central Pacific established its station there, in 1866.

Between Emigrant Gap and Truckee we find only scattered habitations, for we are in the realm of the hunter and fisherman, but the names of some of the places along the railroad may be of interest. Smart is a spur site named for Joseph Smart, who shipped lumber from this place. Below us, by the way, is a broad, blue expanse of Lake Spaulding, an artificial lake where water is stored for power and irrigation. It was named for John Spaulding, a famous stage driver of his time who turned to mining and later took over the water properties along the South Yuba and organized the South Yuba Water & Mining Company. Crystal Lake is a station that derives its name from a lake of the same name a short distance above it, along the old highway. The lake water is crystal clear, confined in a natural bowl of solid granite, and is the home of some good-sized trout that can be caught if you are smarter than they are.

Cisco was named by the officials of the Central Pacific for John J. Cisco. The United States Official Register for 1863 states that John J. Cisco was an assistant treasurer of the United States, employed in New York. He was a native of New York City and had been appointed from that place. It can be surmised that Cisco may have been of considerable assistance to the "Big Four" in their early financial difficulties, that they should have honored him in this manner. Originally, about 1864, the place was known as Heaton's, when it was a station for stages and freighters on the Donner Lake Wagon Road to the silver mines in Nevada. In June 1866, Heaton's was surveyed into lots, and in November the Central Pacific was completed to that point, the cars commenced running, and the name changed to Cisco. It remained the terminus of the road until 1868 while work progressed on the summit tunnel that was the last barrier for the heroic railroaders in conquering the Sierra. During this time Cisco was a very busy place, crowded with many freight wagons and goods, stages and travelers. At present nothing is left of its former importance. In summer it attracts the hunter and fisherman while in winter it shares with Soda Springs in this section as a place for snow sports, an activity which is rapidly gaining popularity in California.

Just before reaching the summit we pass Lake Van Norden, another storage reservoir, named for Dr. Charles Van Norden, at one time a Presbyterian minister at Elmira, N. Y., who came West in 1900 to take charge of the South Yuba Water Company, and resided in Auburn for many years. The lake fills a depression formerly known as Summit Valley. The railroad headquarters on the lake shore is known as Norden, after the lake. Summit, on the Southern Pacific, at an altitude of 7,050 feet, is appropriately named, while the summit of the highway close by is shown as 7,135 feet.

Here we obtain our first view of the eastern slope of the Sierra, with the gray-green water of beautiful Donner Lake just below us. The experiences of the Donner Party are too well known to require repetition here, but the railroad has named one of its sites, Donner, because it overlooks the lake. Farther down we come to Andover, named by a former division superintendent, W. H. Whitney, after the place of his birth, Andover, Massachusetts. Stanford another railroad site, was named for Governor Leland Stanford, one of the founders of the Central Pacific.

Truckee was named for a Northern Paiute chief called Captain Truckee, who guided Fremont and others over the Sierra. Fremont discovered the Truckee River while accompanied by Chief Truckee, and called it the Salmon Trout River on account of the quantities of fish abounding in its waters. The name was later changed to honor the Indian, who earned the

AT WASHINGTON CATHEDRAL, WASHington, D. C., Right Reverend James E. Freeman, D.D., LL.D., D.C.L., Bishop of Washington, delivered a sermon, March 4, 1934, overflowing with goodness and excellent advice. The conditions that prompted the sermon, continue to exist. Dishonesty—with its resultant heinous crimes, general moral breakdown, and racketeering everywhere, in and out of government,—continues to reign and challenges the very existence of this Nation. Here are excerpts from the Bishop's sermon; digest his thoughts and profit from them:

"As we study the changing moods and manners of our modern world, as we observe the swiftly changing trends and tendencies of the passing days, we are compelled to wonder what is to accrue to us of value, as the result of the days of deep anxiety and strain. Is there that in our developed life that has lacked certain elements of strength and power; have we grown so strong in our own conceits and in our self-esteemed capacities to carry on that we have lost that consciousness of God dependence, that moral worth, that strength of soul that, in other days, has been the sustaining source of our security, our happiness and our peace? Have we as a people been so bent upon those things that concern material wealth and the satisfaction of our capricious desires that we have come to believe that within ourselves resided a kind of genius that would never fail us, come what might? Have we in our domestic, social and industrial life regarded ourselves as impeccable, above reproach, so clean, respectable and wholesome that we could dispense with those moral and spiritual values, those elements that refine and ennoble life, that in other days and under less favoring conditions have been our stay and strength? Are we not compelled, even against our stubborn wills, to reappraise ourselves, our institutions, our systems and our designs, that out of these days of trial and misfortune we may come to the new morning of our larger and fuller life? . . .

"No consistent appraisal of the events of recent years, whether here or in other lands, can ignore the fact that, moral laxity and supineness have been conspicuous in our life. We shall pass through every strain that is laid upon us—of this we feel sure, we shall meet and survive every crisis as it arises—of this we are certain. The large and compelling question is what shall we garner from these experiences? What shall be the evidence in our individual and corporate life that we are made the better and the stronger for that which we have suffered and endured? . . .

"Let us seek through consistent endeavor to set our house in order; let us with self sacrificing zeal consolidate our forces to hasten forward the day of better things. Let us learn out of our common sufferings and trials the value of a united endeavor, but let us not lay the flattering unction to our souls that prowess, skill and cleverness are the hallmarks of secured success and restored prosperity. Ours is a new fullness of time. A mighty and persistent cry is heard in this distracted, confused and disillusioned world; it is the cry of the human soul, the wrestling, struggling soul as it sees the light of a new day breaking. From vast multitudes it issues forth like some stupendous chorus

"This is a momentous and holy hour, an hour that challenges the very soul of America; it may be an hour that is to mark the greatest advance our Nation has ever made. It calls for the best we have to give; for decision, for consecration, for a pledge of fealty to those Christian standards of living that alone can guarantee our future happiness and peace, and, by the grace and power of the living God, make and preserve us a nation." . . .

The California Legislature goes into the second half of the 1935 session March 5. During the recess, the state has been over-fertilized, by the spenders of taxpayers' dollars, with words by the billion, in the hope of winning approval of the harvesting of a crop of millions in new taxes for the State Government. There is nothing whatever to indicate that any forceful attempt will be made to lower the excessive cost of government, by eliminating waste, inefficiency, duplication, favoritism and other forms of racketeering.

No siree! Just so long as the people continue to put up their dollars, the tax-load will be increased and increased. It's dollars, not safe, sane and economical government, that the racketeers are interested in. When the tax-dollars stop coming in, however, they'll be getting out. So, why not stop the flow of tax-dollars?

The State Finance Director remarked in the course of a Los Angeles address: "We have been criticised for not cutting State expenditures. . . . All Governor Merriam hopes to do is to carry on governmental functions as they are being carried on at present." That's just what the people do not want! They are disgusted with the carryings on of government as at present. They want a decided change—a material lessening of taxes by a reduction in government cost. The people, we believe, are getting mighty tired of excuses and buck-passing.

The United States Supreme Court, in a 5-4 decision February 18, affirmed the gold legislation of the Federal Government, and Justice James Clark McReynolds, one of the dissenters, declared "The Constitution is gone!" In the dissenting opinion, Justice McReynolds said:

"Just men regard repudiation and spoliation of citizens by their sovereign with abhorrence—but we are asked to affirm that the Constitution has granted power to accomplish both. No delegate delegation of such a power exists, and we cannot believe the farseeing framers, who labored with hope of establishing justice and securing the blessings of liberty, intended that the expected government should have authority to annihilate its own obligations and destroy the very rights which they were endeavoring to protect. Not only is there no permission for such actions, they are prohibited. And no plenitude of words can confirm them to our charter. . . .

"For the government to say, we have violated our contract but have escaped the consequences through our own statute would be monstrous. In matters of contractual obligation the government can not legislate so as to excuse itself. But, whatever may be the situation now confronting us, it is the outcome of attempts to destroy lawful undertakings by legislative action, and this we think the court should disapprove in no uncertain terms. . . . Loss of reputation for honorable dealing will bring us unending humiliation; the impending legal and moral chaos is appalling."

Koki Hirota, Japanese Minister of Foreign Affairs, addressing the Imperial Diet on "Japanese Foreign Relations," January 22, concluded with: "The road for Japan to take has long been chosen. . . . If all of us in conformance to the august will of His Majesty work together and do what lies in our power, it will not be difficult, I am sure, to surmount any obstacles we may encounter."

Certainly, the road has long been chosen, and it encircles the Hawaiian Islands and the Pacific Coast states of the United States. And it is equally certain that all Japs, including those in this country, will work together to surmount, for Japan, any and all obstacles.

In an editorial in the United States News forcefully condemning the Federal Government's avowed intention to put holding companies out of business, David Lawrence remarked:

"The federal government might as well ordain that all corporations shall hereafter cease to exist and that we should go back to stagecoach days when the coalition of two or more enterprising individuals in the carrying on of business under the corporate form was relatively unknown.

"The holding company legislation . . . is dangerous and destructive legislation however commendable its objectives. It is not worthy of legislators who take an oath to support and not destroy the Constitution. It is simply the work of those who believe in the philosophy that the end justifies the means, a philosophy that has in the past bred tyranny and ultimately revolution. The federal government is and should be the servant and not the master of the people."

Urging an extension of the act creating the NRA, President Franklin Roosevelt said in his message February 20 to the Federal Congress: "The fundamental purposes and principles of the act are sound. To abandon them is unthinkable. It would spell the return of industrial and labor chaos."

Be thankful that these Americans,—Senators Bone, Bulow, Coolidge, Donahey, Gerry, Gore, Lewis, Long, McCarran, McGill, Murphy, Murray, Reynolds, Russell, Schwellenbach, Smith, Thomas of Oklahoma, Trammell, Walsh, Wheeler, Austin, Borah, Carey, Dickinson, Frazier, Hastings, Johnson, Metcalf, Norbeck, Norris, Nye, Townsend, White, La Follette and Shipstead—uninfluenced by the pacifists and the Jap propaganda agency (the Federation of Churches of Christ in America), prevented, by their votes in the United States Senate, this Nation being forced into the League of Nations through the back door (the World Court).

A member of the Federal House of Representatives stated in Washington: "I know that 25,000 out of the 100,000 Japanese who are in California are capable of going under arms." We venture the opinion that there are at least 200,000 Japs in California, and that ninety percent of them would, in case of conflict, go under arms for Japan against the United States. And, what's most important, the Japs are colonized in strategic positions throughout the state.

The same speaker also said, "There are 150 Japanese fishing boats in Los Angeles harbor." As remarked in The Grizzly Bear about a year ago, there are several hundred Jap so-called fishing boats in California waters that could, in a few hours' time, be converted into auxiliary war craft and be of great assistance to Japan.

The Los Angeles Times is quite concerned about a bill before the State Legislature which proposes a per food tax on film, released in California. Why shouldn't such a tax be levied? It costs several thousand dollars annually to have the courts of the state wash the filthy domestic linen of those identified with the movie industry. Let the industry, therefore, dig up for the wash bill!

The Federal Census Bureau estimates the population of the United States has increased some 20,000,000—from 122,775,046 to 141,574,000—since 1930. How many of those millions, we wonder, were sent here by foreign countries for the easy-mark Americans to support.

Approximately 1,026,836 persons—one out of every six of the 6,158,000 population—are subsisting on unemployment relief in California, according to David L. Bryant, SERA state statistician. A decidedly bad situation!

Claiming New Deal legislation has created greater unemployment and lowered American living standards, the Methodist Federation of Social Service, in a summary of Federal Government recovery measures says:

"There is a relation between work relief and industrial wages. It is a vicious circle. Work relief wages are deliberately kept low so as not to compete with wages paid by industry, then they pull industrial wages downward. Instead of redistribution (of wealth) downward, which is the only way to increase purchasing power, this is redistribution upward, which has the opposite effect."

"I think we should be sympathetic toward European nations and all that, but we don't have to marry Europe," remarked the inimitable Will Rogers. "And when the country finds itself married to Europe there ain't none of this divorce in Reno by noon. Say, listen, you're tied up and goin' to find it hard to break loose. And they'd sue us for non-support."

"Possibly the next 'two-party system' in this country will be officeholders vs. taxpayers."—Mansfield, Ohio, News-Journal.

Instancing the rising cost of living: food that cost $330 in March 1933, now costs $398.64, and clothing that cost $120 in March 1933, now costs $148.20.

Commenting on Governor Merriam's budget demands for operation of the State Government, the Livermore Herald said editorially: "Considering . . . [the] recommendations individually the entire program he proposes to finance relief are unjust and exorbitant when the vast inefficiency, duplication and waste of relief are remembered. . . . All in all, the governor's tax program is one which will bear most heavily on the people least able to carry it and who will get the least from it."

Last year, Los Angeles County, at a cost of about $200,000, sent some 14,000 Mexis who were on the county's relief roll back to their homeland. Now, many of these same Mexis are returning. How do they work this out-and-in-game? The Mexis should be sent out and kept out, regardless of the desires of those who capitalize on their being here, for they are undesirable aliens.

At the November 1934 election, United States Senator Hiram W. Johnson, California's forceful and faithful representative in the upper house of the Federal Congress, received the greatest majority of votes ever cast for the office of senator anywhere in this nation. He received a total of 1,946,572 votes, the greatest vote-total ever polled by any candidate for any office in this state. And no mistake was made in that record-breaking endorsement!

A measure is before the State Legislature providing that "no alien shall receive a commercial fishing license, and that persons may receive such license only on condition that they agree the United States can use their vessels on the sea in times of war if so desired." Being needful legislation, the measure should become a law. The Jap-lobby, however, will probably again prevent its enactment!

CALIFORNIA FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

MARCH 1885 WAS THE DRIEST month of March in the weather record of California. Light showers fell on but two days, and brought only .08 of an inch of rain. This made the season's rainfall 15.72 inches. The people began to wish for rain, for since January 31 but .57 of an inch had fallen.

The California Legislature adjourned sine die March 12. The state press said that while it "did no legislative harm, the good would have to be developed later on."

The first "California Blue Book," giving state political data, was issued this month by Secretary of State Thompson.

A brilliant meteor passed south to north over California the evening of March 5. It was reported to have struck on a lava ridge in the foothills east of Chico, Butte County.

There was an annular eclipse of the sun beginning at 7:40 a.m. and ending at 9:45 a.m. March 16. It was total across a portion of California, and for a while there was a twilight haze.

A new hotel, to cost $100,000, was begun at San Luis Obispo City.

A new iron bridge, built across the Sacramento River at Red Bluff, Tehama County, was dedicated March 1.

C. P. Bailey of Santa Clara County took first prize for his exhibit of angoras at the New Orleans World's Fair.

In the vicinity of Pomo, Mendocino County, twenty-five farmers met by pre-arrangement, and plowed and seeded thirty-five acres of an invalid neighbor's farm.

In Napa County, a newspaper reported over 1,000 mortgages recorded and more than $5,000,000 borrowed on property. The mortgagors had to earn and pay some $500,000 interest each year.

A colony of forty-one people from Bordeaux, France, came to southern California to engage in viticulture.

Monroe Villa, in Los Angeles County, was claimed to be the largest vineyard in the world. It had over 4,000,000 vines.

In San Bernardino County, a gooseberry patch yielded 2,713 bushels of berries, which were sold for $1,709.

The Riverside Citrus Fair, which opened in that city March 26, was declared the best yet held.

Mendocino County had an oil excitement, as petroleum had been found in a well being sunk near Ukiah. Real estate prices boomed, and crude oil was reported being found at a depth of sixty feet.

Pioneer Jefferson Wilcoxson of Sutter County celebrated his seventy-sixth birthday by writing fourteen one-thousand-dollar checks and sending one to each of his nephews and nieces.

Dan M. Burns, former secretary of state, was acquitted March 20 by a Sacramento County Superior Court jury of embezzling state funds while in office.

The steamboat "Knight No. 2," built at Marysville, Yuba County, was completed and started March 10 on its initial trip to San Francisco. It was to ply regularly between the two cities.

Grand President John A. Steinbach instituted at Grass Valley, Nevada County, March 27, Quartz Parlor No. 58 N.S.G.W. Thos. Hocking was the president, and Robert D. Finnie the secretary.

Sacramento Parlor No. 3 N.S.G.W. celebrated in the Capital City, March 22, its seventh institution anniversary with a banquet. Members of the Sacramento Society of California Pioneers were guests. Toasts were given by Henry Clay Chipman, Robert T. Devlin and Frank D. Ryan, and a glorious time was had both by the old and the young boys. [Chipman, elected Grand President of the Order in 1881, and Ryan, elected Grand President in 1889, passed on years ago. —Editor.]

The stage from Placerville, El Dorado County, to Shingle Springs was stopped by a masked man March 27. Finding the express box fastened to the stage floor, he quit in disgust.

The stage from Sonora, Tuolumne County, to Milton met with another of its frequent holdups March 25. A masked man got away with the express box.

The stage from Mendocino County was stopped near Cloverdale, Sonoma County, March 27, and the highwayman took the express box, containing $275.

M. S. Granger, mining near Shingle Springs, El Dorado County, found a gold nugget weighing over seven pounds, valued at $1,515.

Two Brown's Flat, Tuolumne County, prospectors struck a seam that yielded $200,000 worth of gold in four days. One extracted chunk produced twenty-five pounds of the precious metal.

A pocket was found in the Blue Lizard mine, near Big Oak Flat, Tuolumne County, from which $3,000 worth of gold was taken.

The Wheat Betsy mine at Osborne Hill, Nevada County, struck a fourteen-inch-wide vein that was nearly half gold.

A fire at the corner of Fourth and Market streets, San Francisco, March 5, did $15,000 damage.

The Arrowhead Hot Springs hotel, San Bernardino County, burned March 17, causing a $15,000 loss. A few days later Proprietor Smith died of blood poisoning.

Fire in Sacramento City's Chinatown, March 3, burned two buildings in which a horde of Chinamen were sleeping. Three of them were cremated. The Chinks attributed the fire to the ghost of a Chinaman buried from one of the houses the previous day.

The Mapleson Opera Company opened a season of grand opera in San Francisco, March 2. Dress circle seats were $7 each. Adelina Patti and Emma Nevada shared honors.

A school of salmon going up a Siskiyou County creek upset a stagecoach which was fording the stream, and the horses had to be unhitched and taken ashore. The school was over a mile long, and the banks of the creek were strewn with salmon that had been crowded out of the stream.

Showing that the roe planted in California waters by the State Fish Commission six years previously was successful, the first striped bass was caught in San Francisco Bay March 4. It weighed six pounds. Now, the fish markets are teeming with striped bass weighing twenty-five pounds and more.

William H. Montgomery, one of Nevada County's earlyday sheriffs, died March 21 at Grass Valley.

Refugia Silvas and Francisco Martinez were hanged in the Los Angeles jail for murders committed in 1884. The same day, in San Francisco, Steve Jones, a Negro, was hanged for murdering his mistress in 1883.

Holden Dick, a Pit River Indian, confessed he had killed in 1883 Samuel Shaw, a miner, near Susanville, Lassen County. He decapitated him and concealed the head in a rock crevice twelve miles from the place of killing. Officers who went to the designated spot found the head.

The head of a man was found floating in Willow Creek, Siskiyou County. Further search being made, nothing was found except a coat containing $300 in coin. The coat was identified as belonging to J. R. Sabine, who had left Chico, Butte County, more than a year before with $3,000 in coin.

A CALIFORNIA MINER

Sacramento Parlor No. 3 N.S.G.W. conducted its fifth annual public speaking contest on California history for students of the Sacramento high school, January 17. Vincent Lemmon was awarded the first prize, the Irving D. Gibson trophy; the subject of his oration, a transcript of which is here presented by The Grizzly Bear, was "A California Miner." Second prize went to Marjorie Maynard, whose subject was "Indians of California;" third prize went to Joanne Zambelich, whose subject was "Origin and Application of the Name California," and fourth prize went to Albert Hamilton, whose subject was "Hiram Johnson."

IN THE YEAR 1849 THERE CAME FROM our golden west one word—one word that rang throughout a nation, one word that rang throughout a world,—and that word was gold! Men left their homes, their loved ones, their nations and, either by land or by sea, set out for California, the land where one could pick gold off the mountain sides. California was transformed over night from the lazy Mexican settlement to a seething mass of humanity.

Among those who came on the Overland Trail was a young man from the State of Illinois. His name? He had no name. We will know him as the average of the men that came here. He, like many others of his time, had fallen into debt. When he heard the cry "gold," he said goodby to his young wife and their very young baby and set out for California.

When he reached the border of the State of Illinois, he turned and looked back upon his home and said, "Farewell, Illinois! With all thy imperfections, there is an unsevered chord that binds my heart to thee. Thou holdest all that I call dear. Keep them gently within thy bounteous prairies, make the flowers spring up in their path, and for them let thy soil bring forth abundantly, and I will bless thee, Illinois." He turned his face again to the setting sun and did not look back.

He traveled, beset on all sides by Indians, across gorgeous prairies. He toiled slowly up the great Rockies and then down upon the other side; then again across picturesque plains and rivers, skirting lakes and forests. At last, on a memorable day, he arrived in California, the golden opportunity, the land of the proverbial pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. He gazed upon Sutter's Fort, a town built along the Sacramento River. Then he continued on to "Old Hangtown." Here he saw another town that had sprung up over night. He went on into the Mother Lode country and struck his claim.

Here he found himself in a new life. Constant work from day to day, nothing but coarse food and little sleep were enough to make anyone become tough. For diversion from this strenuous work, the miner's entertainment was of many kinds. When one found in his pockets money, more money than he had ever, even in his wildest dreams, dreamed about, money enough to ransom a king,—one forgot that he was a man; he became something inhuman, something more like an animal than anything else. And so, on week ends, the miner went into the towns and did what was called in those days "shooting up the town." He went into a saloon, drank with his friends, and shot his enemies. Then he went into the dance halls and danced until he fell. Then he was thrown into the gutter, where he lay until morning, when he arose and returned to the mines.

But through all this, our miner kept his head. Always he held before him the saying of one great man, "Life is real, life is earnest, and the grave is not its goal." Life was real to our friend, so real that he was always aware of the

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER

A STYLE THAT IS ENJOYING MUCH and well deserved vogue this season is the dress of silk print with its separate lightweight wool coat, which is an excellent garment for individual wear when desired. The new multi-colored prints are most inviting in character and style, with flattery at the necklines and perky bows and frills for adornment. The coats are slit at the hem, beautifully tailored, and are ideal for wear separately or over other dresses. They make charming pictures, full of glowing color, utterly feminine and delightful to behold.

The english regency period has supplied the pasted note and furnished such details of silhouette as swathed and frilled necklines, wide revers, slender skirts and fitted waists. The peasants have contributed their amazing flair for vivid color. They are destined to have an important bearing in spring and summer wear. There is great display of smocking, stitchings and massed shirrings on dresses and blouses.

Color combinations are lovely. New fashions reflect navy blue. It is forging ahead in the color race, closely followed by brown and a good deal of black. Green, too, with lots of crisp touches of white, is in evidence. The popularity of gray, and the charm of pink with its flattering romantic hue, is the smartest of all this season. They are in many cases complemented with various accents of color. Navy blue is combined with pink, wine red background with navy, green with accents of persimmon, navy with white and navy with yellow.

Fashion's edict calls for prints for sports, for street, for afternoon and for evening. The colors and patterns are as varied as the fabrics themselves. Not only do prints score for entire dresses and costumes, but they are used most effectively as accent for solid color fabric. As usual, we have polkadots, large and small, in conventional and novelty effects.

Capes are an important note in the springtime wardrobe, according to advance glimpses. They are particularly important in relation to formal fashions, and we find many amusing ways to vary their smartness.

Hats are clever. Manipulation of brim is the keynote of hats. All types are shown. They are brim-jutting from one angle or another. Many can be turned and rolled and reshaped to meet changing moods and tastes. There are fascinating straws, some lumy and many in the basket weave, showing the importance of rough finish. The still "on the face" hats show the trend of the regency period, resembling the period bonnet. Sailors of all types are numerous.

The shirtwaist evening frock, which has become a major passion with well dressed women, again extends its influence over the evening wardrobe and we see a flock of shirtwaist sheers. Most effective of the formal shirtwaist gowns is that of crisp starched lace, with short sleeves, little round collar, jeweled buttons up the front and belted waistline. Others are shown in pastel tones of the same starched lace. Pastel chiffons also are shown in shirtwaist styles, with high or round necklines, short sleeves and full simple skirts with a sash or belt at the waistline.

Other chiffons sometimes combine two colors, such as lilac and pink, with cascade ruffles on the skirt. Trains are almost non-existent, and the favorite skirt length is an inch from the floor in front and touching the floor in the back. Lace, we know, is the best friend in any wardrobe. A minimum weight packer for the travel enthusiast, and perennially fashionable. All pastel shades, navy blue, dark brown, wine and scarlet laces of very sheer patterns are mounted over daringly low-cut slips to match. They are invariably fresh and formal in appearance. There are lovely off-shades of pink, melon and blue in lace, too, which give sparkle to their wearers. The print costume is almost as worthy a traveler as a lace model.

A smart gown for cocktails or dinner is of matelasse in deep peacock blue. It has, of course, long dolman sleeves, high neck in front and back, and is caught at the throat with three gold clips.

This spring we will see a new crop of frilly neckwear, adding the feminine touch to otherwise austere navy blues and blacks. We will see sheer ruffled jabots complete with inserts and edging of valenciennes laces, frivolous dutch collars of sheerest embroidered organdie and starched chiffons. Department stores blossom forth with weird and wonderful collections of collars and cuffs to brighten up the last days of wilted winter costumes. This year, they are more than numerous, and more exciting than ever.

Frilly organdies and muslins are coming into their own again on one hand, and starched piques and linens make their appearance on the other. Most of the new neckwear has a high neckline, fitting close around the throat. Jabots and bibs are all to the good, and big sheer bows with matching cuffs are often used as trimming.

Waistcoat effects are seen in starched linen and pique, and the classic peter pan collar, either tailored or frilly, is in high favor now, as always.

Wool suits are seamed and trimmed with lace dyed the same color as the fabric. Numerous tulle evening wraps feature hoods. Sheer lace blouses are worn with afternoon suits of printed crepe-de-chine, and black crepe dresses have yokes and long sleeves of lace.

The smart younger set is displaying a penchant for horsehair net. For party frocks, this fabric has the crispness that is so pronounced a characteristic of spring materials, combined with the lightness of airy charm of net. The self-checked horsehair net is over a taffeta slip in self color.

Poudre blue, with bonbon pink grosgrain ribbon, trims a full swinging skirt with a deep circular flounce. It has the quaint formality of bows on the shoulders, plus a large bertha collar. Corded trimmings and pearl studded crystal give distinction to an afternoon frock of soft blue or grey novelty crepe.

The spring suit, man-tailored, will be the most useful in the spring wardrobe. One is of grey men's-wear suiting, herringbone striped. A red and black crepe scarf, red hat and bag go with it. The skirt is slit at the sides.

Sandals lead in smartness for street wear. Can you think of anything more ideal than a wide "T" strap, laced in regency manner, with an open shank and a cuban heel? There is a choice of black patent leather, beige buckette, gray buckette, navy calf with white trim and white calf.

The cotton dresses for the active young seem to be the ideal of most children nowadays. Dresses come with matching panties in seer-

California led the nation's forty-eight states in population increase the past four years, the estimated population now being 6,158,000, a gain of 480,000, or 8.5 percent, compared with the 1930 census. So says Dr. N. Gregory Silvermaster, SERA research director in San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO

THE RECENT INSIDE STORY FROM Washington, D. C., referring to Japan's diplomatic sacrifice of its "picture brides" as a maneuver to end agitation for exclusion of Japanese laborers, gathered from the 1919 correspondence of the Federal State Department, does not disclose the most interesting phases of the picture-bride story. That at least is the statement made by V. S. McClatchy, executive secretary of the California Joint Immigration Committee, who supplies the missing phases from records in possession of the joint committee as follows:

The "gentlemen's agreement," a mass of secret correspondence conducted under President Theodore Roosevelt's direction during the fiscal year 1907, became operative at Japan's request in July 1908. Roosevelt stated its two-fold agreed purpose as (1) the exclusion of Japanese laborers from continental United States, and (2) prevention of increase of Japanese population in continental United States. The United States agreed to admit for residence without question any Japanese bearing Japan's visa, and Japan agreed to so guard the issue of visas as to insure accomplishment of the agreement's two-fold object. If the plan proved unsuccessful the United States was to enact a Japanese exclusion law similar to that excluding Chinese.

The plan worked well during the remainder of Roosevelt's term of office (less than a year), but not thereafter. In 1911, under President Taft, a new Treaty of Commerce was made with Japan, which Roosevelt declared would destroy the safeguards against Japanese immigration provided in his "gentlemen's agreement." In consequence, the Senate declined to approve the treaty until the Japanese ambassador had signed a footnote thereto in which he declared, with full authority, that his government would faithfully observe the intent of the "gentlemen's agreement" as to non-admission of laborers, as it had in the preceding three years.

Notwithstanding that guarantee, Japan sent over during the following nine years many thousands of laborers, as shown by the Immigration Bureau reports. They were detained at the ports of entry, but ordered released from Washington, or by the courts under habeas corpus for lack of jurisdiction, the "gentlemen's agreement" being neither law nor treaty. So far as known, the Washington administration did nothing to force Japan to comply with her obligations under the agreement, nor to denounce the agreement because of non-compliance.

The picture-bride plan was adopted to furnish wives for those laborers who had entered in violation of the "gentlemen's agreement," with the result that by 1920 the Japanese population in continental United States had nearly trebled, while the annual Japanese births in California increased from 455 in 1908 to over 5,000. Because of unfavorable public comment, and at the suggestion of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, which had since 1915 sought to secure immigration and naturalization privileges for the Japanese, Japan, in August 1920, ceased to ship picture brides. They were immediately replaced, however, with "kankodan" (excursion) brides, who entered during the next few years in even greater number than had the picture brides. Under the "kankodan" plan, a Japanese resident of the United States could go to Japan and, if seeking a bride, remain for three months without performing military duty and return with his bride, at a total expense approximating that which would have been incurred in securing a picture bride.

The act of 1924 excluded all aliens ineligible to American citizenship, and barred therefore Japanese laborers and brides. In consequence, Japanese population in continental United States (aside from illegal entries) has remained nearly at a standstill since, while annual births in California have dropped from a peak of 5,725 to less than 1,700. The barring or brides, however, has imposed no hardship on the Nisei (American citizens of Japanese ancestry), since among them the sexes are equally divided. If, however, a Nisei young man prefers a bride thoroughly Japanese in thought, training and standards, he is at liberty to select one from the thousands of Japanese maidens born American citizens, but educated since early childhood in Japan and still residing there. That is the present adaptation of the "kankodan" bride plan.

BIG BANK HAS ANNIVERSARY.

The San Francisco Bank, the thirty-fourth largest in the United States, celebrated February 11 its sixty-seventh anniversary. Commenting on the bank's growth, President Parker S. Maddux said:

"At the end of 1928 the bank had assets of $123,780,369. Each succeeding year has witnessed an increase, the total at the end of 1934 reaching the record figure of $167,847,098."

A resolution was adopted, "That the proposed 1938 exposition be held on the main land of San Francisco within a radius of a five-cent street car fare and not on the Yerba Buena shoals." March 7, Genevieve and El Dorado Parlor No. 52 N.S.G.W. will sponsor a whist for the benefit of their social funds; a good time is assured.

Dolores Parlor No. 169 put aside February 13 as valentine night. Various members were dressed in costumes, games were played, and refreshments were served at beautifully decorated tables by Chairwoman Ida Corrigan. Among those in attendance were Past Grand Evelyn I. Carlson and Deputy Pearl Wedde. Native Sons of the Golden West

WITH GRAND PRESIDENT CHAS. A. Koenig presiding, the Fifty-eighth Grand Parlor of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West will convene at Vallejo, Solano County, Monday, May 20, for a four-day session. Arrangements for the housing and the entertainment of the Grand Parlor are in charge of Vallejo Parlor No. 77. Subordinate Parlors are required to elect their delegates to the Grand Parlor the first meeting night in April.

Unless the unusual occurs, and that is not likely, the following grand officers will be advanced: Grand First Vice-president Harmon D. Skillin to the grand presidency; Grand Second Vice-president Hartley Russell to the grand first vice-presidency, and Grand Third Vice-president Eldred L. Meyer to the grand second vice-presidency.

There are rumors of several candidates for most of the other elective offices. The Grizzly Bear has communicated with all those mentioned, and definite responses have been received from a few. Some are undecided, others are awaiting the results of delegates' elections, and still others made no response. Here's the lineup to date:

Grand Third Vice-president—Grand Trustee Henry S. Lyon (Placerville No. 9); Grand Trustee Joseph J. McShane (Twin Peaks No. 214).

Grand Secretary—John T. Regan (South San Francisco No. 157), incumbent.

Grand Treasurer—John A. Corotto (San Jose No. 22), incumbent.

Grand Inside Sentinel—Grand Outside Sentinel Monroe Label (Mount Tamalpais No. 64).

Grand Trustee (seven to be elected)—Judge Donald E. VanLuven (Arrowhead No. 110), incumbent.—C.M.H.

Past Presidents Honored.

Hayward—Eden No. 113, instituted August 13, 1887, honored its past presidents January 22. Twenty-five, among them five charter members, were in attendance. The history of the Parlor was reviewed by Secretary Frank Marshall.

Thirteen candidates were initiated, the ritual being exemplified by the following past presidents: John Mitchell, president; John E. Geary, senior past; Fred Schoffler, junior past; Monte Florence, first vice; Neal McConaghy, second vice; Dale Simpson, third vice; Frank Leonard, marshal; M. G. Riggs, inside sentinel. A crab banquet was served.

Seventeen Initiated at Group Meeting.

Calistoga—At a group meeting of the Napa County Parlors, February 18, under the auspices of Calistoga No. 86, seventeen candidates were initiated, sixteen for Calistoga and one for Napa No. 62. More than a hundred members of the Order were in attendance. The ritual was exemplified by the following:

Grand Secretary John T. Regan, president; Grand First Vice-president Harmon D. Skillin, junior past president; Past Grand Charles L. Dodge, senior past president; Grand Trustee Edward T. Schnarr, first vice; Grand President Chas. A. Koenig, second vice; Grand Trustee Adrien M. Hynes, third vice; Grand Trustee Thomas M. Foley, marshal; Grand Trustee Charles H. Spengemann, inside sentinel; Grand Organist George C. Cuthbertson, pianist. At the conclusion of the ceremonies a buffet supper was served, and addresses were made by Grand President Koenig, Grand First Vice-president Skillin and R. R. Veale of General Winn No. 32.

When the grand officers retired to their quarters at Shady Brook Inn, a surprise was awaiting them, as the day was the anniversary of the birth of Grand President Koenig. A birthday cake, appropriately candled, was provided by Mrs. Carl Brandt, wife of Shady Brook's proprietor.

Grand Vice-president's Visits.

The presentation address was made by Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer, and the flag was accepted by Chairman Ed. Hastings of the supervisors.

February 6, San Diego No. 108 added two additional names to its membership roll. There was a fine attendance, despite the rain, and James Murphy senior and junior and Fred Kaland provided a turkey dinner.

GENERAL WINN

"GENERAL A. M. WINN"? WELL, General Andrew Mayer Winn, Founder of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, was born in Virginia, April 27, 1810. His grandfather participated in the Revolutionary War, and his father in the War of 1812. February 11, 1849, he started for California, arrived in San Francisco May 28 of that year, and June 25 settled in Sacramento where, in the autumn of 1849, he was elected that city's first mayor. In 1850, the State Legislature organized the California Militia, and he was appointed brigadier-general. In 1860, General Winn moved to San Francisco. Quoting from The Grizzly Bear for June 1907:

"He was of a military turn of mind, and it was while acting as grand marshal of the Fourth of July parade in San Francisco, 1869 that he first conceived the idea of organizing the Native Sons of the Golden West. He had planned to make a group of young native Californians a feature of the parade, but his call brought forth a lot of youngsters who could not appreciate the great patriotic organization he had in view, and his plans miscarried for the time being. Like all the 'men of old,' General Winn possessed and in June 1875, while again arranging a parade in celebration of the nation's birthday, he was successful in bringing about the foundation of our great Order, which stands as an imperishable tribute to California's past, and a guiding star to its future greatness.

"Several preliminary meetings were held, but the idea was not fully launched until at a meeting held on Sunday, July 11, 1875, and from this meeting dates the Order's entrance into the ranks of patriotic, benevolent and fraternal societies. The original name was Native Sons of the Golden State, which was later changed to Native Sons of the Golden West, and a constitution and by-laws were regularly adopted and officers elected."

General Winn was made an honorary member of the original society, holding membership certificate No. 18 therein, but April 27, 1876, the society abolished honorary memberships. He was never a member, honorary or otherwise, of the Order.

Up to December 1877 the original San Francisco society (California Parlor No. 1) constituted the entire organization. Oakland Parlor No. 2 (now defunct) was organized December 17, 1877, and March 22, 1878, Sacramento Parlor No. 3 was instituted. November 28, 1878, five delegates from each of these three Parlors met in San Francisco and organized the Grand Parlor of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West.

General Winn, in the summer of 1876, went to Sonoma to reside, and there he died August 26, 1883. His remains were interred in the pioneer plot of the City Cemetery at Sacramento, Sacramento Parlor No. 3 conducting the burial services. Referring to the death of General Winn, Grand President A. F. Jones, reporting to the 1884 (Marysville) Grand Parlor, said:

"Among the names of those of California's honored Pioneers who have passed to their eternal homes during the last year, I find that of General A. M. Winn. While the news of his death touched the chords of sorrow and sympathy in many fraternal organizations and human hearts, they echoed nowhere with a deeper or more lasting strain than in our young Order, where the memory of that paternal solicitude which guarded our infancy through to manhood's strength will ever be cherished. He was buried by Sacramento Parlor No. 3 at the request of his relatives and of the Grand Parlor."

Over his last resting place the Order erected a granite monument which was dedicated Thanksgiving Day 1888. The monument is inscribed: "General A. M. Winn. Born April 27, 1810. Died August 26, 1883. The Founder of the Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West, who have erected this monument to his memory." Reporting to the 1889 (San Rafael) Grand Parlor on the monument's dedication, Grand President Marcus A. Dorn said:

"Nothing that I am able to report to you has afforded me greater pleasure, and I am persuaded that nothing will be received by you with more satisfaction, than the completion and dedication of the monument to General Winn, the Founder of our Order. It testifies in no doubtful manner to the esteem and gratitude in which he is held."

General Winn Parlor No. 32 at Antioch, Contra Costa County, instituted July 27, 1884, was named in memory of General A. M. Winn.—C.M.H.

Native Daughters of the Golden West

ALBANY (ALAMEDA COUNTY)—Albany No. 260 was instituted here February 25 by Grand President Gladys E. Noce, assisted by Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler and other grand officers. There were forty-five names on the charter list of the new Parlor, which was organized by Laura Isom.

Officers of Albany are: Lena Lawrence, president; May Ellis, first vice-president; Margaret Roberts, second vice-president; Grayce Higgins, third vice-president; Eva Peterson, marshal; Florence Bell, past president; Hazel Taylor, inside sentinel; Mary Rutan, outside sentinel; Rose Baclaggli, recording secretary; Myrtle McLean, financial secretary; Nellie Graham, treasurer; Florence Tavera, Laura Isom, Hazel Taylor, trustees.

Busy Making Layettes for Needy Mothers.

Bakersfield—With President Juanita Pettis and the other officers exemplifying the ritual, El Tejon No. 239 initiated five candidates February 1. A party was also held for Charter Member Blanche Matheson Vernon, a bride. The tables were decorated in a bridal motif, with miniature bride and groom. Lovely gifts were presented her. Members of the Parlor have been very busy making poppies for their annual poppy day, held the last Saturday of February each year for the benefit of the homeless children. Past presidents have been very busy, too, making layettes for needy mothers of Bakersfield.

February 8, at the home of Sadie Clendenen, the losing team of a membership campaign, of which Alice Phillips was chairman, feted the winning team, of which Ralpha Sanders was chairman. February 15, a public card party for the benefit of the Parlor funds had Saint Valentine as its motif. Effie Cronkite was chairman of the evening. El Tejon and Bakersfield No. 42 N.S.G.W. jointly sponsored a dance for members and their friends.

Favors American Labor.

Placentia—A large group of Grace No. 242's members were all-day guests of Lena Aspden at her Long Beach home January 30. A potluck dinner was served at noon, and the afternoon was devoted to sewing and a trip along the pike. A birthday party February 7 honored those members born in January and February. Grand Trustee Nellie Cline reported on the Alameda County district meeting at Oakland which she attended. Alice Davis read a story of the Donner Party. Visitors were Supervising Deputy Mary E. Noerenberg, Deputy Eleanor Fisher and President Ruth Kotlar and a large delegation from Santa Ana No. 235. Rena Johnson, Dora Trendle and Mae Lemke were hostesses of the evening.

Members of Grace were guests February 20 of Placentia American Legion Post at a patriotic program in observance of National Defense Week. The Parlor endorsed a resolution urging employment of American labor. Helen Anderson gave an account of a motor trip through the Southern states. A benefit card party February 21 bore out the Washington motif. Refreshments and decorations were in charge of Kate Hill, Alice Davis and President Matilda Enfield. The Parlor anticipates a large class of candidates for initiation when Grand President Gladys E. Noce pays her official visit March 25.

Hearts Open to Grand President.

Ione—The welcome given Grand President Gladys E. Noce by Chispa No. 40, January 22, on the occasion of her first official visit in her home-county, Amador, will always be remembered as one of the loveliest affairs witnessed in the history of this county. A 7 o'clock dinner given in her honor under the supervision of Mayme Mason, was served to 125 members and guests. At its conclusion, Grand President Noce was given a toast by Cloudy Strong and, at a signal, Mayme Mason pulled a ribbon which released an overhanging container of violets, thus showering the honored guest and presenting to her a gift. The tables, formed in "U" shape, were luxuriantly decorated with smilax and violets.

After the dinner, all repaired to Native Sons Hall, which had been transformed into a beautiful parlor, shrubs and floral decorations giving a charming background for the ceremonies. Grand President Noce was escorted to her seat of honor by a drill team of ten members dressed in formal white evening gowns and carrying wands of California poppies interwoven with smilax, Clara Williams leading. The honor-guest was guided to her position, which had been enclosed with a small green fence with a gate made of California poppies. On her entry, the gate was left ajar, thus signifying that the hearts of Chispa's members are open to the Grand President.

In a novel and thrilling manner, officers of the Parlor presented Grand President Noce with an orchid corsage. While Esther Gebhardt, accompanied by Ethel Margrave, sang "An Orchid To You," two little boys, Jackie Suttcliffe and Raymond Calandri, dressed as silver butterflies, drew a green chariot containing three-year-old Shirley Joses, dressed as a fairy, about the parlor, stopping in front of Mrs. Noce. Shirley presented the corsage in a natural and charming manner, by saluting her as "The Beautiful Lady." Supervising Deputy Emma Boarman Wright and Deputy Hilda Esola were escorted to seats of honor by Marshal Margaret Long.

Officers, under the leadership of President Myrtle Tonzi, were highly commended by Grand President Noce on the splendid rendition of the ritualistic ceremonies in initiating three candidates. In her address, Mrs. Noce spoke briefly of the projects of the Order, urged the placing of markers on all landmarks, the erection of monuments to perpetuate the memories of the Pioneers and, in a loving and charming manner, paid homage to the members of Chispa for the harmony and loyal co-operation so keenly displayed. On behalf of Ione No. 33 N.S.G.W., President Tonzi presented Mrs. Noce with a beautiful basket of red carnations. Charter Member Rena Rush made the beautiful wands carried by the drill team, and Cloudy Strong was responsible for the beautifully decorated room and the most enjoyable program.—M.I.T.

Much Pleasure From Generosity.

From Past Grand Stella Finkeldey of Santa Cruz, chairman Grand Parlor Veterans Welfare Committee, The Grizzly Bear received, under date of February 18, this request, which is complied with: "Am sending copies of letters for publication in the March issue of The Grizzly Bear."

[illegible] is to advise you that we would accept with thanks your kind offer to donate six subscriptions to the National Geographic Magazine and three subscriptions to the New York Mid-Week Pictorial for the year 1935. We have appreciated your kind donations in the past and assure you that these magazines furnish very interesting reading material for the patients, and are much enjoyed. Very truly yours, P. G. LASCHE, Manager. Veterans Administration Facility, Palo Alto, California, January 16, 1935."

Our Librarian is interested in knowing whether or not we may depend upon receiving these magazines again, beginning with the New Year. Six (6) copies Saturday Evening Post. Two (2) copies American Magazine. One (1) copy National Geographic. Three (3) copies of Time. One (1) copy of Mid-Week Pictorial. If it is possible for your organization to take care of these magazines for another year for our patients, such action would be greatly appreciated by the members of the hospital staff as well as by the disabled ex-service people here. Very truly yours, D. C. FARNSWORTH, M. D., Manager. Veterans Administration Facility, San Fernando, California, December 8, 1934." [The request was fulfilled.]

We have your advice of Jan. 30th that the magazines for our patients last year by your organization have all been renewed. This was indeed a gratifying message, for your organization has been most generous in the matter of magazine subscriptions, and our patients and library have come to depend on them. It would be impossible to calculate how much pleasure your gift has brought to many hundred sailors and men during the past year. The patients have been informed of your lovely gift, and you may rest assured that they are deeply grateful. Sincerely yours, FRANK B. BREWER, M. D., Manager. Veterans Administration Facility, Livermore, California, February 4, 1935."

We wish to acknowledge receipt of a package from [illegible] containing twenty-six very attractive decks of playing cards for the use of patients at this hospital. These have been turned over to the recreational side and are already in use. There seems to be an unending demand for playing cards and the gay colored ones you sent are particularly welcome to the patients. With sincere thanks to you for your continued interest in this hospital, very truly yours, W. H. SWACKHAMER, Manager. Veterans Administration Facility, Walla Walla, Washington, February 8, 1935."

Poppies To Benefit Homeless Children.

Fresno—Deputy Zelphia Thomas installed officers of Fresno No. 187, February 1. In spite of a very stormy night, quite a number of out-of-town visitors were present. A very nice program was presented and refreshments were served. Plans are under way for "Poppy Day," when poppies are sold for the benefit of the homeless children.

The annual dinner party to celebrate the birthdays of the members was held February 15. The red and white valentine motif was used in decorating the table. The beautiful dishes presented the Parlor by the Las Amigas sewing club, which meets weekly at the members' homes, were used for the first time. Many plans, for pleasure and benefit, have been outlined for the spring and summer terms.

To Study California Persons and Places.

San Jose—Vendome No. 100 had a card party the afternoon of February 14 and a Saint Valentine and Lincoln entertainment in the evening. President Hazel M. Brett was chairman for both affairs, which were happy events.

February 5, the Parlor's past presidents club met at the home of Hazel Haub. The valentine motif was used throughout the evening. The club has completed a two-year study of the missions and a year of California law. Lessons for the latter subject were prepared by one of Santa Clara County's superior judges, and conducted by Miss Beldon Gallagher. Persons and places in California will be this year's study. February 27, a large evening card party was held. Thirty members, with Grand Trustee Clara A. Gairaud as chairman, comprised the committee.

February 15, Sue Mattel of the Grand Parlor Veterans Welfare Committee visited the U. S. Veterans Hospital at Palo Alto, taking with her twelve dozen specially made valentine cookies, a box of magazines, puzzles and games for distribution in one of the wards. Vendome's official visit is March 13. All members of the Order are invited to attend.

LOS ANGELES CITY AND COUNTY

THE 1934 LOS ANGELES COUNTY Grand Jury, which ceased its activities last month, declared its investigations revealed "unmistakable and undenied instances of graft, corruption, inefficiency, waste and mismanagement" in the conduct of government in Los Angeles. Referring to the general stores department, the Jury said:

"In general, it may be said that purchases for this department constituted a particularly malodorous 'racket' in which county employes and representatives of various vendors of produce conspired to defraud the county and to supply at fancy prices food for hundreds of thousands of indigents which was not fit for the table of the poorest American family. The Grand Jury cannot find terms strong enough in which to condemn the practices which have been the rule in this department . . . but the Jury most strongly recommends that the Board of Supervisors dismiss immediately from the county service those executives whose laxness and inattention to duty permitted the condition to exist."

The Grand Jury made many other sensational charges,—among them that favored firms have made large contributions to the campaign funds of candidates for public office—indicating that dishonesty is generally rampant in government, and declared that, "unless effective steps are taken to reduce taxes in direct proportion to the reduction of income of the average taxpayer, public bankruptcy is inevitable and the various governmental agencies of this community will soon find themselves unable to maintain even the most necessary services for which they were created."

No steps, much less effective ones, have been taken to correct conditions and to dispense with the services of the grafters, racketeers, incompetents, etc. And no steps are likely to be taken, unless the heavily-burdened taxpayers take them. The honest majority may, eventually, organize and rout the dishonest minority that are wrecking Los Angeles. God hasten the routing!—C.M.H.

TO THE READERS OF THE GRIZZLY BEAR MAGAZINE—NATIVE SONS AND DAUGHTERS AND OTHERS, MEANING YOU, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

A new California book is just out, written by Herman W. Frank, a pioneer of Los Angeles, which is a most interesting and authentic contribution to the books of California history, titled "Scrap Book of a Western Pioneer." Writing as an interested spectator, the author has created a story through the pages of which many local personages, some of them yet living, move like the characters in a drama. As a basis for the work, he started a scrap book as early as 1881, and he includes a readable diary of a trip around the world.

You, as a native son or daughter, should be interested in this book. You may own an autographed copy of this limited edition, now for sale in all book stores of Los Angeles.

The price is $5.00. Book has 300 pages, 36 inserts, with handsome cover. Superior quality paper and binding.

We quote: "Mr. Frank has written an autobiography which is one of the most fascinating contributions to the history of California that we have ever read," says W. Irvin Brennan, Sales Director Times-Mirror Press. "Local characters and color from the early days of Los Angeles, and even down to the city of today, make a tale which reads like one of Horatio Alger's immortal stories of success. Far from being a eulogy, however, of Mr. Frank, a great deal of its interest comes from his mention of the many characters whom you may have known also."

Tarlton, Hector Hecock and Walter Hopcraft. All Native Sons and Native Daughters are especially invited to join in the fun.

GRAND PRESIDENT N.D. WILL VISIT.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. initiated two candidates February 6. "Defense Week" resolutions were adopted against communism. The sewing club spent an enjoyable afternoon at the Culver City home of Alice Hardy, February 8. The dance given jointly with Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W., February 14, was a success in all particulars.

February 20, the Parlor had as guests Long Beach No. 124 and Santa Ana No. 235 Parlors. Phil Townsend Hanna was the speaker, and he gave an instructive California history talk. Delicious refreshments were served. The February 27 "at home" for prospective members was a very pleasant affair; Chairman Rose O'Connor was assisted by an able committee.

Los Angeles' March calendar includes: 10th, pilgrimage to Fort Tejon; postponed from February account rain. 13th, first card party of new tournament, in which all Natives and their friends are invited to join; Evelyn Trautwein chairman. 20th, official visit of Grand President Gladys E. Noce; Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 245 joint hostess; 6:30 p.m. dinner at Women's Athletic Club, for which reservations must be made with Miss Grace Norton prior to March 19. April 27, Dahlia Vucovich will be chairman of a most unusual and interesting bridge luncheon.

ACQUIRES NEW HOME.

The housing committee of University Parlor No. 272 N.S.G.W.—Lucian Griffin (chairman), George Woods, Niel Wood, Walter Wells, Al Taylor and Ben Hiss—have secured a lease on the Barbara Inn, 1750 West Santa Barbara, for the Parlor's new home. Many affairs are being planned, among them a grand opening.

University's first annual valentine party was a grand success and will long be remembered by those in attendance. Stan Parker's baseball aggregation are still at the top in the local municipal baseball circuit.—J.P.H.

PLAN FOR GRAND PRESIDENT'S VISIT.

Long Beach—Grand President Gladys E. Noce will officially visit Long Beach No. 154, Rudecinda No. 230 (San Pedro) and Compton No. 258 Parlors N.D.G.W. in joint session here March 21, and plans for her reception were made at a largely attended meeting of the former Parlor, February 7. Among those present were Grand Trustee Hazel B. Hansen, Supervising Deputy Gertrude Tuttle, Deputies Jenny Raymond and Elenora Fisher. At the meeting's close Mary Stultz was surprised with a stork shower, and refreshments were served by Leola Temby and Lois McDougall. Kate McFadyen entertained the thimble club at luncheon Saint Valentine Day. A surprise shower February 16 at the Wilmington home of Margaret Burch was in honor of Etta Burch, who has moved to Oakland.

Long Beach's officers, with Gertrude Riddle as president, were installed by Deputy Jenny Raymond, February 21. A large group from Los Angeles No. 124 were visitors. Arrangements for the evening were in charge of Daisy Hansen (chairman) and Deputy Elenora Fisher.

BOY SCOUTS GIVEN FLAGS.

Wilmington—February 8, the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America, Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. presented United States of America and California State (Bear) Flags to Catholic Troop No. 224 Boy Scouts of America, which is a hundred percent native Californians. Grand Third Vice-president Eldred L. Meyer made the presentation for the Parlor; he gave a brief history of the Bear Flag and told of the Order's americanization work. For the boys, the flags were accepted by Frank Guerro of Sepulveda, chairman of the troop. Dr. J. Silveria, also of Sepulveda, is the scoutmaster.

Among the many present at the presentation, which was held in historic Banning Hall, Banning Park, were the following members of the Parlor: Grand Marshal William A. Reuter, District Deputy Walter Richards, President Frank Bronson, V. E. Hopkins, John Parilieu, Jack Melee, Secretary Harry Fairall, Ben Lassere, George Foutes, Fred Krause, Hampton Neegard, Leo Wright, Phil Doran, Peter Sabana, Paul Gligo, George Gligo and Dale Lampson.

PRESIDENT ENTERTAINS.

Santa Monica—President Myrtle Barden outlined, February 13, plans for an active year for Santa Monica Bay Parlor No. 245 N.D.G.W., and entertained with a valentine party. For the benefit of the homeless children, Sophie Pendley

Whereas, the Angel of Death has visited the ranks of Marysville Parlor No. 162 and taken a member from our midst. We realize that in the loss we have sustained and of the great loss sustained by those who were nearest and dearest to her, be it

Resolved, That though we bow to the Divine Will and offer prayer we deeply feel our loss.

"And at home in the beautiful hills of God
By the Valley of rest so fair
Some day, when time, when our work is done,
With joy we shall meet her there."

To the bereaved family, we extend our loving and heartfelt sympathy, we pray that God will comfort the bereaved husband, who has lost a loving companion. Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy to spread upon the minutes of this meeting and a copy sent to The Grizzly Bear for publication.

Homeless Children

A WORTHWHILE NON-SECTARIAN ENDEAVOR SPONSORED AND SUPPORTED BY THE ORDERS OF NATIVE SONS AND NATIVE DAUGHTERS OF THE GOLDEN WEST

FEBRUARY 15, THE CENTRAL COMMITtee had its monthly meeting in the office, 998 Eddy street, San Francisco. In attendance were Ariana W. Stirling, chairman, who presided; Judge Fletcher A. Cutler, vice-chairman; Martin J. Dinkelspiel, Father Edward B. Lenane, Lucius L. Solomons and Edward J. W. Wren. Reports submitted by Secretary Mary E. Brusie give a little idea of the work accomplished and proof that all of the workers are kept busy and out of mischief.

Only ten placements were made during January, not because there were no homes available, but because there were no babies old enough or ready for placement. In the interest of forced economy, only the perfect children can now be accepted. The little ones who do not measure up at the time the Committee is asked to accept them are referred to other agencies or to federal relief. This inability on the part of the Committee to assume the expense of all children offered for adoption, who eventually will be ready for adoption, accounts, too, for the fewer placements. It is not an ideal setup, to be sure, to be unable to take an active part in helping solve the problems in one's particular field, but alas! alack! sticking to an ideal seems to demand more than most of us are willing to give in money or in service.

Placements from April to January totaled 118 different children and 123 different homes, with five of the children replaced. The grand total is 4,449 children placed since August 1910; 4,976 placements and replacements to January 31, 1935; 4,540 different homes, many families having adopted more than one child.

The number of families who need children seems to keep up to the average, as thirty-two written applications were filed during January, making a grand total of 11,355 written applications for children. The workers during January made 139 visits, and received 140 visits. 784 letters were sent out, and forty-five reports of investigations and supervision as well as the reports required by the state were written.

Total expenditures for January were $1,445.06; total expenditures since April 1, 1934, $15,684.05. Receipts for January, $1,269.61; total receipts from April 1, $7,903.03; transferred from savings account for operative expenses, $3,076.29; which left a balance of $99.61 in the commercial account February 1, 1935, and $6,200 cash in savings banks. This statement will no doubt convince the members of the great need for their help during March if the Committee is to carry on, as from April 1935 to October 1935 the Parlors send in practically no donations.

During January, Native Daughters Parlors contributed $269.84; Native Sons Parlors $30; joint contributions, $716, of which amount the San Jose Parlors contributed $500. Native Daughters have also contributed $83.27 on their respective adopted children. Santa Ana Parlor No. 235 N.D.G.W. has paid in full for milk for a second child. La Bandera Parlor No. 110 N.D.G.W. begins the milk for "Edna the III." The Forum Club paid in full for the care of a child in honor of P.G.P. Dr. Mariana Bertola. Phoebe A. Hearst Parlor No. 214 N.D.G.W. is adopting another baby boy.

The Alameda County Parlors are putting forth a supreme effort to make their mammoth benefit card party, to be held in the Oakland Auditorium March 16, a success.

Once more this Committee has been asked to call to the attention of the Parlors the necessity of filling out affidavits claiming exemption from federal tax on admission for all benefits given for the homeless children, when over forty-one cents admission is charged. The exemption will be granted by the Federal Treasury Department, but the claim must be made and sent to the Central Committee well in advance of the date of the benefit.

COMING HOME.

Editor Grizzly Bear: I am about to return to my home in California, therefore please change the mailing address of The Grizzly Bear to Glendale commencing with the March issue.

My sojourn on these islands has been most pleasant as well as educational. My son, Harold M., is general manager of Cebu Portland Cement Company of this place for six years past. This has given me the entree to meeting many, many of the leading people of these islands, regardless of nationality, as well as those people who compose the bulk of the population, thereby gaining an insight into their motives, wishes and desires. Especially interesting at this time, when the destiny of this archipelago is in transition, the Orient a seething cauldron.

More of this when I see you, in the near future. With my regards, I remain sincerely yours,

HAROLD T. POWER.

Naga Cebu, P. I., January 20, 1935.

(Harold Power is a Placer County boy, long associated with Auburn Parlor No. 50 N.S.G.W. In recent years he has made his home in Glendale, whence he departed for the Philippines in August of last year.—Editor.)

One by one our loved ones fall."

HARRIET MOROSS.

Death has knocked at the door of Desert Gold Parlor No. 250 N.D.G.W. and has taken one of our beloved charter members from us. She was not only a charter member but was the one to start our Parlor away out here on the desert. Sister Moross was born in San Francisco, June 14, 1870. Our beloved sister has been a very faithful and earnest member, who was always ready to do anything for the Parlor. Be it

Resolved, That we extend our sincere sympathy to her niece, the only living relative; and also be it resolved, that our charter be draped, and that copies of these resolutions be sent to The Grizzly Bear and the bereaved niece, and that a copy be in the minutes of Desert Gold.

BERNICE WESTPHAL.

To the Officers and Members of Bahia Vista Parlor No. 167 N.D.G.W.—We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions of respect to the memory of our beloved sister, Bernice Westphal, respectfully submit the following:

Whereas, Our Heavenly Father has again seen fit to sever the golden cord binding us together; many are the hearts that will mourn her, miss her smile and her happy, cheerful disposition. Bernice, as she was better known to all of us, was ever ready to take an active part in any project of our Order, especially in the homeless children work; in Bernice, we have lost a faithful and loyal Past President. Therefore, be it

Resolved, That in testimony of our sincere love and esteem for our dear departed sister, these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Parlor, and a copy be sent to her family; also, that a copy be sent to The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication.

ANNIE L. ADAIR.

A Pioneer Native Daughter has gone to her reward, the passing of Annie L. Adair, a gallant gentlewoman answered the summons to the Grand Parlor on High.

In thinking of her and her life, we can find no fitting words than to quote, "A Soul of Honor seated Heart of Courtesy." Honor in the all-inclusive sense plied by courage, both moral and physical, in facing problems which become a part of the duties and pleas of our walk through life; courtesy, implying all t gracious, gentle thoughts and words and deeds which n toward the well-being, comfort and inspiration of t about us.

The members of the Homeless Children's Committe the Native Sons and Daughters of the Golden West in Angeles have not merely lost a personal friend, but committee whose meetings she graced for eighteen y finds a vacant place in its council which will be very l to fill. EVERY DAY A HOLIDAY.

Every day in the year is a holiday somewhere in the world, according to C. A. Barker, vice-president in charge of California Bank's foreign exchange department. Because of extended holiday celebrations in some countries, banking transactions are sometimes considerably delayed and, for this reason, a close watch is kept on the holiday calendar by the bank's foreign exchange department.

Sundays and Christmas Day are the most universally observed holidays throughout the christian world. "In number of holidays observed," says Barker, "India leads, with all Sundays and forty-nine special holidays being celebrated yearly, the occasions for celebrations ranging from the advent of the full moon to Cocoanut Day. At the other extreme is Russia, with only five holidays during the entire year and business as usual on Sundays."

According to Barker, there are no national legal holidays in the United States, such regulation being left entirely to the discretion of the various states. California observes eleven legal holidays other than Sundays: New Year Day, Lincoln's Birthday, Washington's Birthday, Memorial Day, Independence Day, Labor Day, Admission Day, Columbus Day, Armistice Day, Thanksgiving Day and Christmas Day. In addition to these, state and national election days are generally made legal holidays.

DEATH IMMORTALIZED NAME OF CALIFORNIA PIONEER SAMUEL BURNEY.

Samuel Burney was one of the first three White settlers of Burney Valley, eastern Shasta County. He went there in 1855 with two partners. Two years later his companions made a trip into Oregon, leaving Burney alone, except for an Indian boy to do the chores.

On return, the partners found the bodies of Burney and the Indian boy, victims of an Indian raiding party. Friends buried him back of his cabin, and in 1884 his remains were removed to the cemetery of the town of Burney, where was erected a marble marker inscribed: "Pioneer Samuel Burney. Killed by Indians, 1857."

In honor of this California Pioneer, a state park, a mountain, a creek, a valley, a waterfall and a town have been named.

JOHN MARSHALL

John Marshall found a piece of gold
In eighteen-forty-eight
That simple deed
Was like an earthquake in the world
The birth of greed
A tiny thing is gold
And yet it changes men
As much as war
A maddened fight for glittering gain
Fate's meteor!

A sawmill men at work
A sluice gate and there revealed
The secret rare
Of mighty mountains, ages old
To Marshall, there,
The solid growth of life
Became a spindling shoot of luck
Excitement reigned
Consuming thirst for gold was stirred
The cup was drained.

A statue stands today at
Culuma*, beautiful vale.
A stern pioneer
Exploring hills of discontent
Midst rumbling fear.
Great riches in his grasp
A craving but no power
Left desolate
A shattered man in poverty
A pawn of Fate!

*Now spelled Coloma.

OTHERS' OPINIONS

"All kinds of programs," says the Los Angeles Independent-Review, "are being made for the relief of unemployed, war veterans, the indigent, the sick, the schools, the government employes and all the 'sacred cows' in the large herds roaming in every community. But nothing is said about the relief of the taxpayer—the forgotten man who has to pick up the cross and carry it although his shoulders are already sagging with his many burdens. At one time a 'taxpayer' was a man who owned property; now he is a man who has property standing in his name but is merely the janitor for the mortgage and trust-deed holder. . . .

"In Los Angeles there are thousands of persons 'owning' small homes, courts, apartment houses and vacant lands who actually have not enough to eat and are hopelessly in debt. They are required to pay heavy taxes to give a dole to some of their tenants who are better off than they are. Every government loan, every welfare provision sack, every charity dole is charged against these people. Where are they to get help?" Echo answers: Where?

"What this state needs more than anything is a good house-cleaning. Send all the out-of-state Utopia seekers back to their own states; send the Mexicans, Filipinos and all others back—and see that they are kept away. Make California a state for California-Americans. If we do this we will have gone a long way towards solving our problem of high taxes. It is time that we closed the Golden Gate to any except those desirables that will help, not hinder, our progress."—San Juan Mission News.

"The great need of the hour is for employment, investment, industrial expansion. Exorbitant taxation is their bitter enemy. A drastic cut in the cost of all government would be the greatest contribution to recovery, for the simple reason that billions now taken by the tax-gatherers would be spent by individuals and industries for a thousand purposes which would create jobs, purchasing power and new taxable wealth."—Amador Ledger.

PLACE NAMES

confidence of the whites through his faithfulness and reliability.

Being in the region of Lake Tahoe, we find that the name is generally accepted as being Washo Indian from "tah-hoo-he," meaning "big water." Knowing from experience that popular explanations of California Indian names are unreliable, we must accept the explanation as being at least convenient and descriptive, and leave the proof to capable etymologists. However, the lake was discovered by Fremont, on Feb. 14, 1844, being led to it by his guide, Truckee. A letter from Fremont (1881) states he named it Lake Bonpland. "I gave to the mountain lake the name of my companion traveler Bonpland, and so put it on the map of that expedition." This Andre Bonpland was a native of France, a physician and botanist. The lake was for a time also called Bigler, after an early governor of the state, but fortunately was changed to the more euphonistic title it now holds, due to the efforts of Dr. Thomas Starr King, who disapproved of Bigler because he was a Southern enthusiast.

Leaving Truckee, the remainder of the distance to Reno follows the deep and narrow canyon of the Truckee River, where in places there is hardly a footing for both the railroad tracks and the highway. The names of the first few localities encountered are all that remain to remind of a once-important industry—the gathering and shipping of natural ice. This was an industry in which only the strong and hardy could take part, and many a tale of strength and endurance is told by oldtimers, tales that rival the exploits of that mythical Western hero, Paul Bunyon. Ice was produced in artificial lakes formed by damming up the Truckee's tributaries, then sawed into large blocks and stored in ponderous insulated icehouses until summer, when it was shipped by rail throughout the West.

Polaris, with its allusion to the North Star and the polar regions, is one of these localities, and Iceland another. Iceland was first named Cuba, which is going from one extreme to another. Boca was also an important ice producing center, and is situated at the mouth of the Little Truckee River, Boca meaning "mouth" in Spanish. Wickes was named for an early settler in the region, who controlled some of the ice ponds.

By way of contrast, we next come to Floriston, named by the late Mrs. Delia Fleishhacker when, one spring after the ice and frost had disappeared, she stepped off the train there and observed the carpet of wild flowers that adorned the canyon floor. However, it might be added that the old railroaders have their own version of the origin of its naming, claiming that the rear brakeman of the local freight of the time was a lover of flowers and it was his pleasure to pick a boquet daily while flagging for Cuba and the icehouses, which resulted in the place being named Floriston. The village first bore the name of Bronco, after the creek that joins the Truckee at that point, when "the whole town—hotel, saloon, Gold Ribbon Whiskey, and even the old gray mule and the railroad station —was owned by old man Wickes."

Farad, the site of a power house, is appropriately a word denoting a unit of electric power, and Mystic retains the name of the Mystic Hot Springs. Calvada is a coined word, combining the names of California and Nevada, and is located near the state boundary.

Verdi, our first town in Nevada, was named by the officials of the Central Pacific for the famous Italian composer. It is interesting to note that there must have been considerable rivalry between the railroad officials for the privilege of applying their own pet names to places as they were established from time to time during the years that the construction work progressed over the mountains. To avoid dissention, the matter was solved in the characteristic American manner of placing slips of paper containing suggested names into a box, and drawing out a name whenever one was needed. An evident requirement in these names seems to have been that they should be short—of one or two syllables—easily pronounced, and not conflicting in sound with any other existing station.

Reno was also named by the officials of the Central Pacific, being in honor of General Jesse Lee Reno, a hero of the Civil War. Reno was a graduate of West Point, born in Wheeling, West Virginia, June 20, 1823, and after seeing a great deal of action in the war, including the second battle of Bull Run, was killed in the battle of South Mountain, Maryland. In the early days the locality was favored by emigrants because it was the most convenient place for fording the Truckee River, and later by the teams and stages enroute to the rich strikes in Nevada. With its growth there was considerable agitation to call the place "Argenta" and several outside newspapers adopted this name when referring to the settlement, but Mr. Crocker of the Central Pacific filed his maps bearing the name of Reno, which is reputed to have been drawn from the box of names referred to previously, and except that "Rayno" became "Reeno," the railroad officials won the honor of naming what has since developed into the largest city in Nevada State.

We are here at the end of the mountain "bottle-neck" toward which the emigrant trains converged from the broad deserts and plains on their hazardous journey westward. One more locality should be added, and that is Sparks, jacent to Reno, and named for the beloved G ernor of Nevada, John O. Sparks, who died N 22, 1908, while still holding that office. T town is located on the old Marlin Ranch, j east of Reno, and at one time bore the name "Harriman," after William H. Harriman, national railroad genius, but was later renam to honor the governor.

ONLY PERSONS OF WHITE STOCK SHOULD BE ADMITTED FROM ANY PART OF WORLD

"IN THE LONG RUN IMMIGRATION-CONtrol is essentially a biological problem. . . . At present as in the past, in America immigration-control is one of the three or four major forces which determine what races and family-stocks shall inherit the country as future Americans, and consequently what American traditions will be emphasized and which forgotten. In short, whether the country will continue to develop along the lines so successfully established by the founders of the nation, or shall give way to the insidious conquest and destruction by uncontrolled immigration. America is at the cross-roads. She can choose either course. If intelligently and patriotically controlled, immigration can be made to promote American ideals, but, if not controlled by high ideals and rigorous selection, immigration in the near future will most certainly destroy family-stocks and American civilization. . . .

"It has never been successfully disputed that a sovereign nation which is really sovereign and independent cannot, as an inherent function of such sovereignty, regulate immigration into its own territories. . . . In keeping with this principle the United States does not object to any foreign country whatsoever forbidding Americans to settle and to rear families in the territory of the particular forbidding country, or to own land therein. . . . In turn the United States, unless it is willing to surrender its equal sovereignty, cannot permit objection by any foreign country to influence 'either up or down' any immigrant-standard which the American people may set up. Immigration-control is a domestic matter, the surrender of which is equivalent to acknowledgment of conquest. . . . Immigration is a long-time investment in human stocks. Each nation must look after its own interests in this field.

"In the establishment of immigrant-standards, race and family-quality are the essential things. The next most important thing is . . . the distribution geographically . . . over the population of the receiving country. The matter of race is essentially one of assimilability. Only immigrants who belong to races assimilable to the established native American stock should be admitted to the country as immigrants. . . . Immigrants concentrating geographically over long periods in particular sections, tend to make racial, religious, economic and social segregates within the American territory, and thus tend to destroy the unity of the American nation and people. . . .

"Ten years have elapsed since the nation set up its present policy which placed its immigration-control on a highly selective and quota basis. With the growth of the current world-wide economic depression, natural economic forces have tended strongly to reduce the external immigration-pressure on the United States. With the passing of hard times, there will again be a demand for greater freedom in immigration from all quarters of the world—persons who desire to enter for current economic gain, but many of whom, in fact, settle down to become parents of future Americans. The present is, therefore, a time especially opportune for the country to take stock of the situation, to reorganize its forces, to register in permanent form its fundamental policy in immigration control, and to provide adequate machinery for the better enforcement of its laws on this subject. . . . Immigration, in both its legislative and a ministrative aspects, calls for attitude as th oughly American as is necessary in the army a navy, and in the conduct of foreign affairs. .

"Common loyalty demands that our nation policy of population-control provide that o human seed-stocks of the future will conser our best racial stocks in accordance with histo traditions, and that in individual capacity t future Americans will be a decided biologic advance over the present and the past. Becau immigration constitutes a major element in su outcome, no one who desires the perpetuity American institutions would permit immigrati to lower American human seed-stock standar in any respect. . . . It is not incumbent upon a living nation to receive immigrants who, for a cause whatsoever, it does not desire.

"In the selection of immigration it is not matter of inferior or superior races; it is a m ter of recruiting to the race-standards whi the nation has already set. Racially, the cou try will be liberal if it confines all future imm gration to the white race, then, within the whi race, if it sets up differential numerical quot which will admit immigrants in accordance, n with external demand, but on the basis of Am ican-desired influence of such racial elements the future seed-stock of America. . . . There another phase of the race-problem which wou be automatically solved by limiting all immigr tion to members of the white race. Such worl wide limitation would make it unnecessary set quotas for the several Pan American cou tries. Only persons of white stock would admitted from any part of the world, wheth Pan America or elsewhere. . . . Automatical our standard should sort immigrants not on by country of birth, but also by race-descer For example, a Chinese or a Senegalese born France would, under the present laws, be a mitted as a Frenchman. Establishment of t white standard would eliminate such cases aut matically, and still it would place all countri and regions of the world on an equal basis. .

"The United States Congress should, by sta ute, declare definitely that the immigratio

Every White native-born citizen of the United States should be vitally interested in the perpetuity of America and its institutions, and nothing has a more vital bearing thereon than the Nation's immigration policy. So, attention is directed to a booklet issued by the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York in April of last year—a report of the Chamber's special committee on immigration and alien insane submitting a study on "Immigration-Control" by Dr. Harry H. Laughlin of the Carnegie Institution of Washington who, says the committee, "is beyond doubt the foremost authority in the United States today on the subject-matter."

The Grizzly Bear would, for the enlightenment of its numerous readers, like to publish this excellent and "meaty" report in its entirety, but that is not possible. Quotations, however, from those portions of the report dealing with immigration, are presented. Note Dr. Laughlin's contention that, for the Nation's good, no immigrant should be admitted, by quota or otherwise, who is not a member of the White race.—Editor.

GRIZZLY GROWLS

NOTE Expressions of opinion in these "Growls" are, unless indicated otherwise, those of the Managing Editor.
CLARENCE M. HUNT.

WHY DO MOST OCCIDENTALS WHO visit Japan, even for a brief period, return to their home-places thoroughly japanized mentally" The answer was given by a world-traveled Englishman, enroute home from a visit to Japan, in an address at the University Club of Los Angeles

He said the Japs imitate to perfection the customs, and also the products, of the Occidentals, but their minds are impervious to occidentalization. A Jap, regardless of birth or residence place, is in mind and at heart always a Jap, and mikado worship is his religion

On the other hand, said the speaker, when the Occidental visits Japan, the Japs make it their business to impregnate him with the Jap viewpoint, and the Occidental, while not imitating Oriental customs, becomes, mentally, thoroughly japanized.

So, that accounts for a great many Americans, after residence in or a visit to Japan, going about this country in an endeavor to have us approve of all that Japan does and to accede to all the wishes of Japan. The past several months japanized Americans have been urging, through Japan-inspired propaganda, the Federal Government to extend the immigration quota to Japan. The Japs want it, therefore it should be given unto them, so these missionaries for Japan contend. Their minds are japanized; they have no thought of the United States' wellbeing.

To further promote the campaign to japanize America, via peaceful invasion if possible, Japan now plans to get into the public schools of this nation textbooks, prepared in that country, giving the Jap points of view on national and international matters. These textbooks, for the preparation of which a fund of $1,000,000 was raised, have been prepared in Japan by the powerful Japanese Society of International Cultural Relations, with the approval of the government of Japan.

Referring to them, the general secretary of that society says: "For several years the school heads of Hawaii and America, with the aid of many more influential educators and missionaries, made a thorough survey of American textbooks for the Japanese society. The survey revealed that if proper propaganda is systematically carried out in the schools the American children will become strong friends of Japan."

What do you think of this move? Are we going to sit idly by and permit the yellow-Japs and the japanized-Whites to carry propaganda for the supremacy of Japan into our public schools? Not only should it be prevented, but every Jap-language school in California should, by legislation, be closed and kept closed.

The drive of the Japs and the pro-Japs to have the Federal Government amend the Immigration Law by granting Japan the quota continues and gains force. The charge of "discrimination" echoes throughout the land, at the behest of Japan. Remember this: if ever the quota be conceded Japan, it will be followed by a demand for, and the granting of, racial equality, and that means the surrender of the Pacific Coast states of these United States to Japan. Fullblooded White Americans must unite to prevent any meddling with the law which prohibits immigration of aliens ineligible to citizenship, including Japs.

If not so serious,—in fact, threatening California's stability,—the state government tax situation could be classed as a rollicking comedy and would provoke naught but shrieks of laughter.

Last year, during the gubernatorial campaign, millions were put up by big business, prominent citizens and the movie interests, and the so-called "metropolitan" dailies—political playthings of capitalistic publishers—contributed endless quantities of space, to bombard the electorate with fear-propaganda that would put their selected one at the head of the state government. The campaign was successful. Today, the fear preachers and sponsors are groaning and moaning aplenty, for their favored one has forsaken them and advocates a tax program anything but to their liking

One of the big political shots who said California would certainly go to the bowwows unless the fear-candidate went over in November, now pleads for something to be done to control mounting taxation And one of the "metropolitans" is positively paralyzed with fright because the state government political machine it was so strong for last November, now is "lured by the demagogic hymn 'Get the votes of the poor and tax the rich'."

Truly, as ye sow, so shall ye reap. The big ones sowed fear to put their man in office, and now they are overfilled with fear. Certainly, "California is face to face with a great crisis," a crisis which the fear-mongers created and which many knew would come with the success of their campaign. And, judging from reports from Sacramento, the crisis which the mighty created will have to be solved by one of two methods: force out the present state government regime and in their places put those who can and will lower taxes by reducing the cost of government, or promote a tax strike that will force the state into bankruptcy! The question confronting California is, shall the minority inside or the majority outside the political racketeering ring be saved from bankruptcy?

Fired by future-votes desire, rather than commonsense and the state's welfare, the Merriam steam roller forced the California State Legislature to endorse the Townsend old-age pension plan as is. If EPIC would, as the Merriamites contended last November, bring multitudes of destitutes to this state, what will the TMP (Townsend-Merriam Plan) do?

A Lenten prayer: Lord, lead thy children out of the depression-wilderness into which they, following a course of evil, have wandered and become lost. Cast from amongst us, in government and business, the swine that, through trickery, deceit and other forms of dishonesty, guide us far astray morally. Deafen our ears to the honeyed words of false leaders and prophets, and blind our eyes to the attractiveness of alluring idols that have no good in them. Enthrone honesty, and make us to know that the one and only guide to real happiness and plenty is the symbol of Thy law, the Sign of the Cross.

Donald R. Richberg, head of the National Emergency Council, said in a March 18 address: "The grave danger of the present time lies in the failure of the progressive leaders of business, of agriculture and of politics to stand together in a common opposition to the old guard, who by doing nothing except obstruct progress would wreck recovery, and to the destroyers who by fomenting class conflicts would drive us into civil war. The critical issue of 1935 lies in this question: Is public opinion to be formed, and the leadership of business and politics to be guided, more and more by unreasoning emotion, or shall we see a revival of the rule of reason?"

"Guernsey Fraser, executive secretary of the Associated Farmers of California," said the Los Angeles Times of March 18 editorially, "makes an impressive showing in his recapitulation of the record of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins in the deportation field. That Madam Perkins is holding up 1,880 deportations without legal excuse, that her Commissioner of Immigration overruled court decisions with a wave of the hand, that she opposes curative legislation and seeks instead to get the deportation laws nullified, and that neither she nor anyone else in the administration is doing anything about getting passports for the Russian Communists under deportation sentence, brands her as an official out of sympathy with the protection of American institutions from alien revolutionary attack, despite protestations to the contrary."

Dr. Robert A. Unstinted praise for the Federal Treasury Department, which has linked all its agents in an anti-crime campaign, and is getting splendid result. This is the first, and only, honest-to-goodness attempt that has been made during the depression to clean up crookedness, mainly responsible for the depression. The cleanup should be thorough, in as well as out of government

Orders are reported to have emanated from the White House to ban the employment of more than one person in an immediate family by the Federal Government. The banning should be enforced in all of the too many branches of government. Limit family-feeding at the tax-trough, and force married women with able-bodied employed husbands out of employment, and the number on the welfare rolls will be materially reduced.

Louis B. Designed to keep the tax-trough well filled with coin of the realm and earmarked as having been inspired by political racketeers, several revenue-bond bills are before the State Legislature. They would permit governmental subdivisions, including the state, counties, cities, special districts, etc., to issue so-called revenue-bonds without reference to the people.

This is vicious legislation, a most dangerous threat against the property owners of California, whose holdings are already encumbered by a public debt of $3,300,000,000 about one-half the actual value. If this legislation be enacted, it is a cinch governmental agencies will lose no time in increasing the incumbrance to the full value.

Want your property confiscated for the benefit of the political racketeers? If not, demand of the legislators defeat of this proposed legislation. The right of governmental agencies to borrow money, on bonds or otherwise, should be lessened, rather than enlarged, if the commonwealth is to survive.

More crops destroyed by the elements—further evidence of the Supreme Cultivator's disapproval of the brain-trusters' attempted crops control! Necessities deliberately destroyed, while millions are in want, and then quantities of those same necessities brought in from other countries—for the further enrichment of wealthy importers!

If the plight of the needy can be solved by plowing under the necessities of life, then why not solve unemployment by plowing under manpower? What this nation requires is not destruction, but construction guided by honesty.

CALIFORNIA FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

APRIL 1885 WAS ANOTHER FREAK-weather month in California. While the Sierra Nevada region and southern California received an average number of April showers, the Sacramento and San Joaquin Valleys were overlooked, but .68 of an inch of rain falling there. Since January 1 the state had received a rainfall of but 3.45 inches, which made 1885 so far the driest year California had experienced since 1849.

In the year of greatest drought, 1864, the rainfall was 3.65 inches. The 1884-85 season's total beginning July 1 was normal, 16.24 inches, and the copious showers during the latter part of 1884 made crops secure from drought. April 17 and 18 a killing frost came, and did great damage to vegetable crops and grape vines in many sections of the state.

A San Luis Obispo weather sharp, who had for several years prognosticated weather conditions, bet $100 there would be four inches of rainfall in April, but the clouds did not sustain his prediction.

The season's first shipment of cherries arrived on the San Francisco market April 2. They came from Vacaville, Solano County, and sold for thirty-five cents a pound.

The expected salmon run up the Sacramento River did not materialize this month, as expected by fishermen and canneries who were ready for it, and several of the latter did not open.

A show of blooded horses bred in San Benito County was held at Hollister April 4. It was predicted the county would soon take the lead in this line of production.

Shipments of oranges from southern California to Eastern cities had now reached over 200 cars, 64,000 boxes, for the season. Satisfactory prices were being obtained.

N. D. Rideout of Marysville, Yuba County, subdivided into 100-acre plots and put on the market a large tract of land near Norman, Glenn County. Water for irrigation was to be canaled from the Sacramento River.

Chinese fishermen of San Francisco sent to China, April 19, a shipment of 1,100 sacks of dried shrimps.

On account of the mines petering out, the population of Bodie, Mono County, had dropped from 8,000 to 500 this month.

Sutter County officials reported the county jail was tenantless, and that the county hospital had but one patient.

An earthquake shock, severe enough to alarm the citizens of central California, shook up things at 8:05 p.m. of April 11. It was heaviest in the Yosemite Valley. San Jose, Santa Clara County, had a ten-second shock at 7:20 p.m. of April 21.

Dr. O'Donnell, San Francisco coroner, organized an impromptu parade of several hundred sand-lotters and two brass bands, April 5, that marched down Market street and around the waterfront. More than a score of Chinamen who were on the streets were assaulted and injured.

A baseball furore spread over California. In every city and town, youths and young men were organizing clubs galore and the air was filled with defis. The clubs played only for glory, not for revenue, and spectators paid no admission fee.

E. J. Baldwin, nationally known by the sobriquet "Lucky," was again sued for breach of promise. Miss Lou Perkins wanted $500,000 damages, claiming he had promised to divorce his wife and marry her.

Milton Ish, Santa Clara County farmer, fell from a barn roof, April 4, struck upon his head and, in a dazed condition, wandered to San Francisco, where he was shanghaied and, eventually, put ashore at Honolulu as an insane man. He returned home April 17, sane.

Wm. Patterson of San Francisco had patented and was building an airship, of cigar shape, 180x45 feet in size, with a balloon attached to the upper portion, and three propellers. It was to be launched in June.

The eighth annual N.S.G.W. Grand Parlor was held in San Jose, Santa Clara County, the week of April 13, and the delegates were royally entertained by the citizens of that city. The Order now had fifty-six Subordinate Parlors, its membership had doubled during the past year and its treasury was several thousand dollars ahead. Officers selected: Fred A. Greely of Marysville, Grand President; Dr. Charles W. Decker of San Francisco, Grand Vice-president; Henry Lunstedt of San Francisco, Grand Secretary; J. H. Tibbitts of Sutter Creek, Grand Treasurer; George A. Whitby of Modesto, Grand Lecturer; Charles L. Weller of San Francisco, Grand Orator; L. W. Juilliard of Santa Rosa, Grand Marshal; James H. Curley of Merced, Grand Inside Sentinel; J. L. Vignes of Los Angeles, Grand Outside Sentinel.

The stage from Mendocino was stopped north of Cloverdale, Sonoma County, April 6 by a masked man. The team got scared and ran away, leaving the highwayman gazing after them.

The stage from Plymouth, Amador County, was stopped near Forest Home, April 14, by a masked man who wanted the express box, but the stage carried none. The only passenger, a schoolmarm, was not molested. The robber took a package containing a loaf of bread.

By stretching a rope across the road, two highwaymen stopped the stage from Halfmoon Bay, San Mateo County, near San Felix April 16. They took the express box, which contained not a cent.

To obtain a supply of rock to build a sea wall, a construction company April 1 set off 11,000 pounds of powder in tunnels run beneath a stony cliff in Visitacion Valley, San Francisco. The blasts toppled the cliff over.

Dr. Charles M. Hitchcock, a pioneer Napa County physician, died April 3. He was the father of Mrs. Lillian Coit, after whom the Coit Memorial Tower atop Telegraph Hill, San Francisco, was named.

Thomas Marcum, who came to California from Virginia in 1849, died at Sacramento City April 5.

Andre Briswalter, who came from France and was a pioneer settler in Los Angeles, died there April 20. He was wealthy, and willed his estate to I. W. Hellman. The latter refused to accept it, stating he had all the wealth he desired and he, in turn, gave it to the orphanages of Los Angeles.

Fire destroyed a four-story building at the corner of Dupont and Sacramento streets, San Francisco, April 3. It was occupied by a horde of Chinamen, several of whom were cremated.

April 15, fire destroyed a large barn on the Stanford ranch at Vina, Tehama County. Seventy-five mules, forty horses and a large amount of equipment were burned. The loss was $30,000.

Fire at Ukiah, Mendocino County, April 30, destroyed ten buildings and caused a $20,000 loss.

W. F. Peacock tendered to Marysville, Yuba County, his ornithological collection of more than 2,000 specimens of birds.

Near Yreka, Siskiyou County, a Kanaka miner found a one-pound gold nugget April 2.

Johnny Ipswitch, aged 9, was playing in a Marysville, Yuba County, lumber yard April 16. A pile of lumber fell upon and killed him.

Alice McGeough, aged 11, poured coaloil upon a smouldering fire in San Francisco April 8. Her clothing caught fire and she was fatally burned.

Bertrand, 104-year-old Indian, attempted to board a moving freight train at Niles, Alameda County, April 30. He fell beneath a car and was killed.

Sheepmen of Mendocino County had a rodeo April 10. A quarrel developed in which a score joined in a shooting affray. A. Hamburg and Jim Frost were killed and a dozen others hurt.

Arthur Dugan, employed as a brakeman, lost his right arm in an accident. He learned telegraphy and was employed by the railroad company at Benicia, Solano County. With several companions, he started April 1 on a hunting trip. Near Suisun a gun fell from the wagon and was fired when it struck the ground. The charge tore through Walter McDonald's hand and entered Dugan's body, killing him instantly.

A lad applied for employment at the Standard theater, San Francisco, where a play, "Painting 'er Red," was on, and the manager told him to paint the town red. The youth procured the materials and began work on Lotta's Fountain at the intersection of Market and Kearny streets. He was not molested, as it was believed he had been employed by those in authority. He painted it a brilliant red before it was discovered he had done the job of his own accord.

A warm spell during the second week of April caused myriads of beetles, crickets and bugs to circle around electric lights at the tops of masts in Sacramento. Citizens in the residence districts complained that their lawns and porches were covered in the mornings with the dead insects and they wanted the lights removed. At the downtown intersections Chinamen scooped the insects into baskets by the shovelful to obtain a future plentiful medicine supply.

NIRVANA

(DELMAR H. WILLIAMS.)

If you would find Nirvana,
The state of perfect peace
That gives to all who enter
A full and sure release,

Then do not live deluded
And looking toward the skies
To find a world of splendor
Where fair Nirvana lies.

They think not, in this region,
Of time, or death, or place,
Nor are its dwellers mindful
Of station, creed, or race.

You'll find a pathway to it
But not one for return,
Nor any pleasure in it
But you, yourself, must earn.

This state is not lethean,
A place to sleep all day,
To sit in senseless slumber
And while the time away.

A magic word you utter—
When coming in from strife—
To Him who guards the portal;
This shibboleth is—"LIFE!"

"If, in the opinion of the people, the distribution or modification of the Constitutional powers be in any particular wrong, let it be corrected by an amendment in the way which the Constitution designates. But let there be no change by usurpation; for though this, in one instance, may be the instrument of good, it is the customary weapon by which free governments are destroyed."—George Washington.

The historic Butterfield stage station, built in 1851 near Valecito, Calaveras County, is being restored by SERA along original lines.

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER

SPRING IS NOT JUST A QUESTION OF robins and sunshine. It is essentially a matter of new viewpoints and fresh enthusiasm. The first flowering of new fashions all up and down the land comes just when the too-familiar face of last year's fashion is beginning to bore us. Along come the new spring clothes, and we are all on the bandwagon again. The choice of a first spring outfit becomes one of life's major issues, and that is no wonder. Every woman knows that she looks prettier with a ruffle around her neck, more fragile in ethereal chiffons and more youthful in a shallow little hat. This is the season when she can do something about it—make a point of looking as pretty and feminine as possible.

Flowers are worn in the hair with sheer fluttery fabrics by night, and regency frills and bonnets may frame the face by day. Soft bangs and, if you like, crisp curls, may be worn all over the head. Your make-up may be freshly pink and white, right down to the finger tips.

Soften up the spring suit with the most frivolous accessories you can find. Even the trimmest tailored suit demands gay touches this season. Bright taffeta blouses or scarfs, frilly blouses frothing out at the neckline in a ruffle or a bow, a couple of strands of pearls all flatly contradict the boyish simplicity of the simplest reefer. Let a bunch of cherries or a cluster of field flowers bloom gayly on your straw sailor, and let chamois yellow gloves and a yellow burnt straw hat add sunny contrast to your navy, gray or black suit.

This season you may judge a silk by its surface, with high honors to the crepons, matelasses and other textures. Sheers have gained weight. Linens have come to town in new rough heavy weaves that actually do not crush. There is a rustle of taffeta in the air, and chiffons have fluttered back into fashion for evening.

In general, things are not what they seem. Silks look like woolens, cottons look like linens, linens look like tweeds, and chic confusion reigns. Prints are best in small patterns. Closely spaced cravat types are for jacket costumes and are more widely spaced when a crepon weave demands publicity. An amusing novelty is the tiny new animal prints such as scotties, sealyhams, and other dumb friends in surprisingly good motifs, forming rather close patterns.

This season is a gallant gesture. Now is the time to indulge preference for the picturesque. Swing a cape about your shoulders and watch it dramatize the whole personality, for capes add a new animation to the silhouette. Printed fabrics are new at the moment, and good for all summer. A smart accessory for them is a large chiffon handkerchief of the same shade as the background or the most prominent color in the design. Such extras are the things which make a new dress seem an individual possession.

A white dress is always good. While white is a becoming color, like black it cannot be dated, and it is smart as long as it holds together. Little jackets ensembled with new evening dresses are of quilted crepe and taffeta, a fabric which matches the frock. Taffeta is particularly good when used in this way with rhinestone buttons to fasten the jacket.

A good deal of fuss is made over sashes for some of the new dancing frocks. For evening, they are showing little shawls of sheer fabrics which may be worn around the shoulders or draped around the hair. Coral dawn is a heavenly tea rose shade and, by its very name, suggests a cool desert. Sunrise, in chiffon, makes a charming dinner gown.

The smartest women will wear a shirtwaist frock all summer. Peasant linen and shantung are two of the best. Taffeta is smart, but the shops are full of other smart materials, with emphasis on the lovely pure silk prints, the smart tie silks, the really marvelous novelty rayons and the gorgeous new linens and cottons.

Two taffeta items in any one wardrobe is about right. Smart accessories should be navy blue with suits of gray or natural, but do not put all blue accessories with a navy suit. Add a raspberry blouse, a yellow hat, white pique revers to a navy suit, for all one color is tiresome. White pique gloves are first on the list, any time.

As to hats, there are lots to choose from. We incline to bright colors, to sailors, to thick brims, to low crowns, to bretons and to scoop brim hats. This season's collection of spring and summer hats is so original it is positively dizzy, and so different from last season that it leaves one breathless trying to catch up. A great many hats are trimmed with lace or pleated frills which frame the face or peek out over the edge of a high crown. They are quaint when the wearer dons a flowered frock with long full skirt and tight bodice and carries a fluffy parasol or ribboned fan. They are picturesque and flattering, too.

Small tailored bow hats and pliant brims are new for spring. Toyo straw sports a red luster straw with a high-low crown, trimmed with grosgrain ribbon. A dusty pink straw fabric makes the persian turban which is trimmed with a waterfall bow of brown ribbon. The cuff brim which bends down over the head to the neck nape is made of toyo straw, and a perky black grosgrain bow rides the peak of the white or pink straw which is worn with a deeper pink flannel skirt. This skirt is interestingly and flatteringly cut and may be worn with a twin sweater set of paler pink. Pink sandals complete this perfect picture for early spring.

Sports costumes are among the most popular that a woman can include in her wardrobe. They are worn for so many occasions. A top coat is made of scotch plaid, and the color scheme with its vivid green, blue, scarlet or yellow is stimulated by gleaming black and white touches. The useful patch pockets are for score cards, racing programs and other similar articles. Cocktail formals come in white, pink, iris and blue. Beautiful redingote effects have print trims. Navy jacket costumes have coin dot trims. Gay and subtle prints come in solid colors with a rich color relief and combinations to satisfy the taste of the well-dressed woman.

Fashionable beaches next summer will look like a dress rehearsal of "anything goes." The girls who have clung to the simple and unadorned type of dark solid color jersey swim suits have at last been converted to the fancy dress creed. The winter resorts are the measuring sticks for summer frocks, and fanciful swim suits are worn by the most conservative beach lollers as well as their gayer daughters. There are seads of waterproof satin suits in colors challenging the rainbow. Some are combined with lastex, for greater figure control, and all are brief and beguiling. Some consist simply of brassiere and shorts, with a brief wrap-around skirt which is removed for serious swimming. Plaid seersuckers, silk and waterproof, all appear in the swim suit parade, cut on little-girl apron styles and highly becoming to girls with sub-deb figures. The Tahiti influence is still going strong. Handknit suits in bold peasant stripes are all to the good, and rubber suits with caps to match are still the choice of the younger set. Marine and turquoise blue are the favorite colors, with bright pastels nosing in for second place.

Jackets with sun frocks is one of the good ideas of this season. Dark colors are new for sunback frocks. The sun frock comes in natural linen, dark cotton and white shantung. For the clinging all-silk knitted seasuit, convention as well as esthetics insist on a concealing wrap to cover the sleek wetiness after the dip. Capes, mannish robes and knee-length swagger coats are the best looking beach wrap models seen so far this season. Accessories for the beach are alluring, and afford great opportunities for pure swank. Raffia sandals have cork soles. Raffia coronets restrain flying hair, and they come in bright colors. Huge rug towels are seen in bright shades. Gaudy umbrellas to stick in the sand, and chair backs with canvas seats which rest flush with the sand, help to make the beach lolling picturesque.

"JULEAN ARNOLD, FOR MANY YEARS noted U. S. Commercial Attache in China, stated during discussion at an International Relations Section meeting that we place too much importance, consideration and stress on the fear of hurting the feelings of Japan or increasing her suspicion. He stated that there is no end to Japanese suspicion and that our policy should not be dictated by the necessity of allaying Japan's suspicions. The speaker declared himself dumfounded by Japan's attitude of trying to obtain everything it desires irrespective of the best interests of China.

"Mr. Arnold pointed out that it is time we should be offended instead of motivating our conduct by fear of giving offense to Japan. At the same time we should look out for our own interests and feelings as well as those of Japan." —The Commonwealth, official journal of the Commonwealth Club of California.

YOUR FLAG AND MY FLAG DEDICATED.

At an official visit to Oro Fino Parlor No. 9 N.D.G.W., February 21, Grand President Gladys E. Noce dedicated a Flag of the United States of America presented to the Parlor by Edith Chicazola. In the following words, the Grand President dedicated the flag in memory of George Washington:

"I feel that there could be no more fitting time than with the memory of George Washington hovering about us and at this meeting so near the day of his birth, to dedicate the beautiful flag that stands at the altar in his memory—the flag given to you by one of your own members; for it was Washington who designed it, it was Washington who carried it into battle and who held it aloft in victory. It has been the herald that lighted the highway of the world. It floats over a land of liberty and progress, and it is our duty to teach the love of it and the wonders of it that shall last throughout life, for it is your flag and it is my flag, and oh, how much it holds: your land and my land, safe within its folds."

Many members of the Grand President's official family were present: Past Grands Margaret Hill and Evelyn I. Carlson, Grand Vice-president Anna Thuesen, Grand Trustees Alice Lane and Orinda Giannini, Supervising Deputy Gertrude LaFortune and Deputy Lida Wood. Two candidates were initiated. The meetingroom was beautifully decorated with California poppies and American Flags. A banquet, in honor of the Grand President, preceded the meeting.

RECEPTION FOR N.S. GRAND PRESIDENT.

In honor of Grand President Chas. A. Koenig, the San Francisco Native Sons, through the Extension of the Order Committee, are sponsoring a reception and dance to be held at Native Sons Auditorium, 414 Mason street, the evening of Saturday, April 27. Charles F. Strothoff is chairman of the general arrangements committee.

SUNDAY BREAKFAST AT N.D. HOME.

Orinda No. 56 and Arguello No. 257 Parlors were joint hostesses at the Sunday breakfast at the Native Daughter Home March 10. Presidents Rose Van Vaak and Gladys Cruise presided, and Edward Mancuso was the speaker. Musical numbers were rendered by the Native Daughters Glee Club and Mr. Read. A large number enjoyed the occasion.

NATIVE DAUGHTERS NEWS.

Orinda Parlor No. 56 had an old-fashioned cascarone dance March 2 that was a grand success; Grand Trustee Orinda Giannini was chairman. Members born in February and March were entertained March 8, and each received a gift. Also, two recent brides, Norma McMillian and Alice Bond, were surprised with gifts.

A most enjoyable affair was an indoor picnic given March 11 by La Estrella Parlor No. 89. To give the appearance of picnic grounds, the hall was decorated with tree branches. A committee headed by Lola Horgan was in charge.

Genevieve Parlor No. 132 observed February 21 Washington's Birthday with a musical program of patriotic airs, after which dainty refreshments were served. A successful whist was held March 7 with the boys of El Dorado Parlor No. 52 N.S.G.W. The Parlor's drum corps cooperated with the United Irish Societies in honoring Ireland's patron saint by participating in the Saint Patrick's Day parade.

Keith Parlor No. 137 featured a corned-beef dinner March 14. The table decorations honored Saint Patrick, and the committee in charge —Sally Sullivan (chairman), Ella Miller, Ethel Porter and Vera Thompson—were dressed in irish costumes. Keith Glee Club rendered appropriate selections, and Mary Walsh entertained with jigs. After the feast three candidates were initiated. In honor of President Vera Thompson, the Parlor had a dinner-dance. Chairman Helen Mann was assisted by Alvera Corcoran, Diana Greenley, Gertrude LaFortune, Helen Fairbairn and Sigrid Pihlgren. On Keith's behalf, Mrs. Mann presented the president with a silver serving tray. Among the guests were Past Grand Emma Lou Humphrey, Supervising Deputy Gertrude LaFortune and Deputy Katherine Jensen.

Linda Rosa Parlor No. 170 had an official visit from Grand President Gladys E. Noce, February 27. In honor of George Washington's Birthday, the hall was tastefully decorated in red, white and blue. Splendid speeches were enjoyed, and the Native Daughters Glee Club rendered beautiful selections. Among others present were Grand Vice-president Anna Thuesen, Grand Secretary Sallie Thaler, Grand Trustees Orinda Giannini and Alice Lane, Grand Inside Sentinel Alice Oldham, Grand Outside Sentinel Claire Lindsey, Supervising Deputy Gertrude LaFortune and Deputy Nora Schefflin. Emily Taylor, chairman of the evening, was assisted by Pauline Huber, Margaretha McGowan, N. Wingfield, Madeline Smith and Anna Prior. An appetizing repast was served at the meeting's close.

THE HOMELESS CHILD

(WILLIAM CAVAGNARO.)

Out of nowhere, despairing wild,
Comes the plaintive cry of the Homeless Child,
Mounting in an increasing roar,
Echoing through the ages evermore:
Give me a home, is all I ask;
Give me some sun in which to bask;
Give me some covering for my little body;
Keep my shoes from becoming worn and shoddy;
Give me some food, give me drink;
Send me to school, and teach me to think!
All I ask of this vale of strife
Is just an even chance at life.

NATIVE SONS OFFICIAL VISITS.

Grand First Vice-president Harmon D. Skillin paid an official visit to Stanford Parlor No. 76 N.S.G.W., March 5, when several candidates were initiated. An "Irish night," honoring Saint Patrick, the original snake charmer, was featured by the Parlor March 19. Entertainment de luxe was provided and, of course, appropriate refreshments. The occasion, as announced by Chairman Joseph Forgarty, was for "oldtimers to meet newcomers, newcomers to meet oldtimers, oldtimers to renew old acquaintances."

THE DEATH RECORD.

Emilie Peguillan, father of Miss Branice Peguillan, recording secretary of Genevieve Parlor No. 132 N.D.G.W., died March 8 at the age of 65.

Native Sons of the Golden West

NEVADA CITY—HYDRAULIC NO. 56'S celebration of its golden institution anniversary February 26—advance notice of which appeared in The Grizzly Bear for March—was largely attended by members of the Order and eligibles from Nevada, Sierra and Placer Counties. Honor-guests included Grand President Chas. A. Koenig, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Trustee Charles H. Spengemann, Past Grand Charles L. Dodge and R. R. Veale (General Winn No. 32). Of the charter members, the following are still identified with the Parlor: Dr. C. W. Chapman and James F. Colley, who were present at the festivities, William M. Richards, Roy B. Johnson, Wallace J. Williams, Fred Bost and William Welch.

Dr. Chapman was chairman of the evening and briefly outlined Hydraulic's history, and addresses were made by Grand President Koenig, Grand Secretary Regan, Past Grand Dodge, District Deputy Robert Kohler and others. At the conclusion of the program in the meeting-room, an elaborate dinner was served. In recognition of the Parlor's fiftieth anniversary, Mrs. Alison Watt of Grass Valley, Past Grand President N.D.G.W., sent a boquet of beautiful red carnations. This editorial tribute appeared in the Grass Valley Union of February 28: "First and last Hydraulic Parlor has been more than a lodge, more than a fraternal group—it has been distinctly a civic institution; a developer of men; a living expression of patriotism. Each oncoming generation has caught up the banner of California's transcendent history, and how proudly the emblem has been carried onward and upward! Of especial acclaim are those two veterans of the full life of the fraternal order as organized in Nevada City—Dr. C. W. Chapman and James F. Colley. Such steadfastness is so rare as to exist only where great love and veneration for chartered subject exists."

Eleven Candidates at Group Initiation.

Santa Ana—The group initiation of the southern Parlors held here March 2 under the auspices of Santa Ana No. 265, drew a crowd of some one hundred, although the night was stormy. Eleven candidates were initiated, six for Arrowhead No. 110, three for Santa Ana, and one each for University No. 272 and Compton No. 273, the officers of Arrowhead exemplifying the ritual.

Ivan Harper presided during good of the order, and among the speakers were Deputies Daniel McSweeny, F. L. McGarvey and Walter Hiskey, Presidents Fred Staebler of Ramona, Dr. Robert C. Eshelman of Santa Monica Bay, Eugene C. Ward of Arrowhead and W. R. Gisler of Santa Ana, "Bob" Brazelton, Edward Baldwin and Vincent Hopkins. Entertainment was provided and refreshments were served by the host Parlor.

Highlights on Americanism.

Oakland—The meeting of Fruitvale No. 252, March 8, when Grand Trustee Henry Lyon paid his official visit to the Parlor, was attended by 150 members of the Order. Several candidates were initiated, the ritual being splendidly exemplified by Fruitvale's officers. Earl Warren, Alameda County district attorney, introduced Grand Trustee Lyon, El Dorado County district attorney, who enthused his hearers with an address on the workings of the Order in which he intermingled some highlights on Americanism.

Grand President Chas. A. Koenig, Past Grand James F. Hoey and District Deputy Frank P. Smith were speakers also. Among others present were Grand First Vice-president Harmon D. Skillin, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Past Grand Charles L. Dodge, Grand Trustees Adrien M. Hynes, Joseph J. McShane and Edward T. Schnarr. A banquet concluded the meeting.

Honor Conferred on Deserving.

San Diego—San Diego No. 108 had an open meeting March 6, when William Tompkins, an authority, gave an address on Indian signs, folklore, dress and dances. Many members of the Parlor attended February 22 the dedication of San Diego's 38,000,000,000-gallon El Capitan dam. Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer, chairman City Water Commission, presided and, on behalf of No. 108, presented the city's official flag and a California Republic banner. He stated that the city's work on the dam is in line with the Native Sons' policy of developing natural resources.

Deputy Grand President and Mrs. Mayrhofer were signally honored when, because of their outstanding work in the restoration of Mission San Diego de Alcala, they were invested March 24 as Knight Commander and Lady of the Holy Sepulcher. The honor was conferred by Pope Pius XI, and Bishop John J. Cantwell officiated at the ceremony, the first held in America.

Admission Day Plans Going Forward.

Stockton—Stockton No. 7 celebrated March 11 its fifty-fourth institution anniversary with a banquet attended by some 200 members. The Parlor was instituted by Grand President Frank J. Higgins, March 12, 1881. Addresses were made by Grand President Chas. A. Koenig, Grand First Vice-president Harmon D. Skillin, Past Grand Hubert R. McNoble and George F. McNoble. Others in attendance were Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Inside Sentinel Walter P. Rothenbush and Grand Trustee Joseph J. McShane.

Ray Friedberger, chairman of the Parlor's 1935 Admission Day committee, gave a report on the activities of that committee which showed that preparations for the September 9 festivities in Stockton are well in hand.

Sheriff Given Flags.

San Bernardino—In recognition of his services in public office, Arrowhead No. 110 presented March 14 to Sheriff Emmett L. Shay, a member of the Parlor, United States of America and California State (Bear) Flags. The presentation addresses were made by Grand Trustee Donald E. VanLuven and President Eugene C. Ward. Other members of No. 110 present at the ceremonies were M. Guy Hale, Edward Poppett, George Pickett, Harry R. Heap, Walter C. Pitts, Fred J. Atkinson and E. C. Eickelman.

Arrowhead was addressed March 6 by Dr. L. L. White on "Interesting Facts on Dentistry," and by Harold Lord on "How To Keep Clean." March 12 a SERA program was presented, with Harold P. Thoreson as the main speaker. The Parlor initiated nine candidates March 21, making its gain for the month fifteen and entitling it to an additional Grand Parlor delegate.

Homeless Children

A WORTHWHILE NON-SECTARIAN ENDEAVOR SPONSORED AND SUPPORTED BY THE ORDERS OF NATIVE SONS AND NATIVE DAUGHTERS OF THE GOLDEN WEST

THE CENTRAL HOMELESS CHILDREN Committee records for the year, from April 1, 1934, to March 19, 1935, disclose 453 applicants for children, 213 of whom specified a choice of girls, 138 expressed a preference for boys, while the remaining 102 have been willing to accept either boy or girl. Three hundred seventy-nine are of Protestant faith, sixty-six of Catholic faith and nine of Hebrew faith.

Three hundred twenty of the applicants asked that they be given infants, and 133 asked for children from one year to six years of age. During the year, sixty-eight girls and sixty-five boys have been placed for adoption. One hundred and forty, after a year's probation, have been legally adopted.

A three-year-old girl who was placed when an infant has been unable to get her right foot to the ground. After many examinations and X-rays by several physicians, a diagnosis was given that the leg would be permanently crippled and that there was evident brain impairment. An operation was performed by the surgeons of the Shriner's Hospital in San Francisco and the lovely child is now running about with her entire foot on the ground. She will wear a small brace until June, when the doctors give the assurance of a perfect recovery.

A two and-a-half-year old girl, when left alone by her foster mother, shaved one side of her kitten's head. When she was asked why she did not shave both sides, she said: "I had to hold on to one side."

A small boy's mother was distressed upon coming home to find his toys all about the house, and she exclaimed: "Why, Robert, I never have seen such disorder. Why are your toys scattered about like this?" And the small boy looked around in dismay and said: "Well, I told dad about it, but you know dad."

Expenditures of the Central Committee for February were $1,621.09; total expenditures since April 1, 1934, $17,322.38. Receipts for February, $1,234.89; total receipts from April 1, 1934, $9,137.92. Transferred from savings account for operative expense, $675, which left a balance of $388.41 in the commercial account March 1, 1935, and $5,525 in savings banks.

During February, Native Daughters Parlors contributed $142.65, making a total of $1,568.49 since April 1, and $795.35 to the milk fund since April 1. Las Lomas Parlor No. 72 of San Francisco completed payment on "Dorothea's" milk. Phoebe A. Hearst Parlor No. 214 of Manteca has taken a second child, a boy, and calls him "William Randolph."

Native Sons Parlors contributed $225 during February, with a total of $766.59 for the year. Joint Parlors have contributed $1,575.39—Los Angeles County $500, making the total for the year $1,008, and Alameda County $354.15.

In Memoriam

KATE BEMIS SOUTHER.

To the Officers and Members of Lugonia Parlor No. 241 N.D.G.W.: We, your committee appointed to draft a memorial of love and respect to the memory of our sister, Kate Bemis Souther, respectfully submit the following:

Whereas, The breaking of precious earthly ties brings to our minds the mysterious ways of the Eternal Father, we have the consolation that those are indeed the ways of infinite love and that He doeth all things well, whereas, "Native Daughterism" was no mere useless term to our sister; it meant the highest form of love and loyalty; it was a pleasure and a privilege to know her and count her as a true character be it

Resolved, That a copy of this memorium be spread upon the minutes of our Parlor, that copies be sent her husband, son and daughter and that it be sent to The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication.

EVA M. BEMIS,
LOIS D. POLING,
Committee.

Past Is Recalled.

Etna—At the March 6 meeting of Eschscholtzia No. 112 members listened with interest to the reading of the first three parts of Past Grand Eliza D. Keith's excellent compilation, "History of the Order Native Daughters of the Golden West." Particular attention was given to the following paragraph: "Grand President Watson requested presence of Past Grand President Tina L. Kane at the altar, where Genevieve Baker of Alta Parlor No. 3, in behalf of the Grand Parlor, presented the Past Grand President with an elegant gold watch, accompanying the gift with an eloquent address delivered in a most impressive manner. Overcome with emotion, Past Grand President Kane was unable to respond and with a silence more eloquent than words retired to her station."

This special interest was due to the fact that the watch itself was in evidence on the recording secretary's desk at the Parlor meeting. The gift of the Second Grand Parlor to Past Grand Kane is indeed a fine piece of workmanship, exquisitely embellished. On the front of the case is an artistic monogram, on the back a diamond, and on the inside cover a beautifully engraved inscription, "Presented by Grand Parlor N.D.G.W., 1888." There is also a fob, a diamond-studded gold ball attached to a short gold chain. The watch was greatly appreciated by the Order's first Grand President. She treasured it because of what it represented, delighted in its beauty and reliability, and found the greatest pleasure in its daily use from the time of the presentation until the day before she passed away in October 1904.

Numerous Visitors.

San Jose—Grand President Gladys E. Noce paid her official visit to Vendome No. 100, March 13. She was accompanied by Grand Vice-president Anna Thuesen, Grand Trustees Orinda Giannini, Alice Lane, Clara Gairaud and Clarice Cook, Grand Inside Sentinel Alice Oldham, Grand Outside Sentinel Claire Lindsey, Past Grands Eliza Keith, Margaret Hill, Bertha Briggs and Estelle Evans, Supervising Deputies Mabel Sontheimer, Ethel Begley and Hattie Kelly, and sixteen deputies, including Hilda Campbell. Delegations representing twenty-four Parlors were also present.

Nine candidates were initiated, and greetings were extended by Rose B. Baker. The Grand President was the recipient of lovely gifts, and Tilla Brohaska, the Parlor's organizer, received honors among the grand officers. Previous to the meeting Grand President Noce broadcasted on the homeless children, and at 6:30 a dinner was held in her honor. Decorations of smilax, golden and green harps, shamrocks, etc., were cleverly arranged under the direction of Alice Kady and committee. Elizabeth Hayes and May Calico were joint chairmen for refreshments, while Mabel Sontheimer and Gertrude Mathers were in charge of the dinner. An escort team of twelve members, attired in pastel-shaded gowns, acted in various events. Hazel Haub, Gertrude Mathers and Maude Darneille were the soloists.

For the past seven years Grand Trustee Clara Gairaud of Vendome has been music chairman for the Federation of Women's Clubs in Santa Clara County. March 22 she directed the music for the annual county meeting, also made the music reports for twenty-four county clubs.

California Program Attracts.

Chico—Annie K. Bidwell No. 168 sponsored a California program, February 28, which was attended by more than 200. Mrs. H. A. Hintz was the chairman, and the Misses Carmelita Girdler, Marian Myers, Norma Spangler and Edith Oliver, attired in earlyday costumes, acted as ushers. The Spanish, Mexican and American periods of California history were represented on the program, which was presented by Carmelita Girdler, Elaine Cooper, F. F. Stebbins, Gerald Laumer, the Chico State Teachers College quartet, Mike Koval and Myrtle McLain.

Past Grand Esther R. Sullivan gave an absorbingly interesting talk on "California's Glamorous History," and commended the Parlor for the part it is taking in perpetuating the memory of the glorious deeds of the state's pioneer me and women. March 17, the Parlor had a Saint Patrick Sunday morning breakfast, at which the members' husbands were guests. Annie Stockstill was in charge.

Pioneer Mothers Tree Marked.

Santa Ana—Santa Ana No. 235 had many visitors March 11, among them Grand Trustee Nellie Cline, Supervising Deputy Mary Noerenberg and Deputy Lillian Zirkel. Past President Mae West has disposed of one dozen of the Grand Parlor cook books for the Parlor. The thimble club met at the Placentia home of Chairman Mattie Edwards and finished another quilt; for faithful work and in recognition of her birth anniversary, Mrs. Edwards was the recipient of a coffee urn.

The tree dedicated by Santa Ana last year to the memory of the Pioneer Mothers of California was appropriately marked March 25. Matilda Lemon, chairman of the Parlor's history and landmarks committee, was in charge, and the main speaker of the day was Grand President Gladys E. Noce.

Gratifying Reports.

Hollister—Copa de Oro No. 105 and San Juan Bautista No. 179, in joint session here March 14 extended hospitality to Grand President Gladys E. Noce at a particularly happy evening with St. Patrick's Day as the theme. At dinner, 128 members of the Order were seated at prettily decorated tables. With President Ruby Nyland of Copa de Oro presiding, an enjoyable program was rendered during the dinner hour. Past Grand Bertha A. Briggs paid a tribute to "Our Absent Members." Among others introduced were Grand Trustees Orinda Giannini, Clara A. Gairaud and Alice Lane, Supervising Deputy Rose Rhyner, Deputy Mildred Peers and President Lillie Rampone of San Juan Bautista.

The meetinghall was attractive with baskets of daffodils and California poppies, and the officers of both Parlors presented a pretty appearance in evening gowns. Eight candidates were initiated into Copa de Oro and two into San Juan Bautista. Grand President Noce was presented with gifts on behalf of Copa de Oro by a group, attired as Irish peasants, trundling a wheelbarrow heaped with flowers, which were tossed gayly to the audience; the gifts were hidden beneath the flowers. San Juan Bautista presented the honor-guest with a picture of San Juan Bautista Mission, concealed beneath a heap of real shamrock; four members of the Parlor formed a living shamrock. In addition to those present at the dinner, many additional members joined the happy throng at the meeting. Gratifying reports were presented by the chairmen of the various projects sponsored by both Parlors.

The following morning the Grand President was honored at a breakfast sponsored by the members of San Juan Bautista in their historic little city, members of Copa de Oro also being in attendance. A visit was paid to the present meetingplace of San Juan Bautista in the corridor rooms of San Juan Bautista Mission, and a tour was made of the mission, and the adobe recently purchased by the Parlor which will be fully restored and used as its home.

Baby Shower and Party.

Oakland—Aloha No. 106 celebrated its thirty-sixth anniversary February 19. Guests included Grand President Gladys E. Noce, Supervising Deputy Dora Brayton and Deputy Marguerite Welsh. Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler, the chairman, surprised everyone by having the girls find their placecards—their own likenesses pasted upon various cutout pictures and posts. Following dinner, Emma Dieckhoff and Gladys Farley of the Parlor's literary committee presented an interesting program commemorating the birthdays of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln. Games and singing completed a very enjoyable affair.

March 12, Aloha celebrated Saint Patrick Day and held a homeless children baby shower and party. Martha Watson was in charge and asked Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler, social chairman, to open the several packages presented by members of the Parlor, Deputy Marguerite Welsh, Supervising Deputy Dora Brayton and visiting members of Albany Parlor. The homeless children committee of Aloha has also made baby clothes that will fill the cedar chest, donated by Martha Watson last year and which stays in the office of Secretary Mary E. Brusie except when taken out to fill it. The banquet table had as a centerpiece a large stork, and at each place was a pink or blue baby shoe filled with Saint Patrick candies; shamrocks were also in abundance. Literary Chairman Emma Dieckhoff gave a reading on the life of Saint Patrick and a humorous anecdote of how he rid Ireland of snakes. In keeping with the occasion, Thelma Rogers, accompanied by Evelyn Almasy, sang "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," and Organist Eda Steuer played several Irish selections.

Grand President Makes Presentation.

Albany—At the institution of Albany No. 260 February 25, referred to in The Grizzly Bear for March, Grand President Gladys E. Noce was assisted by Grand Vice-president Anna C. Thuesen, Grand Secretary Sallie R. Thaler, Grand Marshal Edna Briggs, Grand Trustees Alice Lane, Clarice Cook and Orinda Giannini, Grand Inside Sentinel Alice Oldham, Grand Outside Sentinel Claire Lindsey, Past Grand Estelle Evans, Supervising Deputy Dora Brayton and all the deputies of Alameda County. Thirty-two of the forty-one charter applicants were present for the institution ceremonies.

Grand President Noce gave a resume of the history of the Order and explained the projects in detail. She expressed sincere gratitude for the efforts put forth by Albany's organizers and extended best wishes for the Parlor's success. As a token of appreciation, she presented to the Parlor a silver-mounted gavel. Refreshments concluded the institution.

Kern County Beauties Shown Visitor.

Bakersfield—Grand President Gladys E. Noce made her official visit to El Tejon No. 239 and Miocene No. 228 (Taft) in joint session here March 15. Other guests were Grand Trustees Hazel Hansen and Nellie Cline, Deputy Lena Aspden and Clara Bennett (Aloha No. 106). All were honored at a banquet. Both the banquetroom and the meetingroom were tastefully decorated with the beautiful wild flowers of Kern County.

Six candidates were initiated. Grand President Noce spoke briefly, but interestingly, of the Order's projects. President Juanita Pettis presented the Parlor's gift to Mrs. Noce while Margaret Sage, soloist of the evening, sang "Sweet and Lovely." In charge of arrangements for the occasion were Supervising Deputy Evalyn Towne and Edna Mae Hobson (co-chairmen), Ralpha Sanders, Florence Hinderliter, Minnie B. Heath, Ona Mae Moffett, Kate Phillips and Deputy Louise Herod.

The following day, Saturday, Grand President Noce and her sister, Mrs. Bennett, were guests of Supervising Deputy Towne, Sadie Clendenen and Louise Nelson, who took them on a tour of the wild flower fields and up the beautiful Kern Canyon. At Taft, Mrs. Noce was the overnight guest of Mrs. Towne. Sunday, Miocene Parlor entertained the visitor at breakfast, and then a picnic was planned to visit the Cuyama Valley and the Painted Rocks.

LOS ANGELES CITY AND COUNTY

CASA ADOBE DE SAN RAFAEL—ONE of California's oldest historic shrines—in Glendale was dedicated in the presence of a thousand persons March 10. The adobe was built by Tomas Sanchez on a portion of Rancho San Rafael, the first California land grant made by a king of Spain. Jose Maria Verdugo, a "retired sergeant of the Port of San Diego," was the recipient of this grant in October 1784. The casa and grounds have been restored by the City of Glendale with the assistance of SERA.

Mrs. Louis S. Hansen, president of Glendale's Parks and Recreation Commission and Grand Trustee N.D.G.W., who devoted several years of effort to the accomplishment of this project, presided at the dedication ceremonies. Mayor Joseph F. Baudino delivered the welcome address, and other speakers were Orra E. Monnette and Dr. Clifford A. Cole.

Among those introdu ed were Miss Dora Verdugo, great-granddaughter of Jose Maria Verdugo, who was granted the acreage in which Glendale and several adjoining communities are now located, and Tomas Sanchez, whose father built the original adobe. Jose Verdugo died April 12, 1831.

Within the great wall surrounding the landmark, extensive landscaping has been carried out. This includes sunken gardens, a fruit orchard, an herb garden, a pergola and a grille. Some of the trees are estimated to be more than eighty years old. The adobe itself has been wonderfully restored, and in its historic rooms will be housed exhibits of earlyday heirlooms and treasures.

TO THE READERS OF THE GRIZZLY BEAR MAGAZINE—NATIVE SONS AND DAUGHTERS AND OTHERS, MEANING YOU, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

A new California book is just out, written by Herman W. Frank, a pioneer of Los Angeles, which is a most interesting and authentic contribution to the books of California history, titled "Scrap Book of a Western Pioneer." Writing as an interested spectator, the author has created a story through the pages of which many local personages, some of them yet living, move like the characters in a drama. As a basis for the work, he started a scrap book as early as 1881, and he includes a readable diary of a trip around the world.

You, as a native son or daughter, should be interested in this book. You may own an autographed copy of this limited edition, now for sale in all book stores of Los Angeles.

The price is $5.00. Book has 300 pages, 36 inserts, with handsome cover. Superior quality paper and binding.

We quote: "Mr. Frank has written an autobiography which is one of the most fascinating contributions to the history of California that we have ever read," says W. Irvin Brennan, Sales Director Times-Mirror Press. "Local characters and color from the early days of Los Angeles, and even down to the city of today, make a tale which reads like one of Horatio Alger's immortal stories of success. Far from being a eulogy, however, of Mr. Frank, a great deal of its interest comes from his mention of the many characters whom you may have known also."

SOAK THIS!

On the April 2 ballot appears Los Angeles City Charter Amendment "3-A." VOTE NO, unless desirous that your holdings be completely submerged in confiscatory public debt. Approval of this proposal will make it possible for public officials to borrow funds, without limit, for any old purpose. It takes from the taxpayer the right to approve or disapprove expenditures of public funds. It takes away the privilege of saying whether or not you want your property "hocked" as security for borrowings. Public officials know that thinking people are through with bond issues,—mortgaging the future—so they have designed this scheme to get the "dough." Don't be fooled, VOTE NO Proposition "3-A."—C.M.H.

policy of the United States consists basically in recruiting to the American population only such immigrants as are assimilable, in numbers and quality, to the predominating native white stocks of the United States. . . . In order to support this basic policy, it is recommended that the following specific things be done: . . . (4) That no immigrant be admitted, whether by quota or otherwise, who is not—First, a member of the white race; . . . (5) That for the purpose of American immigration laws, a white person be defined as one all of whose ancestors were members of the white or Caucasian race. . . . (9) That, beside keeping records of country of origin, the Immigration Service be required also to keep records in terms of race-descent for each immigrant. . . . (12) That no individual be admitted as an immigrant whose wife, husband or minor child is, for any cause, inadmissible. . . . (14) That the United States deny entry into its territory of any would-be immigrant who adheres to the principle that loyalty to any foreign nation, or to any alien race or organization, transcends obligations to the Government of the United States, particularly when such alien races or organizations are already settled in the United States as segregates which tend to resist assimilation by the American people." . . .

THE SEARCH FOR HUMBOLDT BAY BY A PARTY OF AMERICAN PIONEERS.

At Weaverville, Trinity County, Indians reported to miners that, eight suns to the west, was a large bay with fertile land and tall trees. A vision of a second San Francisco, a port for all northern California, urged the miners to try for it. Eight men, with Dr. Josiah Gregg as leader, started out with a number of pack animals and eight days' supplies. Gregg's party left Trinity River November 5, 1849. After incredible hardships and almost starvation, they reached the coast at the mouth of Little River.

For over six weeks this little band of Pioneers tramped over snowy mountains and swam swollen streams on their expedition of discovery. December 20, 1849, David A. Buck, one of the party, discovered the bay and named it Trinity. April 17, 1850, the name was changed to Humboldt. The Gregg party camped at a site they named Bucksport. As they came to a river, they met two old Indians loaded down with eels, which they shared with the travelers, and so they named the river Eel.

Here the party divided. Gregg and three others started to follow the ocean beach. The other four, headed by L. K. Wood, undertook to return to the settlements by way of Eel River, in the midst of one of the hardest winters known to California. Their provisions gave out in the midst of a heavy snowstorm, and for days they were without food. Three of the party went hunting and found a band of eight grizzly bears, and necessity compelled them to attack the bears. When some of the bears were wounded, they turned on the men. Getting hold of Wood, they mangled his body in a fearful manner; broke one of his legs and tore one of his arms, and thus rendered him a cripple for life. Finally the bears left him, and his comrades got him into camp. Now, what was to be done with the wounded man? If they stayed in camp, they would starve, and his wounds were so swollen he could not be removed. Wood requested his companions to shoot him and not leave him to die of the pangs of hunger in that wilderness. They finally concluded to make a litter and carry him as far as possible. After untold miseries, the party arrived at Mrs. Mark West's Ranch, thirty miles from Sonoma, February 17, 1850. When Wood was sufficiently recovered, the party went on to San Francisco.

The four who started to follow the beach had experiences no less trying at times. They finally struck east for the Sacramento Valley. They were short of food, and suffered unutterably. Dr. Gregg grew weaker day by day, until he fell from his horse and died from starvation, speaking no word. The other three managed to reach Sacramento a few days after the Wood party arrived at Sonoma.

L. K. Wood organized a party of thirty men in San Francisco to return to Humboldt and establish a settlement. They were twenty days making the trip, arriving there April 19, 1850, five days after the arrival of the "Laura Virginia," the first vessel to enter Humboldt Bay after American occupation. For three days they were busy posting notices and laying foundations for homes. They named the new settlement Uniontown, which was later changed to Arcata. The town was built around a plaza, probably copied from Sonoma as an incident of the Wood sojourn there.

LAKE TAHOE

(KATHRINA BANKS.)

A quiet sea upon Sierran crest,
"Lake of the Skies," that, looking from below
Repeats the rapture of the sunrise glow,
The glory of day's passing in the west,
The wonder of the stars upon her breast.
Above this sky-born sea the gray gulls go
In fearless flight or, buoyed on breasts of snow
Afloat upon the calm blue surface rest.

Spirit of beauty, here thou dost abide,
Free from all trace of human littleness;
So might these lives of ours, like waters wide,
Tranquil and clear, have power to express,
As Tahoe, with her symphony of skies,
The great divinity that in us lies.

CALIFORNIA DESERT AREA TO BE PRESERVED AS NATIONAL MONUMENT

Some million acres of desert lands in Riverside and San Bernardino Counties will, it is reported, be constituted a national monument by decree of President Franklin D. Roosevelt. The area is in the vicinity of Twenty-nine Palms and the Salton Sea, and ranges in altitude from 200 feet below sea level at Salton Sea to the 6,000-foot peaks of the San Bernardino Mountains.

The proposed national monument contains sculptured Indian caves, fast-vanishing horned sheep and bizarre reptiles. According to plan the area will in time be stocked with antelope and other game.

More gold remains hidden in the earth of California today than has been mined in the state since gold mining began in 1849, according to the state mineralogist.

ORDER NATIVE SONS INSISTS

MEMBERS EXEMPLIFY PATRIOTISM, LOYALTY AND GOOD CITIZENSHIP TO HIGHEST DEGREE

VALLEJO, ONE OF CALIFORNIA'S HISTORIC cities, will be host to Native Sons of the Golden West who will assemble there for the Fifty-eighth Session of the Grand Parlor of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, May 20 to 23, 1935. This city, situated on San Francisco Bay in Solano County, thirty miles from the City of San Francisco, has a most unique historical background.

In 1850, the State Legislature, meeting in San Jose, had before it the fixing of a location for the state capital. Various towns and individuals submitted proposals. Among the most advantageous seemed to be that of General M. G. Vallejo, who offered to lay out a town on Carquinez Strait, on or near which he would give the state one hundred and sixty-five acres of ground and $370,000 toward the cost of buildings. The Legislature passed a bill directing Governor John McDougal to submit the various offers to the people at the general election, and the offer of General Vallejo was accepted by a large majority. The vote of the people was approved by the Legislature at its next session. General Vallejo proceeded to lay out the town and construct temporary buildings for the state's use. In June 1851, Governor McDougal removed the state offices to the new town, but in September returned them to San Jose because of the slow progress of Vallejo's building operations. The members of the Third Legislature felt it incumbent upon them to assemble at the place which had been officially designated as the capital, but they found their halls unfinished and unfurnished and, therefore, decided to accept the offer of Sacramento to meet there. The Fourth Legislature made another attempt to sit at Vallejo, but the buildings were still unfinished, and General Vallejo himself now admitted inability to carry out his contract. This prevented Vallejo, the meeting-place of the Fifty-eighth Grand Parlor, from becoming the capital of the State of California.

The Order of Native Sons of the Golden West is distinctly a California organization, and one of the most unique in existence. Its membership is restricted to those born on the soil of California. While devoted to the advancement of California's best interests and the fulfillment of her highest ideals, the Order is in no way narrow or selfish. We hold that pride in the land of our birth, love and veneration for our Pioneer Fathers and Mothers, and service to our nation and state, constitute a part of good American citizenship. From its inception, this Order has insisted that its members exemplify patriotism, loyalty and good citizenship to the highest degree. As an exemplification of its patriotic principles the Order, through its Subordinate Parlors, has presented hundreds of sets of flags, (United States of America and California State Bear), to schools and courtrooms throughout the state, so that those symbols of our nation and state will ever be before those who enter these public buildings. In addition to the presentation of flags, we dedicate or lay the cornerstones of schools and other public buildings, at which time those assembled are inspired by patriotic addresses. We also promote essay contests on historical and patriotic subjects in the schools, to manifest our interest in the educational systems of our country, as well as to further the cause of patriotism.

Chas. A. Koenig
(GRAND PRESIDENT N.S.G.W.)

HISTORY.

One of the objects of our Order is to perpetuate in the minds of all native Californians the memories and traditions of our Pioneer Fathers and Mothers. To carry out the ideas of the founders of our Order, we have established, at the University of California, Traveling Fellows in California and Pacific Coast History, for the purpose of gathering and promulgating the complete story of the colonization and the romance of history to the office of the Grand Secretary and he, in turn, will prepare copies and send to all Subordinate Parlors. This would give our members a knowledge of the various parts of the history of our state, as well as assist the children of our members and others in the study of history. I feel that an intimate knowledge of the history of the past is essential to a full and complete appreciation of our civilization. Patriotism is based on tradition. A people without a historic background can have only a lukewarm and shallow interest toward their country and their government. From the material standpoint, we benefit greatly by our knowledge of history because, from the lessons of the past, we learn how to guide our course in the future.

CHAS. A. KOENIG OF SAN FRANCISCO,
GRAND PRESIDENT OF THE ORDER OF NATIVE SONS OF THE GOLDEN WEST

LANDMARKS.

In close relation to our history work, is that of marking historic spots, as well as the restoration of some of the outstanding buildings that were erected in our state during the early days. Monuments of an outstanding nature erected under the direction of our Order include those at Coloma, El Dorado County, commemorating the discovery of gold, at Monterey, to Commodore John Drake Sloat; at Sonoma, the Bear Flag; at Donner Lake, Nevada County, in memory of the California Pioneers, at San Francisco, commemorating the admission of California into the Union, and many others, not so large but just as important as those named.

Tablets have been placed upon buildings or stones at many points where something of great importance in our state's history took place, so that the traveler who passes will learn the history of the event that transpired at the site marked.

We have assisted in restoring several of the historic buildings in our state. Most notable among them are many of the old Franciscan Missions, around which much of the early history of California is entwined; Sutter's Fort at Sacramento, where all Pioneers entering our state in the days before and during the gold rush received succor, the old Custom House at Monterey, where the Flag of the United States of America was first raised; Colton Hall, also at Monterey, where California's First Constitutional Convention was held; the old Russian Chapel at Fort Ross, where the Russians located in the year 1811; Saint Ann's Church at Columbia, Tuolumne County, one of the first churches in California; the old Bale Mill at Napa, and many other places of importance too numerous to mention. This work is going on year by year, little known to the general public, but bearing continual evidence of the love and devotion of the members of our Order for and to their native state.

HOMELESS CHILDREN.

The Native Sons of the Golden West and the Native Daughters of the Golden West began the scientific bringing together of the homeless child and the childless home, realizing that children properly placed in carefully selected homes where they could be loved by someone meant success for the future citizenry of California.

This work was started in 1909 by Fairfax Wheelan, who inspired the members to action and gathered them in a great standing army ready to protect all children at all times, regardless of nationality, nativity, creed or color. And, for the first time in the history of fraternal of our native state, and we have expended in the past quarter-century over $70,000 to make this possible.

While we have received public praise and approval not only within the borders of our own state but throughout the United States and other parts of the world, as well as from educators and historians, for this generous contribution to the work of historical research, it is my opinion that there is not a sufficiently close tie between our Order and the History Department of the University of California in this work. The original idea was to educate the children and others in California history, but it is apparent that there are many native Californians who have little knowledge of the history of their native state because our schools do not devote as much time to the subject as, I believe, they should.

To overcome this deficiency, I think the History Department of the University of California should each year send copies of the outstanding theses prepared and submitted by the students

VALLEJO, THE "CITY OF CASH"

MEETINGPLACE OF 58TH N.S.G.W. GRAND PARLOR

IT WAS NOT THE INTENTION OR GENERAL Mariano Guadalupe Vallejo, Spanish soldier-gentleman and prominent early California figure, to name the city which bears his name after himself. He had the name "Eureka" picked out, because the word seemed to sum up all that is best in nature and in human ambition—a suitable name for territory which he had fought for and safeguarded for years.

But the matter was taken out of his hands. The episode took place at a meeting of California leaders called together to draft a constitution for the State of California, in 1849. It was among their duties to lay down the boundaries of the counties, name them, and select names for various city sites, also.

"For that area roughly bounded by the Napa River, Napa County, Putah Creek, the Sacramento River and Carquinez Straits, I propose the name 'Solano,' in memory of a great Indian king who lived and died my friend—Sem-Yeto of the mighty hand, later baptised Francisco Solano," General Vallejo stated.

It seemed a proper suggestion. Also, the word had additional significance. It had been carried over to the New World from old Spain in two forms: one, in the name of a beloved priest whose work among Indians had received high recommendation and whose name was chosen by the Indian Sem-Yeto upon being baptised. And back in Spain, "Solano" meant the warm east wind which blew over the land. So General Vallejo's suggestion became a fact.

Then came the matter of choosing a permanent name for the settlement at the western tip of the county, situated at the foot of lush hills, where the Napa River joins Carquinez Straits. General Vallejo suggested "Eureka," giving for his reasons the picturesque beauty of the spot, the boundless trade future of its locale and the ideal climatic conditions.

He was hastily overridden. Legislative confreres, who knew of his masterful handling of the Indian situation, of his legislative work in behalf of this area, and of his unbounding ambitions for the city of the future, refused to grant his request. "Let us name this city 'Vallejo' for the General, himself!" they insisted.

And so Vallejo got its name, historically significant, warmly personal, and one of the hardest in the world to spell, according to postoffice evidence. It is said that persons living in the east of the United States are puzzled over the pronunciation and the spelling of California names which have been derived from the Spanish, the Mexican and the Indian. The truth of the matter is, they are not only puzzled; they are markedly original about expressing their confusion.

Within a period of six months, 105 different spellings of the name have been known to be received. There was Vallaho, Valao, Valley Joe, Vallejalahoe, Billejo, Salliegro, Levejo, Ralejo, Wallajo and Yallejo, to mention only a few. But the important thing was, that the messages got to Vallejo. Got to a city of constant interest and of vivid personality.

Today, they call Vallejo the "City of Cash," and point to it as the brightest marketing center on the coast of California because it has at no time experienced the hard times which confronted other cities in the country in the period 1929-1934. It is true that the bustle on the streets where the Suisune Indians hunted wild bear is impelled chiefly by the steady stream of silver dollars poured into it by adjacent Mare Island Navy Yard payrolls. But there are other reasons for the briskness.

Things are always happening in Vallejo—things which defy forecasting and defy precedent. There have been at least four "booms," for instance, which the gods have thrown out upon the city as largesse, with a carelessness that gods occasionally display. They were: the naming of Vallejo as capital of the State of California; the establishment of the Mare Island Navy Yard; the building of the transcontinental railway, and the World War.

AIRPLANE VIEW PORTION OF CITY OF VALLEJO, SOLANO COUNTY.

Out of the welter of claims and demands to be recognized as the capital of the new State of California which confronted early solons, General Vallejo drew a trump card for Vallejo. He asked for, and got, the state government located in the city early in the year 1851. It didn't come too easy but, on the other hand, it wasn't too expensive, considering the civic impetus to be derived.

His pleas on behalf of Vallejo have been preserved for Californians, but one sentence alone which he uttered may be said to have turned legislative sympathy his way, and is worth remembering. "Vallejo," he said, "is the true center of the state, the true center of commerce, the true center of population and the true center of travel." That impressed the Legislature.

For the comfort and future of the new capital, General Vallejo proposed to give outright to the state twenty acres of land for capitol grounds, one hundred thirty-six acres for state buildings and $370,000 in gold. The impressed solons were won over.

It was the city's first unforseen boom, and the pace overnight was increased. A structure was erected on York street, on top of the bluff which overlooks Mare Island Channel; grounds were laid out and, most important of all, a great bar was installed in the basement of the Capitol building, counted upon to serve all of the Legislature at once, if necessary. The lawmakers started making laws and business hummed.

Down in the basement, business hummed, also. Legislators found it as easy to bend the elbow with a glass, as to bend it in oratorical gestures. In a short time, the current legal gathering had been given a new appellation—"The Legislature of a Thousand Drinks." And in a short time, too, the entire Legislature moved bag and baggage to Sacramento.

Hot cries of intrigue were bandied about as the city realized, too late, that it had lost the seat of state affairs. Other cities were vieing with one another for the honor of entertaining the lawmakers, and the legislators themselves handed out a neat announcement that they "were not satisfied with accommodations."

The zero hour came January 12, 1852 when both houses at Vallejo adjourned to meet in Sacramento four days later. A steamer, packed to the brim with legislators, left the city for "up the river" and, landing at the present Capital, was met with music, oratory, thunder of cannon and a grand ball. For two months the Capital remained at Sacramento, and then the whole Legislature came back to Vallejo again, all because of a flood which all but inundated the valley city.

Vallejo was jubilant, although its jubilance was short lived. Early in 1853 still "not satisfied with accommodations," but principally upset because of the confession of General Vallejo that he would be unable to carry out his generous offers, the Legislature again left, this time for good. Benicia had just erected a fine, imposing City Hall and offered to turn the structure over to state uses. The offer was accepted, and Benicia got the Capital.

If another striking event had not been in the offing, Vallejo would have been plunged into the doldrums. As it was, great developments across the Mare Island Channel were taking place, and although the citizenry may not have realized it at that time, the permanent foundations of the city's prosperity were being laid, in the establishment of the Mare Island Navy Yard.

Glimpses of the rise of the United States Navy's first-class naval station are contained in an article elsewhere in this issue of The Grizzly Bear, and it is sufficient to state here that 1854 was the pivotal year for the City of Vallejo. That was the year when formal possession of the station was taken by the Federal Government. There was plenty of work, there was constant supply of good wages, and there was, in addition, an incentive for a unified citizenry — the building of good ships and the perfection of craftsmanship.

It may be said conservatively that, to this day, the wellbeing of Mare Island, its prospects and harmony, either directly or indirectly, affect every Vallejo man, woman and child. Mare Island may even be said to have been responsible for producing and moulding a distinct type of citizen — the Mare Island employe.

The Mare Island employe clings to the great traditions of the past. He loves his home, because he owns it. He revels in living in a group which is almost entirely homogeneous; where there are no extremes of wealth and poverty, no extremes of social deportment and no extremes of intellect. This is not meant to imply that Vallejo has not produced great personalities, such as Admiral C. J. Peoples and Captain T. J. J. See, even in our own particular period, but just as there is a paucity of national figures who have been born here, so there is also a paucity of illiteracy and ignorance.

The Mare Island employe is alert, educated, clever and zealous in maintaining the exceedingly high standard which his father, and often his grandfather before him, set for craftsmanship. And he will fight at the drop of the hat for the permanence of Mare Island.

One of the most outstanding displays of concerted strength of an aroused citizenry took place in Vallejo within the last decade when certain organizations and combined groups in the lower bay area made an effort to have Mare Island moved to the so-called "mud-flats" of Alameda. Vallejoans were stunned with the implied danger to an entire city. Out in the foreground, with the entire roster of Navy Yard employes behind them, stepped the leaders who were to speak for the many. They worked and they fought, and finally they succeeded. Mare Island, with its investments valued at millions of dollars, its payroll and its fine work would continue to be across the channel.

A valuable Vallejo document is a daily diary, kept for the year 1869. Occupying six lines of printers' type is a notation for May 8 of that year which states that a thirteen-gun salute was made at Mare Island Navy Yard in honor of laying the last rail on the overland railroad and the driving of the last spike.

Even in a year crowded with astonishing developments such as the initial trip of the steamer "New World" from Vallejo to San Francisco, and the first trip of the Napa Valley Railroad from Napa to Vallejo, the thirteen-gun salute notation is particularly significant. It marked the beginning of the third "boom" in the "City of Cash."

The very earliest records of this region are enthusiastic in their accounts of the excellent natural resources. Once General Vallejo said, "The region around Vallejo is unsurpassed for its abundance of lime and building materials." He referred to the large quantities of silicious sandstone which, with volcanic tufa and clay slate, formed a fireproof material for buildings. Sometime later, L. Cornell Frisbie stated, "There is known to exist in Solano County large bodies of cinnabar, coal, iron, marble and building stone of superior quality. Medicinal springs, thermal, chalybeate, and alteratives are numerous throughout the county, which have become the resort of the invalid and the pleasure-seeker." (Letter written July 1, 1879. History of Solano County. J. P. Munro Fraser, historian. Wood, Alley & Co.)

area of the Vaca Valley and nearby territory. Here farmers could take advantage of the loose, warm soil which had been formed ages before by the mixture of silicious sandstone and drift from the hills, and could produce marketable fruits, often weeks in advance of other communities. In the eastern portion of the county, the Montezuma Hills, with their black adobe soil, were beginning to make history for wheat production.

Then came the transcontinental railroad—a perfect combination for prosperity. And Vallejo was at the core of it all. Eastern markets were to be had for the asking. Eastern products could be secured speedily. Vallejo was really the western terminus for the overland railroad, since after reaching the city all trains had to be ferried across the Carquinez Straits.

During the year 1869, the year of the thirteen-gun salute to the railroad, 400 houses were erected in the city, almost all for dwelling purposes, yet there was not a single house to let. Building of a great project was also started that year—the Vallejo Elevator, forerunner of a present-day flour mill at South Vallejo. The great wheat production of the back country, and the accessibility of cheap transportation both by river and by coast-wise shipping, lured an Eastern firm to first become interested in establishing the elevator. For its day, it was a first-rate mill and elevator, and with the inauguration of railroad facilities it assumed an important business position. It was years afterward that the elevator toppled on its piling and slid into Mare Island Channel. From then on, the more modern equipment and structures of the flour company replaced the original unit.

All of the "booms" and the "boomlets" were overshadowed, however, by the World War. On a certain day in 1917, the city's business was going about as usual, its matrons marketing, and its men at work in Mare Island. The children were in the process of being educated in the splendid schools erected for that purpose. Within a month's time, the entire pace of the city had speeded up beyond recognition, its housing facilities were crowded to the bursting point, and the din in the shops across the channel had mounted to a steady throb.

The Federal Government needed ships, ships and more ships. In Mare Island, shift followed shift with ceaseless pressure exerted. The men worked with the same grimness, and on occasion under as dangerous conditions, as the boys at the front. They broke records which had stood for years, for speed, for quantity and for quality. Workmen would stand a fourteen-hour shift, drag themselves to their homes for rest, and then race back to the yard for overtime. Ten thousand men were working frantically against time to provide the means for transporting men and supplies to Europe.

Mare Island Navy Yard turned out more than twenty ships from 1917 to 1919. They're not through talking about it yet, and nobody blames them. It was a great record. Meanwhile, so far as the City of Vallejo was concerned, the war meant houses, houses and more houses. The only trouble was, there were not men enough to build them, and there was not enough material available to make them. There was only one thing to do—divide up the existing homes to make rooms for others.

A visitor coming to Vallejo as short a time ago as five years could not be blamed for being puzzled over the amazing number of houses which have been raised up to make way for basement apartments. There are hundreds of small two- and three-room cottages in the back yards of Vallejo homes. There are countless dwellings which have two, three, and sometimes four entrances where, originally, there was but one. It is all the result of the period when a city of 7,500 was overnight made into a city of 15,000.

Like the children of "The Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe," the families were crammed in together, somehow, and the miracle was that the shoe didn't burst. The building of the district called, at first, Georgetown, by the United States Housing Corporation, prevented this catastrophe.

Georgetown was a district outside the city's limits, located on hills which run to the channel's edge, and then end in tideland. The Federal Government chose to erect there a number of barrack-like structures for single men, and for officers and their families a series of apartment houses. It happened that four or five architectural designs, strikingly New England in character, were chosen by the government. Squads of workmen were ordered to start building, and the result of their work is the present Bay Terrace, the only residential district in the environs of Vallejo which has an absolutely uniform motif, foreign to the soil though it may be. During the war, however, it served its purpose admirably, and afterward it was sold, bit by bit, to civilians. It still finds favor with many navy families, especially those of younger officers.

During the period 1930 to 1934, the enlarged merchandising district of Vallejo forced the residential areas to retreat to the north and to the east. Literally hundreds of new homes were built. And the expansion has not stopped yet. Block after block of cement, brick and stucco homes of an excellent standard have sprung up to ease Vallejo's old trouble—housing shortage. They are a tribute to the stability of Mare Island and the city itself, a vivid reminder that young people remain in Vallejo after completing high school and college. There are jobs here for them, their families are all here, so why go away?

Apartment houses and modern hotels have made their appearance to care for the great transient population of the city, represented largely by the navy personnel.

And this is the city which, in May of this year, will welcome the Grand Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West. Bunting will fly in the streets which have just been condemned, to give way to $300,000 worth of new ones. Delegates will see fresh-cheeked youngsters who are on shore leave from the great ships tied up at the Mare Island seawall. They will see evidences of a highly fraternalized city, where Masons, Odd Fellows, Red Men, Sciots, to mention only a few organizations, maintain large public buildings and where scores of others meet regularly.

The Veterans Memorial building, facing the neat park which General Frisbie gave the city, will be of interest, since it will house some of the Grand Parlor's activities.

The visitors can drive to the top of the hills of Bay Terrace and view the same breath-taking panorama which won forever the heart of General Mariano Guadalupe Vallejo. The sleeping princess, which is Mount Tamalpais, will wall up indigo blue in the west.

To the north, will be the rolling Coast Range hills, which house the Napa Valley and the Valley of the Suisunes. Immediately to the east, will be the rocky ridge known as Hunters' Hill, where quicksilver once made men wealthy and near which can be seen the remnants of a once renowned health resort.

The south will form a picture of rare beauty, the shores of Contra Costa and distant San Francisco, softened by the brilliant contrasting blue of San Pablo Bay. Travelers who have spent years out of their lives visiting beauty spots of the world have verified the contention of the average Vallejoan, that the panorama of this place far surpasses the renown of famous Capri and the Riviera.

But at the foot of that view will be the crux of the visit—Mare Island Navy Yard. Cranes, smoke stacks, drydocks, seawall, ammunition depot, submarine base, radio towers, battleships, shops and quarters, diminished in size, will form another and unique type of beauty, that of the results of human minds and of human hands working for the wellbeing of a Nation.

The seventy-fifth anniversary of the establishment of the Pony Express was observed April 3 in Sacramento, California, and Saint Joseph, Missouri, the terminals of the historic venture.

Vallejo, Solano County, has voted $300,000 bonds for street improvements.

Mother's Day will be observed throughout the nation May 12.

VALLECITO BUTTERFIELD STAGE COACH DEPOT IN SAN DIEGO COUNTY.

Grand Secretary N.S.G.W., San Francisco—Dear Sir: My last issue of The Grizzly Bear carried a note that the old Butterfield Stage Coach Depot at Vallecito, Calaveras County, was being restored by SERA labor along original lines.

As far as I can find out there is only one Vallecito Butterfield Stage Coach Station, which is in San Diego County, and which now has been practically restored, not "along original lines," but as an exact restoration of the original building.

For this purpose Mrs. Strahlmann and myself as sponsors obtained the services of Archeologist Malcom Rogers of the San Diego Museum and Architect John Siebert of San Diego, and the construction supervision of Mr. E. Campbell. The restoration is now complete except for a portion of the roof. Six acres of land on which the building stands was donated to San Diego County by Mr. Charles F. Holland, and plans are under way for making a unique desert park of this beautiful area. Very truly yours,

LOUIS STRAHLMANN, M.D.

Homeless Children

A WORTHWHILE NON-SECTARIAN ENDEAVOR SPONSORED AND SUPPORTED BY THE ORDERS OF NATIVE SONS AND NATIVE DAUGHTERS OF THE GOLDEN WEST

THIS GROUP OF LOVELY, HAPPY children pictured here represents only a few of the thousands of homeless children who have been provided with home—and all that HOME implies—through the efforts of the two fraternal organizations of Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West.

A large number of the children who were babies twenty-four years ago have grown to manhood and womanhood, and the members of the Central Committee have felt a genuine gratification that so high a percentage of their placements is successful.

The children have grown to be a credit to their foster-parents and to their communities, due, no doubt, to the fine spirit of comradeship which has been maintained in the home and the rare understanding and devotion to their chosen child which the foster-parents have not permitted anything else to crowd out of their lives.

Many members of the Orders of Native Sons and Native Daughters have known the adopted

Twins' "Good morning" greeting.

"All for me?" What does it feel like? Looks like a cushion. It's a pretty candle. Yum, it's good to eat. Why do parents interfere?

"Daddie!" Who wouldn't be a farmer? "Now what you doin'?" Spring is here! Better'n a doll to love.

"Shoot! if you must." "Another gadget." "Am I looking pleasant?" "Hello! Is this Santa?" "Twins 'nough for me."

ORDER N.S. INSISTS

organizations, these Orders imbedded in their constitutions and set forth in their by-laws a plan for carrying relief outside of their ranks for the general good of society.

The Native Sons and the Native Daughters of the Golden West, with their extensive memberships covering a large area of the state, are in position to assume full responsibility for the investigation and selection of homes, and the placing and supervision of children physically fit and legally free for adoption. The overwhelming response of the Native Sons and Native Daughters to the appeal of the homeless child sustained the soundness of Mr. Wheelan's judgment.

The work is not confined to children in any way allied with the Native Sons or Native Daughters, or to applicants who are members of the Orders. The governing body consists of ten members, one representing the Catholic children's organizations and institutions, one representing Protestant children's organizations and institutions, one representing Jewish children's organizations and institutions, one representing the Citizens Agency (Associated Charities), three representing the Native Sons and three representing the Native Daughters of the Golden West.

The members expend from twenty-five to twenty-eight thousand dollars annually in this work. The funds are derived from public entertainments, with the attendant value of publicity. Since the work began, $418,317 has been disbursed by the governing committee, and in excess of 4,600 children have been placed in good, moral homes, under the supervision and responsibility of the welfare workers of the two Orders, to fill vacant places in those homes overlooked by the stork.

ADMISSION DAY.

The celebration of the eighty-fourth anniversary of the admission of California into the Union was held last year at Sacramento in connection with the State Fair, and I am proud to report it was one of the most colorful, orderly and attractive celebrations held under our auspices, and all credit is due the splendid committees in Sacramento and elsewhere in our state for making this possible.

The proper observance of the anniversary of the birthday of California has, down through the years, been one of the finest mediums of publicity that our Order has had, and by continuing these celebrations in the same manner as prevailed at Sacramento last year, we are bound to profit. There are, however, places in our state that do not observe this day, even though it is a legal state holiday. It is my sincere wish that, in the not-too-far-distant future, every city and town in California will observe the anniversary of Admission Day, September 9.

IMMIGRATION.

Another activity we have been engaged in for over a quarter-century is entitled "Keep California for the White Race!" This work is just as important today as it was twenty-five years ago, as there are organizations working in this and other states on the Pacific Coast to create sentiment for Japan, in order that she may have a quota granted by Congress that will permit her nationals to enter this country the same as do those of the Caucasian race. The vigilance of the members of our Order, as well as those of the American Legion and the American Federation of Labor, has so far defeated every move made in that direction and, with the same vigilance in the future, I feel sure we will thwart any scheme, conceived in the interest of these Orientals, whereby they may have the privilege of sending a quota to this country.

Pioneer stage drivers of California will swap yarns at a gathering June 1 and 2 at Carpinteria, Santa Barbara County.

The agricultural commissioners of California will hold their annual spring convention May 16-18 at Sonora, Tuolumne County.

The California Federation Women's Clubs will have its thirty-fourth annual convention at Del Monte, Monterey County, May 15-17.

San Francisco will have its annual Building Exposition in the Civic Auditorium May 4-12.

"ISLA DE LA YEGUA"---MARE ISLAND

SITE OF UNITED STATES' ACE WEST COAST NAVAL STATION

THE "SALE" OF THE ISLAND OF MANhattan for the legendary twenty-four dollars' worth of trinkets has its counterpart in Mare Island, site of the United States Government's $57,000,000 ace naval station of the west coast, situated across a narrow channel from the City of Vallejo. A Mr. V. Castro is the first known owner of this valuable property, and he got it for nothing!

In the days when the Spaniards ruled California, Castro was fortunate enough to know Governor Alvarado, a man given to handing out great grants of land to favorites. To Castro, he granted, among other things, the two-mile long and one-half mile wide "island" for grazing purposes, and called it a day. It was not a particularly handsome gift in appearance, for although it could produce a fair stand of grain there was the problem of transportation.

The Indians had known of the island years before, and three large shell-covered mounds attested to the fact that many of them had made it their final resting place. That was undoubtedly around 1839, when the Suisune tribes, thinned out by the ferocity of the Spanish troops of Lieutenant Jose Sanch z, contracted smallpox and died in surprising numbers. Their heaped-up bodies, together with their implements of war, were covered over with debris and mussel shells. You could stand on the top of a mound on the flat and marshy end of the island and view the shore of what was to become the City of Vallejo, just a quarter of a mile away.

Castro didn't bother about his property very much, and some years later was delighted to sell it to two men, John B. Frisbie and Bezer Simmons, for $7,000. It was an interesting transaction all the way around, for the two new purchasers held on to the island for a time and then disposed of it to three purchasers for the sum of $17,500. The island was beginning to take on significance.

In 1852, the last purchase of Mare Island took place when three civilians, W. H. Aspinwall, G. W. P. Bissell and Mrs. Mary S. MacArthur, divided up $83,000, the price paid by the United States Government for the site of a proper navy yard to repair and construct ships on the west coast. The average cost per acre was slightly over $92. Today, if anyone could buy an acre of the naval station, he would have to put up at least $63,000. Castro might have done better, after all.

Although the City of Vallejo received its name directly from General Mariano Guadalupe Vallejo, Mare Island received hers from him, also, although indirectly. The general, among other enterprises, was interested in the breeding and sale of horses. One day, a load of horses was being shipped across Carquinez Straits from Martinez to Benicia on a primitive ferryboat constructed of whale-oil barrels and propelled by sails. In midstream, a wind squall struck the craft and much of the livestock were plunged into the water. Some of the animals were retrieved, some were drowned; but one animal, a white mare well-liked by General Vallejo, ran up a record of sorts by swimming the length of the straits and landing on the island at its mouth. No one saw the feat, and the mare was believed drowned. Months later, a chance visitor to the island reported her well-being to General Vallejo and the island was promptly christened, "Isla de la Yegua," the Mare's Island, or Mare Island.

Today, viewing the concentration of shops, the gigantic mechanical equipment and the diversified activities of the station, it is difficult to realize that it was at first believed valuable only for the production of feed for livestock. Yet that is true, and even the government used the soil for the production of grain in early days. The famous daily "log" of Admiral David G. Farragut, first commandant, records the fact that enough grain was raised on the island to supply all of the horses quartered in the great government stable there.

Although Mare Island Navy Yard is now reckoned among the leading ship-building plants in the country, it was not the original intention of the government to construct ships here, but to repair craft already in commission. Commodore John D. Sloat is generally accredited with having realized that it was necessary to have a well-equipped station where ships could be repaired without having to be sent east around Cape Horn. Largely through his insistence, during the Pierce administration, Congress passed an act authorizing the then Secretary of Navy John P. Kennedy to "select a site for a Naval Yard and Naval Depot in the Bay of San Francisco . . . . to establish on that site a foundry, machine shop, blacksmith's shop, boiler shop, engine house, pattern house, carpenters' shop and store houses." That was in August of 1852, and the sum of $100,000 was appropriated for the project.

The survey board, which included Commodore Sloat, examined the San Francisco Bay area thoroughly and, with one accord, chose Mare Island. Twenty-six miles from San Francisco, on deep water, it answered every requirement. It was sufficiently in the interior to be protected from possible attack by sea. It had a circumference of ten miles, was partly flat and partly hilly in terrain, and on the southwest portion it presented a sheer, inaccessible bluff to the bay Moreover, it was separated from the mainland by a deep-water channel. The land was purchased from the owners, required buildings were erected, and arrangements made to secure a floating drydock from the east coast. But it was two years before the government actually took over the station and formally accepted it as Mare Island Navy Yard.

Visitors at Mare Island today, approaching the station by motor car over the new $1,000,000 causeway, will see to the north marshes and tidelands which make the land seem more of an isthmus than an island. At one time according to early records these land deposits did not exist; or, if they did, certainly not in such close proximity to the naval station. Much of the subsequent extensions of Mare Island are the effects of hydraulic mining in the state and although the formation of the northern reaches of the island were not formed so dramatically as the islands in the Sacramento-San Joaquin delta region, their appearance today is attributable largely to the same cause.

For this reason, some dredging of Mare Island Channel has been necessary, in order to insure maintenance of the original deep-water stream. It took a storm, and what at the time was believed to be a disaster, to convince early captains that their ships could be moored close to the shore.

Up to a certain night in 1852 when a severe wind squall sprang up, vessels had moored in midstream, releasing their cargoes on rafts to the mainland. On this particular night, the anchors of the ships present were dragged along the bottom, and those in command believed their craft lost. They were agreeably surprised upon learning that channel depth held on close in. Today, at the sturdy seawall on Mare Island, the largest battleships of the navy can tie up with ease. Across the channel, ocean, coastal and river craft dock with no difficulty.

Although thousands of dollars may be invested in cranes in shops and equipment, it is drydock facilities which form the crux of a navy yard. Mare Island has had three dry docks, two of which are still in use. The first was a cumbersome and awkward affair It "floated," and was a far cry from either of the two present docks, and almost unrecognizable when compared with the ambitious drydock recently authorized by Congress.

Dakin, Moody, Gilbert & Secor constructed the floating drydock, building it in twelve sections in New York. They put it together, and then took it apart. It was shipped in four sections and carried around Cape Horn in four different vessels, arriving at Mare Island in 1853. In order to get ships on the dock it had to be partially sunk, and the ship to be repaired floated upon it. Then, with steam engines, the water was pumped out, and the dock automatically raised itself. Still in the water of the channel the dock was then floated into the basin at the edge of the water, being hauled by hydraulic power. The basin had to be emptied of water then, leaving the dock upon the floor of the basin. It was 325 feet in length, and could accommodate a vessel of 3,000 tons.

The contractors who constructed the dock en joyed technical ownership until the government accepted it and, consequently, it was a merchant marine vessel, the steamer "Pacific," which first employed the dock for repair purposes. The first government vessel to use its facilities was the U. S. Navy Frigate "Independence." The "Independence," incidentally, later became a permanent part of Mare Island's history when, upon being placed out of commission, she was made a receiving ship and spent several years between San Francisco and Mare Island, acting in that capacity. It is said of her that she was "sure in stays, stiff under canvass, inclined to gripe and hard on her cables."

There are two drydocks at Mare Island today, and within a year another will be added. Drydock No. 1 was completed in 1891 at a cost of $2,772,332, and represents the work of yard labor. The floor is 450 feet in length, and the superstructure is of concrete. Drydock No. 2 was completed in 1910 at a cost of $1,679,730, and has a length of 730 feet, ample for caring for a 10,000-ton cruiser or larger craft. The recent action of Congress in authorizing $3,500,000 for construction of an even larger drydock will make Mare Island ideally equipped for naval repairs. It will require three years for completion, and will employ several hundred workmen. Civilian contractors will do the job.

On the building ways at Mare Island, some of the finest examples of naval construction have been produced. The battleship "California," the 10,000-ton cruiser "Chicago," the giant submarine, "Nautilus," and the "San Francisco," 10,000-ton heavy cruiser, have all been launched from the ways into Mare Island Channel. There was also the collier "Jupiter," later converted into the plane carrier "Langley." Approximately eighty vessels, of all types and construction, have been built here.

Construction of the destroyer "Ward," during the World War, in the unheard-of period of seventeen days, is an example of the workmanship and the efficiency which this naval station can be called upon to produce in an emergency. Ordinarily, a destroyer requires at least a year for construction. Two destroyers, the U.S.S. "Preston" and the U.S.S. "Smith," now on the building ways, will take at least a year for completion. Yet, under pressure, the smooth-working facilities of Mare Island were meshed into high gear and there resulted the destroyer

"Ward," a seventeen-day product, executed for a harried and hurried navy, and still in commission.

With the exception of the very earliest days, it has never been difficult to secure competent and skilled employes at the yard. With the California gold rush still in progress, large inducements had to be offered workers to remain at Mare Island as employes. Passengers on vessels docking at Vallejo often remained in the city to work across the channel, while many laborer jobs were filled by sailors aboard visiting ships. Wages were high, even for those days. A first-class mechanic could expect from $5 to $6 per day, while caulkers and ships' carpenters drew not only $9 per day, but a glass of grog, to boot. Even so, it was difficult to maintain a steady working personnel.

Admiral Farragut, in the middle '50s, still a commander, records in his log the necessity of addressing men on the subject of desertion, a common practice. He referred to the regular navy personnel. But he noted almost as much trouble, occasionally, in the civilian staff. With the rapid rise of the station as an important adjunct to the U. S. Navy, however, and with the increasingly interesting developments in the City of Vallejo itself, the problem vanished. Men sought positions in the yard eagerly. One historical event also had a direct bearing upon this situation. The Spanish-American War in 1898 definitely established Mare Island's usefulness and value.

September 4, 1869, there were 1,500 men employed in Mare Island, with a payroll of $175,000. The 3,000-mark in number of employes was reached long before the World War. The latter event shot up the number of workers to the unprecedented 10,000-mark, from which it had to decrease upon the arrival of more normal times. Today, there are approximately 4,000 persons employed, and the payroll hovers around $8,000,000 annually.

Absorbing in interest is the ammunition depot, since early days an important part of the yard. One ambitious historian, throwing conservatism to the wild winds, records that the structures of the early ordnance department were "in keeping with the other remarkably elegant buildings with which the Navy Yard abounds." Whether or not the depot has or had "remarkably elegant buildings," it was prepared, from the very first, to safeguard as far as possible the surrounding territory from dangers of explosion. The magazines on its twenty-three acres were bomb-proof, no painting was done on the grounds, and all depot employes were required to wear special uniforms, smock-like frocks, and canvas shoes having chamois soles. It was feared that buttons and nails would cause sparks. These, in modern times, have been discarded.

Only one major explosion has taken place in the history of its existence, and that explosion, which took the lives of six persons, is shrouded in mystery. It was during the great war, early on a July morning of 1917. Shortly before 8 a.m. a terrific blast was heard, as 280,000 pounds of smokeless powder blew up, producing a great hole forty feet deep and forty feet square. Every house in Mare Island received some reaction, either in the form of broken window panes, crumpled chimneys or broken bricabrac. The force was such as to break the panes in the windows of nearly every structure on Georgia street, across Mare Island Channel in Vallejo.

What caused the explosion? Who was responsible? Nobody knows to this day. A reward of $5,000, put up immediately and offered to the person who could present information leading to the arrest of the responsible parties, was never claimed. Government representatives scoured the whole area, interviewed hundreds of persons, and found nothing of consequence. It was presumed, however, that the entire holocaust was the work of an enemy spy, who had placed a time-bomb in the magazine. The one reconciling thought was that, due to the early hour, the depot was not crowded with workmen to bring up the number of casualties. The ammunition depot is at the extreme southerly tip of the island and segregated from the great Naval Hospital, which lies between it and the industrial department. The officers' quarters and the marine barracks also are situated away from its possible menace, being on the western side of the island.

The Great War, which gave a tremendous impetus to undersea craft, brought about another important addition to Mare Island. Submarines had to be launched and repaired, and their officers and men properly quartered. The submarine base, situated at the north end of the island, and to the right of the new causeway, answered the majority of these problems. Radio, also a development since the war, occupies an important position in the yard. The giant towers, topped by airplane beacons, connect Mare Island with the naval stations and bases of the nation and with its fleet. Time signals for radio stations are all received from this center.

Only a paltry fifty years lie between the construction of the radio towers and the initial electrification of the yard. How the latter came about, months in advance of formal orders for complete electrification, is an amusing incident. A certain Captain Johnson, executive officer at Mare Island in the 1880s, had bought an electric clock in the East. Out in the West, it was a bewildering novelty. There was already some wiring for electric illumination at the yard, and the captain plugged in the clock. A short time afterward it stopped, and he had to call in assistance. Not a person in the steam engineering department could help, but a youth by the name of George Hanscom, then learning the machinist's trade in the construction department, was sent for.

Young Hanscom, after a brief examination, readily saw where the trouble lay, but shrewdly took his time about completing repairs. At length, he returned the clock, plugged it in, and it ran. His reputation as an electrical wizard was made. Admiral B. H. McCalla, commandant, hearing of the splendid work, called for him, complimented him, and gave him a real man's job to do. All he wanted was a telephone to be run from the yard gate to his office. That was fairly simple. The joker was, there were no funds available for any expenditures for material or equipment.

"There is not even a dime available for expenses," said the admiral. "I am afraid I must ask you to pick up old material here on the yard." Young Hanscom spent more time "picking up" old material and "finding" other odds and ends than in the actual construction of the telephone job. But he did it. Admiral McCalla got his telephone, and Mare Island got the honor of having one of the first systems, primitive though it was, on the west coast.

In justice to Mare Island, it should be stated that a brief article such as this cannot adequately describe its capacity, its points of interest, its value to the Nation. Possibly because of this, and because the United States Government is interested in showing to taxpayers why great sums for equipment, for labor and for construction must be spent, Mare Island, together with the country's other naval units, holds open house once every year. If it is not possible to bring Uncle Sam's navy yards to the public, then it is necessary to make it easy for the public to come to the navy yards.

Open house is held in October of each year, and at Mare Island, this day is annually an important event. Thousands of visitors throng the industrial area; see the largest machine shop in the United States; go through the coffee plant where green-coffee beans come in and coffee for the entire fleet in western waters comes out; visit the display building where illustrations of the work of the sail-loft, the pattern shop, of the lathes and the coppersmiths are on display.

On Navy Day, too, exhibitions of under-water welding are made, and often a ship is dedicated. There are whale-boat races on the channel, and exhibition drills. Visitors are invited to see the historic St. Peters Chapel and hear an organ recital, or stroll under the beautiful trees which have existed since their planting at the orders of the first commandant, Admiral David Farragut.

Mare Island seems like the personal property of its workers, their fathers and their children. But that is only an illusion, brought about because something more than punching of time-clocks goes into their work. Mare Island, to the Vallejoan, is entirely interwoven with the great past of the city—interwoven in such a manner that distinction seems incredible.

The facts of the matter, of course, are quite to the contrary. Mare Island is the property of every American citizen, and its welfare, like the welfare of every other naval station and naval base, is of vital importance. It is an absorbing and enormous enterprise, and it is a fascinating experience to procure a glimpse of it in operation.

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER

THERE IS A RUMOR TO THE EFFECT that later spring days will find us wearing suits which are not so mannish as those that went before. Very recent collections reflect the idea, for want of a better word, of the return of "dressmaker" handling, which has every line softened by some device or other. Sleeves, though closely fitted down the arm, are frequently cut in one with the shoulder in the yoke and not in a biswing pleat. Fabrics, too, are of such weave and colors as to cause a man to laugh if a tailor tried them on. There is a distinct departure from the earlier heather mixtures of trouser stripings of gabardine.

A violet tweed suit is most becoming, and a milky turquoise tweed suit striped with cocoa brown and with a jacket with odd flap trimmings is distinctly mandarin-like. The buttons are natural wood and the skirt is wrap-around. Another combination has a navy and white checked tweed cape and jacket. The skirt and pullover are navy.

A grey crepe suit, which is of waffle weave, has a rather simple belted jacket and is without collar or revers. The tailored blouse is of navy blue chiffon fastened down the middle of the front with rhinestone buttons. And still another charming suit is of grey crepe, and has long sleeves gathered at the shoulders and held in at the wrists with a narrow band. This is belted and quite simple. The high neck has a white pique collar that ends in a jabot of pique petals.

Dusty pink crepe is used for a clever outfit that would certainly be in the proper mood as an addition to any wardrobe. It consists of a dress that has elbow-length puff sleeves and a ruffled jabot and collar of lace and net. Over this goes a little elbow-length cape of the crepe, with matching hat and shoes.

A dark cape or swagger coat is the proper thing to wear with summer prints and pastel shades. This is one of the most effective ways to spring chic. An ideal swagger coat of forstmann woolen has a silk lining and scarf of navy, black, brown or beige. The smart lines for the fashionable silhouette are the shirtmaker frock of soft tie silk and the coat of unlined wool. Choose a dress in navy with light blue dots and a navy coat, or a red dress with white dots and a navy coat, or a brown dress with gold dots and a beige coat trimmed with many buttons.

A new spirit invades children's clothes—coat and hat sets, frocks to harmonize, all the accessories correctly assembled for each occasion and as smartly assembled as any grownup's. Big, loose wrap-around coats have swanky pleats and a tie belt; they are so grand and new. Girls' redingotes have plain coats and gay print dresses. Tempting unmentionables please the luxury-loving younger generations. Tailored satin gowns with drawstring necklines come in ice blue or dusty pink. Pure dye crepe or satin slips are tailored or lace-trimmed and have matching panties. Pure dye brocaded print satin sleeping pajamas are shown for mother, and the new embroidered peasant krash with gay colors is used for daytime and sports wear.

Cool and resistant to crushing is the fabric lace in which lace simulates fabric most charmingly. This is available in delightful patterns for both daytime and evening dresses. Organza, mousseline-de-soie and starched chiffon float gracefully through summer evenings in both patterns and plain colors. Net in white, black and pastels makes very smart dinner and evening gowns in either bouffant or tailored shirtwaist styles. Bits of imported organdie edged with lace and embroidery give blossom-like freshness to either dark frocks or summery pastels. Bretonne and alencon come in bands and edgings for lovely lingerie and also in points for applique.

The current interpretation of grandmother's nightgown is a beguiling affair of white chiffon with prim collar, buttoned front and sleeves of fine alencon lace. The collar and sleeves are trimmed with narrow pleated frills of chiffon and nothing could be "wickeder." Then, there is the evening nightgown, fashioned on the lines of the newest formal costumes, with fitted waistline, low decolletage and flowing skirt. This may, of course, be worn to bed, but it is intended to be worn over a taffeta slip as a hostess gown. There is a distinct return to lace and frills in the season's lingerie. Nightgowns, stepins and shorts made entirely of cotton lace are all over the place. Others have small inserts of chiffon or crepe. Regency nightgowns also are with us, with high-waisted cut and flowing lines. The bodice of this type of gown is usually entirely of lace with small, frilled capelet sleeves. Nightgowns which may do double duty as evening gowns are shown in rich, lustrous fabrics such as satin and cire lace in pastel tints. They are extremely low cut.

Ordinary white string, in black or red or any color for that matter, is now crocheted into good-looking summer shoes and then lacquered to hold the shape. The effect is most striking and very complimentary to knitted dresses and such. Ruches and boas and capes are made of black net and trimmed with cellophane designs which look a lot like those ropes with which christmas trees are garlanded. There are also very swell transparent ruffs which for all the world look like those jetted and black-bugled creations of the long ago.

The basket-weave cellophane hats are in again and, as any one knows who had one in a former season, they are grand dirty-weather hats and very light on the head for sunny, warm days. A large spreading toyo straw hat, in a most divine shade which they choose to call "beet root," has in the middle of the front a huge carnation of the same shade and a bunch of blue flowers, a grand combination. Another lovely hat for summer, to wear with chiffons and organdie, consists of a broad brim horsehair braid woven in a lacy design and trimmed with two bands of velvet ribbon. This would look charming on either blond or brunette.

Ruffles adorn summer gloves. They have two rows of pleated organdie ruffle on the cuffs and are gay with a little print of old fashioned roses. The pink and green are repeated in dots on the stitching on the back of gloves. We find our sport clothes o dressier en emble realizing that metal and shirring is really washable. Their colors are white, navy and brown. Colored chamoise gloves are the siren song for your tweed suit.

SONS --- VALLEJO'S NATIVES --- DAUGHTERS

NEXT SPRING, MARCH 6, 1936, TO BE exact, Vallejo Parlor No. 77, Native Sons of the Golden West, will celebrate an important milestone in its crowded history. It will be fifty years old. In 1935, with a forty-nine-year-old record of intense activity, the Parlor has achieved, for the second time, the honor of entertaining delegates to a Grand Parlor assemblage, the Fifty-eighth. It is an honor which is receiving keenest attention of members of the Parlor and, in addition, is being watched with interest by the citizens of Vallejo who have come to regard Native Sons gatherings as signals for civic excitement and a quick succession of colorful events.

The first meeting of the Grand Parlor in Vallejo was in April 1904, thirty-one years ago. Handsome lithographs on white kid, lettered and showing a grizzly bear on a promontory viewing a passing battleship, formed badges for the occasion, a four-day session. An array of activities formed the background for the actual transaction of fraternal business in San Pablo Hall. Eight of the ten committeemen who arranged Vallejo's entertainment at that time are still members of the Parlor and will take an active part in the 1935 Grand Parlor affairs: S. J. McKnight, T. J. O'Hara, J. A. Browne, G. G. Halliday, Joseph Clavo, H. T. Stevens, George Weniger and F. H. Lee.

The City of Vallejo, through the 1904 Grand Parlor, became acutely conscious of the importance, the goodfellowship and the progressive attitude of the Native Sons as a state-wide organization. It was the first time that the city got in the habit of literally turning itself over completely to Native Sons and their affairs. After that, it became, periodically, a habit.

Five years after the first Grand Parlor in this city, Vallejo Parlor was requested to take over full supervision of the observance of Independence Day. The year was 1909, and the occasion was to be the greatest Fourth of July celebration the city had known to date. If any doubt of the complete fulfillment of that requirement remains in any person's mind, reference should be made to the accounts of that great event in the press of the day.

While scores of details were being pressed to completion by the committee in charge, the interest of the public was being aroused by press notices, and by an impressive proclamation composed by Joseph Clavo: "The celebration of the 133rd anniversary of American Independence in the City of Vallejo, having been undertaken in your behalf by an energetic and patriotic committee, it is incumbent upon every resident to do his or her full share to make the day the most notable in the history of the community." Clavo added, "Invite your friends from abroad to join you in the finest and most glorious celebration ever seen here. Having been honored with the appointment as Grand Marshal, I call upon the good people of Vallejo to render me all possible aid in arranging a celebration fitting such a splendid community as ours." The splendid community began rendering aid immediately.

Publicity was rampant in the newspapers to such an extent that even advertisers twisted their messages to "tie in" with the momentous event, although very few went to the extremes of a drug company, which stated in an advertisement entitled "A Big Explosion," that "The greatest explosion yet, so says the Native Sons, will be here when July 4 comes. Bugville says different. Oriental flea powder was awful." One inspired contributor to the old "Vallejo Chronicle" who called himself "Libertas" wrote: "Vallejo never saw the like before. The preparations are complete. It provides for nerve-racking noises, muscle-wearying processions, thirst-producing programs, stirring music, brilliant illuminations, waving colors, a splendid pageant, thrilling oratorical periods and the blessing of the church, to say nothing of red fire sky rockets, home-made munching and the fun-making hugger-muggers at night."

Displayed prominently in the society notices of the July 2 issue of the "Chronicle" was the statement that George Weniger and family had curtailed their trip to Seattle and were returning home, since Weniger had never missed a Fourth of July celebration in Vallejo. Today, twenty-six years later, he is still reveling in Native Sons affairs. Thanks to the tact of Thomas J. O'Hara, a civic embarrassment was averted. Through his efforts and those of his running mate, W. J. "Billy" Tormey, the celebrated Chinese dragon had been brought from San Francisco and was to be carried through Vallejo streets. A visiting bandsman, however, in the excitement struck the dragon leader in the eye, severely injuring him. The indignation of the Chinese visitors was aroused. They packed their equipment, walked down the street, and were prepared to leave on the boat for the lower bay. It took all the O'Hara-Tormey finesse to avert the catastrophe. They remained, and were a feature of the night parade.

The great success of the affair was summed up in one of the columns of commendation run in the Vallejo press: "When the members from Vallejo Parlor No. 77 N.S.G.W. undertook to manage the July Fourth celebration they predicted it would be the best seen in the city, and they certainly lived up to their prophecy."

It took three days to celebrate, properly, the 1914 Admission Day celebration in Vallejo, another outstanding civic holiday promoted in the grand manner by Vallejo Parlor No. 77. It occupied September 7, 8 and 9 of that year, and remains an outstanding event to this day. By applying progressive business tactics, the large sum of $10,000 was raised to finance the festivities. And all but $17.35 was spent on the display, that sum remaining in the Parlor's treasury after all bills were paid.

It is difficult to do justice in a brief article to the astonishing feats of the Parlor on that occasion. Forty thousand visitors swarmed into the city, joining its population of 14,000 to see what would happen. Plenty did! In a magnetic carnival spirit, a gigantic parade started on the instant of its scheduled time, 10:30 a.m., and wound up shortly after 1:30 p.m.; nothing quite like it has been seen before or since. Before and after the parade, there was a maze of activities which made rest unthinkable. They even had the original Liberty Bell on display.

Considering the fact that every Native Sons Parlor attending brought along a band or drum corps, and that scores of Parlors were in attendance, the amount of music available alone made one tremendous item of interest. Adolph Coronado brought from Harbin Springs a genuine grizzly bear, to the delight of all. Spectacular fireworks on the final night formed an appropriate end to three days of fantasia.

It took days for the excitement of the great events of the 7th, 8th and 9th of September 1914 to subside. So far as the press was concerned, not enough honor could be paid Vallejo Parlor for its masterful undertaking. It was only a repetition of comment and understatement, when one editor commented: "The Native Sons of the Golden West have honored the sixty-fourth anniversary of the admission of California to the Union, and the celebration has gone down into history as one of the most notable ever held under the auspices of this State's distinctive order." There were long articles on the hard work of Chairman and Grand Marshal Joseph Clavo, Vice-chairman W. J. Tormey and Secretary T. J. O'Hara. Congratulations were also extended the personnel of the general committee: Albert Casper, G. E. Bangle, H. F. Stahl, Leo I. Cavanagh, George W. Williams, G. G. Halliday, S. J. McKnight, George Weniger, Werner Hallin, W. D. Pennycook, R. W. Walker, C. L. Wisecarver, Miss Helena Lundberg, Mrs. Verna Berry and Mrs. Winnie Cassady, the three latter having represented Vallejo Parlor No. 195 of Native Daughters.

In the above sketch, only the highlights of the interesting history of Vallejo Parlor No. 77 have been touched upon. The record on many other occasions bristles with social, fraternal and civic accomplishments. And May of this year, it is fully expected, will add another achievement.

Nine charter members of the Parlor survive today: August A. Bergwall, Frank A. Davis, Charles H. Debolt, Robert E. Doyel, Alexander Guffy, Grant G. Halliday, George F. Harris, Henry F. Stahl and Harry T. Stevens. They are true judges of the role the Parlor has played in the life of Vallejo and in the history of the Grand Parlor. Several of the charter members were serving in official capacities during the first year of Parlor affairs, in 1886. The full roster of that era reads: Charles Weniger, junior past president; William J. Tobin, president; Edward L. Reinquin, first vice-president; William F. Gedge, second vice-president; William F. Booth, third vice-president; Victor V. Harrier, financial secretary; Grant G. Halliday, recording secretary; Frank A. Davis, treasurer; Henry B. Deming, marshal; A. L. Lancaster, August A. Bergwall and Frank S. Houseman, trustees; Harry T. Stevens, inside sentinel; C. H. Kitto, outside sentinel.

Only Grant G. Halliday, charter member, still serves in an official capacity. The 1935 officers of Vallejo Parlor are: John J. Combs, junio

FIFTY-EIGHTH N.S.G.W. GRAND PARLOR

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

THE FIFTY-EIGHTH GRAND PARLOR of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West will convene at Vallejo, Solano County, Monday, May 20. Sessions will be held in Red Men Hall, Monday, Tuesday and Thursday. Grand President Chas. A. Koenig (Golden Gate Parlor No. 29) will preside throughout the deliberations and, at their conclusion, will automatically become the Junior Past Grand President. The Twenty-seventh (1904) Grand Parlor also met in Vallejo, with the then Grand President, Hubert R. McNoble (Stockton Parlor No. 7) presiding.

The reports of the Grand Parlor officers and committees to the Fifty-eighth Session will deal with the Order's activities during 1934. And those reports will, it is believed, be of a most optimistic nature. The plan of Grand President Koenig to organize, by districts, the district deputies has borne good results.

The report of Grand Secretary John T. Regan will detail the condition of the Subordinate Parlors as of December 31, 1934. Those of 450 or more members, with their assets-figures, include:

Parlors.	Members.	Assets.
Ramona No. 109	810	$40,155.92
South San Francisco No. 157	783	50,574.56
Castro No. 232	748	11,160.01
Arrowhead No. 110	537	25,350.23
Stockton No. 7	513	39,927.50
Stanford No. 76	504	25,264.89
Piedmont No. 120	456	22,262.02

Others, with assets of $20,000 or more, together with their membership-figures, are:

Parlors.	Members.	Assets.
San Jose No. 22	280	$69,303.98
Sacramento No. 3	309	43,378.62
Pacific No. 10	364	39,832.43
Amador No. 17	141	34,798.59
Santa Lucia No. 97	47	31,753.72
Napa No. 62	261	31,267.47
Redwood No. 66	162	29,959.26
Observatory No. 177	180	29,754.23
Placerville No. 9	228	29,061.02
California No. 1	309	22,768.37
Sunset No. 26	273	22,553.17
Eden No. 113	178	22,016.63
Presidio No. 194	322	20,876.14
Quartz No. 58	178	20,855.54
Excelsior No. 31	167	20,604.03

From these figures, it will be noted that Ramona Parlor No. 109 (Los Angeles) continues its lead as the largest, numerically, in the Order, and that San Jose Parlor No. 22 (San Jose) remains the wealthiest, financially. Santa Lucia Parlor No. 97 (Salinas) has the greatest per-capita wealth.

At the close of 1934, the Subordinate Parlors had assets totaling $1,235,103.57, including $308,328.68 cash on hand. Their receipts for 1934 totaled $265,318.90, and their disbursements $263,884.46. They paid benefits totaling $86,986.90 to 1,250 members.

The Grand Parlor Transportation and Mileage Committee has made arrangements with the railroads for round-trip fares from all points to Vallejo under the identification certificate plan. The rate from any point will be 85 percent of the one-way fare.

GRAND PARLOR OFFICES CANDIDATES.

The Grizzly Bear has sought information from all Subordinate Parlors and numerous individuals as to candidates for Grand Parlor offices. The lineup which follows is compiled, therefore, from authentic information received direct from reliable sources. There are rumors of other candidates, but the "rumored ones" are not listed here:

JAPANIZING THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS

"MARCH 27, 1935, A PETITION WAS presented to the Hawaiian Legislature by W. K. Lyhan on behalf of the Sino-Korean Peoples League, asking for investigation of charges as to Japanese propaganda activities in Hawaii, including the introduction into the public schools of text books covering Japan and her place in the sun, prepared under Japanese direction. The petition was referred to the Committee on Education where, according to news reports sent to the mainland, it will probably be pigeonholed. December 11, 1934, the same organization filed a protest against use of such school text books with the Commissioners of Public Instruction of the Territory, but it received no publicity.

"Lyhan states that demand has been made upon him by certain interests concerned in the text book plan and by others (fearful lest agitation of the subject should prejudice Hawaii's chance for statehood) for withdrawal as an undesirable alien if he continues his activities in connection therewith. He has refused to comply with these demands, declaring that the charges are substantiated by documentary proof, that citizens of Hawaii and of the mainland as well are concerned with learning whether such charges be true or false, and that he is prepared to defend his action and his status as a legal resident of Hawaii.

"The following outline of the case is gathered from statements, not yet contradicted, which appeared in the petition to the Legislature; in the protest to the Commissioners of Education, covering report of a meeting of certain departmental heads of Japan, held November 21, 1934; in an item published December 4, 1934, in the Japan Times and Mail, English language voice of Japan's Foreign Office; in an official report of the Superintendent of Public Instruction of Hawaii, Oren E. Long, February 20, 1935, and in comment thereon by Lyhan in a letter of March 5, 1935.

"The Department of Cultural Relations, Japan's instrument for foreign propaganda, after careful survey and encouragement received from educational and church authorities in the United States, decided that 'if proper propaganda is systematically carried out in the schools American children will become strong friends of Japan.' Arrangements were made for use of such text books in the Hawaiian public schools, and the initial volume is now ready for printing in Honolulu. The material therefor was gathered in Japan under the direction of Okada, head of the Bureau of Cultural Relations, formerly Consul General at Honolulu, and with assistance from Bruno Lasker of the Institute of Pacific Relations. The book was compiled at Honolulu by Dr. Nisamichi Royama of the Imperial University at Tokyo (who had three months leave for the purpose), assisted by Miss Helen Gay Pratt 'of the Institute of Pacific Relations and the Department of Public Instruction.'

"It is charged that the plan also provides specifically for distribution in the Japanese language schools of Hawaii of 'educational materials concerning the vital national defense policy of Japan.' Those language schools are attended by over 50,000 young Japanese, nearly all of them American citizens. The protest declares that use of such propaganda in the schools will tend to further Japanization of Hawaii and 'will be disastrous to Americanization of American citizens of Japanese descent'."

(The above came to The Grizzly Bear from the California Joint Immigration Committee with which the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West is identified. The plan to thoroughly japanize the Hawaii public schools is also to be carried out by Japan in California and other Western states. A "growl" in The Grizzly Bear last month telling of this scheme of Japan and its pro-Jap agencies and agents in the United States concluded with:

What do you think of this move? Are we going to sit idly by and permit the yellow-Jap and the japanized-Whites to carry propaganda for the supremacy of Japan into our public schools? Not only should it be prevented, but every Jap-language school in California should by legislation, be closed and kept closed.—Editor.)

"THE POLITICAL SNAILS."

"The continued political agitation to confiscate capital under the guise of redistribution of wealth and income, to increase taxes to the breaking point, . . . is bearing fruit—it is discouraging, if not actually preventing, normal business recovery. . . . Politics produces no wealth. Instead, it absorbs the stored saving of centuries, just as a snail absorbs the leaf of the plant it finally destroys."—Amador Ledger Record.

GRIZZLY GROWLS

NOTE—Expressions of opinion in these "Growls" are unless indicated otherwise, those of the Managing Editor.
CLARENCE M. HUNT.

THE COMEDY, "THE CALIFORNIA Legislature in Inaction," financed by the taxpayers of the state, continues to hold forth at Sacramento. Each legislator introduces many bills, most of them not worth, to the people generally, the cost of the paper upon which printed and each lobbyist, too, plays his part.

The Legislature and the State Administration are united in at least one purpose—to increase the tax-burden. No attempt is being made to find ways and means of lessening that burden, by reducing the excessive cost of government. The financially hard-pressed California taxpayer, therefore, will receive no relief from either the Legislature or the Administration. Neither realizes, apparently, that the Commonwealth is being wrecked by taxation!

So, it appears, but two courses are open to those taxpayers who desire that California's wellbeing be assured and that their holdings be saved from confiscation by politicians: throw out, via the recall, the promoters and the advocates of increased taxes, or force the State into bankruptcy, via a united tax strike. The sooner the vast majority outside the political racketeering ring take action to rout the minority inside that ring and force a material reduction in the tax-load, the better for California!

"Until 'The stars are old, and the sun grows cold, and the leaves of the judgment book unfold' no one will ever know the full measure of service the mothers of earth have constantly rendered their children."

The oversigned, for The Grizzly Bear, heartily thanks the Natives of Vallejo, Solano County, for the splendid co-operation readily given in the preparation of this issue of the magazine. Particularly, to William J. Tormey, secretary of the general committee, and to Nina Ritch, who prepared the most interesting stories on the City of Vallejo, the Mare Island Navy Yard, and Vallejo Parlor No. 77 N.S.G.W.

Denouncing, in the United States Senate, the demand of the Council of the League of Nations that Germany comply with the Versailles treaty, which the member-nations of the League have violated by arming to the hilt, the same nations, incidentally, which refuse to pay their just financial obligations to the United States,—Senator William E. Borah of Idaho declared:

"Nothing in the history of this institution [League of Nations] better illustrates that it is not an independent body for peace, but a spineless tool in the hands of a few nations to do what those nations elect. This institution should no longer pretend to be an independent body seeking by independent methods to advance the cause of peace." Senator Borah proposes to shut off private loans to foreign countries, and that should be done.

"A Menace to California," heads a Los Angeles Times editorial lamenting the oncoming of newcomers—more than 5,000 a week—requiring charitable assistance. "Unless Californians rise up in united defense of their State," cautions the inconsistent Times, "the State will be lost." And the Times will be one of the main contributors to the losing! It steadfastly opposes those Californians who would keep Japs, Mexis and other ineligible-to-citizenship aliens out of this state, and is one of the foremost advocates of pouring millions of tax funds into the pockets of tourist-promotion agencies to bring more newcomers.

The United States News is authority for the startling statement that Federal Government expenditures for three years 1934-1936 will almost equal the total expenditures of the Government for one hundred and twenty-four previous years 1789-1913. Says the News:

"From the first term of George Washington to the first term of Woodrow Wilson— 124 years —the United States Government spent $24,521,-745,000. During that time were fought four wars. From the first budget of President Franklin Roosevelt to his latest budget—covering three years—the United States Government outlines spending of $24,206,533,000. . . .

"During the first 124 years of the nation's existence, the average annual cost of the central government was just $195,085,000, or about $5.26 for each person. During the next twenty years, from 1914 to 1933, including the World War years, this average annual cost rose to $4,767,160,000, or $42.16 per capita. Now, through the fiscal years 1934, 1935 and 1936, the average annual cost of the Federal Government has risen to $8,068,800,000, or $64.55 for each person in the country."

At a civic conference in Los Angeles attended by some 600 clubwomen, Dr. William H. Munro declared: "If individuals conducted their affairs with as little real planning as is shown in the field of public expenditures, the bankruptcy courts would be busy twenty-four hours a day."

Dr. Milton F. Metfessel said: "With pride suspended or gone because of acceptance of charity, whether dole or artificial work, there comes to American citizens the degrading but comfortable idea that the world owes them a living. This idea is catching and the epidemic is spreading."

The New York State Chamber of Commerce has adopted a resolution claiming that "the statute for the deportation of criminal aliens has been deliberately violated," and asking that officers of the Federal Labor Department derelict in enforcement of the law be removed from office or impeached. The carrying out of this resolution would ease to a considerable extent the unhealthy conditions in this country.

"There is no tendency whatsoever toward communism in the New Deal program," according to Chairman Donald Richberg of the National Industrial Recovery Board. "Nor is there any purpose to transform an individualistic, competitive system into a socialistic co-operation. There is the definite aim by co-operative means to eliminate the unfair methods and the intolerable results of an undisciplined competitive system."

Every citizen should be interested in taxes, for public spending will, unless closely scrutinized, and checked when it becomes oppressive, wreck any government. From 1910 to 1932, taxes collected in California by the state, cities and counties mounted by millions annually. The Livingston Chronicle presents a table showing how taxes have consistently been increased.

In 1910, the total collected was $56,959,331, or $23.96 percapita. In 1921, the total jumped up to $191,315,983, or $51.61 percapita. In 1931, the peak year, the total ascended to $451,-949,181, or $77.83 percapita. For the years 1932, 1933 and 1934 the collections decreased, simply because the taxpayer was unable to meet his obligation, not because officials ceased or curbed the spending orgy and lowered the levy.

The tax-record is available to State Government officials, and they must know—although apparently not concerned about—the financial plight of a great majority of the taxpayers. They are making no effort to reduce the cost of government and lower taxes, but plan to levy additional taxes. How long will the complete tax-wrecking of California be delayed? It is certain to come, unless the political racketeers be dethroned.

The Federal Congress has given President Franklin D. Roosevelt the $4,880,000,000 relief funds he asked for to provide 3,500,000 with work. The program provides, among other undertakings, for reforestation, soil erosion prevention, flood control, rural resettlement and reclamation dams which will help in flood control, water conservation and rural electrification, clearing river channels and improving harbors, elimination of grade crossings, housing to replace old tenements.

The Marine Federation of San Pedro proposes to exclude Asiatic from American ships in the Pacific service. May the same crown its efforts! There are plenty of American born sailors to take their places.

California has "no need for issue in education," said State Superintendent of Public Instruction Vierling Kersey, addressing a San Francisco conference of state secondary school. That's true and, being true, the authorities should force all foreign isms, also their pronagators, out of the schools. This nation needs only unadulterated Americanism in the schools and out.

Dr. Robert A. Millikan of California Institute of Technology told a Lincoln, Nebraska, audience: "Only the Constitution, the Supreme Court, and education which will teach the great majority of our people the method of approach can save us from the fate predicted by Lord MacCauley in 1848—loss of all our freedom or destruction of our civilization."

The Federal House of Representatives passed a bill heralded as taxing away all excessive war earnings. It contains this provision: "that upon the declaration of war there shall be imposed a tax of 100 per cent on all excess war profits that may be earned during said period of war . . ." The joker that will protect the big boys is "excess war profits that may be earned." They'll see that there are none such. They're experts at covering up, and becoming millionaires on a dollar a year.

"When we are having trouble taking care of our own why should we have ANY aliens unlawfully in this country?", queries the San Francisco Chronicle. Ask the Federal Churches of Christ in America, or some other alien-propaganda agency.

"Throw them out!", continues the Chronicle, and that's what should be done, pronto. "Let them do their agitating at home. Let Americans have the jobs these intruders hold and that they have no right to hold here. Let Americans have the business the interlopers conduct here, which they have no right to have or to conduct."

In an addres at Murphy, North Carolina, Governor Talmadge of Georgia severely criticized the national administration at Washington, saying: "They have taught us to plow up cotton, burn wheat and kill sows and little pigs. Importations of cotton goods from Japan have increased more than 2,000 percent. We import corn and oats from South America. . . . Why, we have even imported cottonseed meal from China.

"Real recovery and prosperity will come from private industry, from honest people at work paying taxes and not looking to the government for anything but a square deal. . . . We people in the South know you can't borrow yourself out of debt, make water run up hill and drink yourself sober. But let the picnic run on, let the follies up there [Washington] go on. We are coming out of this despair. We have to get back to fundamentals, get back to the country church and brick school houses."

Thousands of protests have been filed, probably by japanized Whites, with the Federal Navy Department against approaching fleet maneuvers in the Pacific. The protests and the protesters should be ignored.

The State Equalization Board is to tax gambling establishments. Horrors! That decision is a reflection on the veracity, also the ability, of enforcement officials who claim the law is rigidly enforced. There should be better, and more consistent, co-operation between taxing and law-enforcing public officials.

Anyway, gambling always has and always will be carried on. The great harm of it comes from secret, undercover operation. If people who can afford to do so want to "buck" the other fellow's game, they should be permitted to do so, openly and aboveboard. Gambling should be legalized, taxed the same as any other business and put under strict aboveboard regulation.

in one of his "Private Thinks," says: "A great many patriotic and law-abiding citizens are beginning to believe the only remedy lies in recourse to lynch law. The statutes have been tried, the courts have been tested, the officers have been relied upon, and the worst of crimes have multiplied. And while murder stalks abroad, the murderers evade the penitentiaries.

"Yours Truly may not live to see it, but he believes the day is not far distant when every community will have its vigilance committee; when—for a time at least—the duties of officers and courts will be dispensed with, while the weapons of Justice will be stout oak trees and good hempen ropes. Many readers—and especially the good women—will hold up their hands in holy horror at that. But they should consider if a thorough lynch system wherein the accused are given the fairest of fair trials—as they were in the Vigilante days in San Francisco—could be e-half as bad, as much of a travesty upon Justice as is the present condition."

ANY INDUSTRY THAT CANNOT LIVE WITHOUT ALIEN LABOR SHOULD DIE.

Addressing the immigration section of the Commonwealth Club of California, San Francisco, V. S. McClatchy, executive secretary of the California Joint Immigration Committee, said: "Any industry which claims it cannot exist without cheap, unassimilable alien labor should die, rather than continue to bring into our national life elements permanently detrimental. While errors of omission and commission have marked America's immigration policies in the past, now is the time to formulate definite plans for the future.

"Our laws and policies of administration should be dedicated wholly from the standpoint of present and future national interest, to which everything else should be subordinated. A homogeneous population, insofar as possible, is absolutely necessary. Towards this goal we should now set ourselves. We should work toward national unity, rather than continue to foster racial groups."

The California Medical Association will have its annual convention in Yosemite Valley, May 12-16.

CALIFORNIA FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

MAY 1885 WAS AN IDEAL PICNIC month in California, and every fraternal, church, military and social organization had its day in the woods. At a Modesto, Stanislaus County, school outing J. J. Porter bought $50 worth of peanuts and gave the children a treat. During the month there was but one cloudy day in the valleys.

A thunderstorm prevailed May 11 in northern California. In Siskiyou County, Thomas Wines, a sheepherder, was struck by a lightning bolt and killed. Near Princeton, Colusa County, a six-mule team hauling grain took refuge beneath an oak tree. Lightning killed the mules, and severely injured the two men in charge.

Mrs. Margaret E. Crocker presented to the City of Sacramento the Crocker Art Gallery. The gift, including real estate and art treasures, had an estimated value of over a million dollars. In appreciation for her generosity, the Capital City declared May 6 a holiday, and the citizens joined unanimously in feting Mrs. Crocker at a floral festival that was the grandest event of the kind ever held in California. Three thousand schoolchildren marched in a parade, and the Society of California Pioneers and the local Native Sons Parlors were conspicuous participants in the ovation.

Decoration Day, May 30, was observed in a patriotic manner throughout the state. In nearly all the cities and towns the G.A.R. managed the celebrations.

General Phil. Sheridan of Civil War fame visited the state, and while riding through the streets of Los Angeles City, May 11, the team ran away and upset the carriage. He received more wounds in that accident than during the war.

The baseball furore now prevailing was the cause of the formation of the California Baseball League, composed of clubs in San Jose, San Francisco, Oakland, Sacramento, Marysville and Stockton. The opening games were played May 24.

James Hall, mining near Volcano, Amador County, May 2 found a gold nugget weighing two pounds and six ounces, worth $540. His gravel claim was yielding $1,500 a month.

A three-day fireman's tournament began at San Jose, Santa Clara County, May 11, and the city was filled with visitors. Fifty-five fire companies from adjacent communities contested, and a company from Santa Cruz was awarded first prize.

May 8, San Andreas, Calaveras County, had a visit from a pack of coyotes. They raided the chickenhouses, whipped all the town dogs and cleaned the butchered carcasses of meat hanging in slaughterhouses.

The powder storehouse of Marysville, Yuba County, blew up May 28. It contained four tons of gunpowder, and the city was shaken as if by an earthquake. The county hospital and several other buildings were wrecked, and more than a thousand panes of glass were broken.

The bowie knife of Colonel William S. Bodie, after whom Bodie, Mono County, was named, was presented to the California Museum Association by President A. F. Bryant of the Mono County Pioneer Society. The knife, fifteen inches long, was found on the body of Bodie when he was frozen to death in November 1859 near his cabin, a few miles from where the town was located.

The grasshopper pest was on the increase. Sections of the San Joaquin Valley, as well as Sacramento and El Dorado Counties, Lincoln in Placer County and Vina in Tehama County were being stripped of green verdure. Railroad trains were delayed because the insects were crushed by locomotives into a slimy, slippery mass upon the rails and the wheels would not turn. Vineyards were the especial delight of the pests and nothing green remained upon vines after their invasion.

The hop market was in a demoralized condition. Eleven cents a pound was being offered for the best.

"Lucky" Baldwin announced his intention to subdivide and sell 55,000 acres of his Santa Anita, Los Angeles County, rancho.

Peaches arrived May 1 on the San Francisco market and sold for $1.50 a pound. Cherries that came in on the 3rd sold at 50c a pound. A shipment of cherries to New York City sold there at $1 a pound.

The run of salmon up the Sacramento River during the spring was nil, and many of the expectant fishermen went broke. Three canneries, instead of the usual seventeen, were operating, and to date but 2,000 cases of the fish had been canned, compared to 60,000 cases at the same time in 1884.

Dr. Miller of Rattlesnake Bar, Placer County, had a cherry tree, planted in the early '50s, now 3 feet in diameter at the base, 70 feet high and a 35-foot spread of limbs. This month he sold $700 worth of cherries from the tree.

Fishing in Lake Independence, W. H. Selby caught 196 trout May 7.

May 10, a 400-pound brown bear was killed on the top of Mount Tamalpais, Marin County.

A telephone line from San Francisco to Stockton, San Joaquin County, was completed and, being the first, was given an ovation.

General H. M. Noglee of San Jose, Santa Clara County, called a fellowcitizen a liar. Sued for libel, he was assessed $3,000 for making the assertion.

The Yuba County Board of Supervisors by resolution called on the governor to furnish a militia detachment to suppress hydraulic mining now being done, it was charged, by mine owners who would not obey court injunctions. The resolution caused a furore in the mining counties.

Near Centerville, Butte County, a piece of petrified wood was found 400 feet below the surface of a mine.

Silver Star Parlor No. 63 N.S.G.W. was instituted May 22 at Lincoln, Placer County, by Grand President Fred H. Greely. Charles Elder was the first president, and J. Pelster the first secretary.

Dr. George W. Dutton who, since his arrival in 1849, had been a leading Marin County physician, died May 10 at Tomales.

Jennie Campbell, an applewoman character of San Francisco, died there May 10. She belonged to the noble Argyle family of Scotland and arrived in San Francisco in the '50s with a husband and wealth. Losing both, she began selling apples when reduced to penury.

J. J. Potter, clerk of Tuolumne County for many years, died May 19 at Sonora.

Lewis Aldrich, a judge in Sacramento during the '50s, died May 19 at San Francisco.

AMERICA'S EXPOSITION

(FRED W. FOX.)

DOWN IN SAN DIEGO, WHERE THE history of California had its beginning, they are building a $20,000,000 exposition which will present a vivid picture of this colorful empire. Officially, it will be known as the California Pa-ic International Exposition. Actually, it will "America's Exposition." And where better tell the story of mankind's great progressive ides than in San Diego, where the story arted?

It was in 1542 that the two high-sterned gal-ons captained by Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo shed into the waters of San Diego Bay, and at intrepid Portuguese sailor, in the uniform Spain, claimed these shores for Castille and agon. Many years later a gray straggler came from Mexico. Weary and footsore, this adly old man stood on an elevation and gazed eanward. "Truly," said he, "this is a land of ious aspect."

He was Fra Junipero Serra, and he served a g greater than Spain's—he served God. This and old man, a Franciscan monk, started to rk immediately. His brother monks joined n, and the Indians came to help. In San ego the holy men built the first of a chain of ssions, each a day's journey apart, stretching m San Diego in the south to Sonoma in the rth. Also, contributing to the glorious his-y of San Diego particularly, and to California nerally, were such illustrious names as Don bastian Viscaino, Galvez, Portola, Rivera and ronado. In 1829 the first American Flag was sed over San Diego. It was made from men's rts and red woolen underwear.

It is to commemorate this great historical geant that San Diego is building its exposi-n. Industry, commerce, art and science have ned to make the production. The old, the w, and a glimpse into the future will be dra-tically presented. When the turnstiles begin king May 29 there will be more than 100 ildings containing hundreds of thousands of eresting exhibits, both for display and sale. One of the most beautiful spots in the entire ounds is the Spanish village, the largest of its d ever built for an exposition. It covers 90,-0 square feet of space and contains numerous examples of the picturesque and colorful architecture of Old Spain.

Historically, California will be well represented at this World's Fair, particularly in the thousands of articles in the Palace of Science. Here will be found the ancient beadwork, stone and obsidian weapons and domestic utensils of the Indians. One of the finest collections of Indian pottery in the world forms a large portion of the exhibits in this palace. Southwestern artists will be featured in the Palace of Fine Arts, which contains one of the most valuable art collections in the nation.

The various palaces include those of Better Housing, Foods and Beverages, Natural History, Education, Women's, House of Charm, House of Hospitality and numerous others. One of the most interesting places on the grounds will be the House of Pacific Relations, where representatives of foreign nations will gather. This is a series of small hacienda-type cottages surrounding a beautiful glade and central pool. The state will be represented in the California Building, a huge structure which will be filled with exhibits from every county, together with a general state display.

More than twenty departments of the United States Government will be housed in the Federal Building, a beautiful structure of Mayan type of architecture. Here the Postoffice Department will vividly portray, by use of miniature figures, the marvelous speed developed by the mails since the days of the Pony Express and the old Butterfield stagecoaches to the present day of flashing airplanes. The United States Mint is planning an exhibit to show how money is manufactured. The Department of Agriculture, Department of Commerce and Federal Housing Administration will have interesting exhibits.

An exact reproduction of an oldtime Western mining camp, to be known as "Gold Gulch," will be located in one of the beautiful canyons in the park. Here will be the red-shirted miners, the bold, bad men of the early days, and the equally bold, if not so bad, dancehall girls. There will be a "Last Chance" saloon, an iron-barred bank nestling close to the sheriff's office, the usual chinese laundry and restaurant, a general store and dozens of miners' shacks. Visitors to Gold Gulch can go there only by stagecoach or aboard little burros.

Architects have performed miracles in designing buildings for the California Pacific International Exposition. Buildings which remained in Balboa Park after the Panama California Exposition of 1915-16 are of Spanish Colonial and Spanish Renaissance type, beautifully mellowed during the past twenty years. To these have been added structures taken from the two oldest and most typically American schools of architecture—the Mayan and the Indian Pueblo. Relieving the simplicity of the broad, flat surfaces of this type of architecture, the designers have utilized living, blooming flowers for ornamentation. This was done by plantings in concealed boxes along the parapets of the buildings, thus allowing the trailing vines and flowers to sweep downward over the buildings' sides in hanging-garden effect. California fruit trees, in full bloom, will be used in the landscaping fronting the buildings.

Near the House of Hospitality, where distinguished visitors to the exposition will be entertained, landscapers have reproduced the beautiful three-level gardens which front the Casa del Rey Moro (house of the Moorish king) in Ronda, Spain. This replica has been faithfully copied, even to the old well-head and the grotto fountain. Another famous garden, or rather a section of it, has been copied. This is a portion of the gardens of the Alcazar in Seville, Spain. A three-acre tract has been developed into the California Gardens, where every known California flora will be included. One of the features of this is a huge rock garden, with an oriental theme, which has already required more than 50,000 tons of lichen-covered rock.

America's Exposition will present a beautiful and educational picture to the world, and it is particularly fitting that San Diego, being the oldest city in California, should be the first to 'rouse from the siesta of depression and point the way to a new era of prosperity in the West.

The "Ramona Pageant" will have its twelfth annual presentation May 4, 5, 11 and 12 near Hemet, Riverside County.

Ventura City will feature May 24-26 its third annual Ventura County days of the Golden West celebration.
